FRIDAY, Nov. 20, 1857. As it became known in the course of Friday morning that sentence would be p. ssed in the afternoon on the younger Shvin for the dreadful murders at Mispeck, the Court House shortly before two o'clock be-Parker appeared on the Bench, the body of the Court was crowied. The prisoner having been ordered to be placed at the bar, was immediately brought in by the officers. He came in with his usual alacrity, and imofficers. Corner of the Dock. He looked as usual neither sad, nor grave, nor sullen. Being told to stand up, he stood for an instant and then sat down again, having been recustomed so to answer his name. Being told, however, that he must stand up while sentence was being passed on him; he stood boldly up looking at the Judge, and crossed his arms as well as his handcuffs or chains would let him. The Clerk of the Court then asked the prisoner in the usual way what he had to say why sentence of death should not be passed on him? The prisoner made no reply. Proclamation having been made ordering all persons under pain of having been made ordering all persons under pain of having been made ordering all persons under pain of imprisonment to keep silence while sentence of death was passed on the prisoner.

A more barbarous murder never had been perpetrated, and it is difficult to find in the prisoner's conduct on the oceasion, any pulliating circumstances. He was evidently not void of understanding, for he had invented several stories to relieve him self from the burthen of his punishment, and one o these alleged that the prisoner Breen had struck the fatal blows. His conduct during the committal of the dreds showed no sign of remorse. If he were not aware of the intention to commit murder when he left the house, he was certainly aware of it when Breen later dates than the "Atlantic." was sent for McKenzie, and when he (the prisoner) stood in the dark room with his father, who held be-
