Poetry.

The Infidel and his Daughter.

[Suggested by reading a newspaper paragraph describing the scene between the brave old Ethan Allen and his daughter, on the eve of her death, when she asked the stern infidel in whose faith he would have her to die—his or her mother's?]

The dreams of death are coming fast,
My father, o'er my brow;
The past with all its scenes has fled,
And I must turn me now
To that dim future which is vain
My restless eyes descry;
Tell me, my father, in this hour,
In whose stern faith to die.

In thine? I've watched the scornful smile,
And heard thy withering tone,
Whene'er the Christian's humble hope
Was placed above thine own:
I'll breast thee speak of coming death
Without a shade of gloom,
And laugh at all the childish fears
That cluster round the tomb.

"Or is it in my mother's faith?
How fondly do I turn
Through many a weary year long past
That calm and saintly face?
How often do I call to mind,
Now she is 'neath the sod,
The place, the hour, in which she drew
My early thoughts to God:

"Twas then she took this sacred book,
And from its heaving pure
Read how its truths support the soul
In youth and failing age;
And bade me in its precepts live,
And by its precepts die,
That I might share a home of love
In worlds beyond the sky.

My father, shall I look above,
Amidst that gathering gloom,
To Him whose promises of love
Extend beyond the tomb?
Or leave the living who put trust
This oft-proved path of mine?
And renounce eternal rest?
Or oh, my sire, in this—

The frown upon that warrior brow
Passed like a cloud away,
And tears coursed down the rugged cheek
That sword, not all that day,
"Not, not in mine," with choking voice
The skeptic made reply—
"But in thy mother's holy faith,
My daughter, may'st thou die."

—Episcopal Recorder.

The Pious Seaman and the Ungodly Officer.

Once, not long ago, a fine large ship, with a great many people on board, was returning to England from India. Amongst the passengers was a fine young officer, returning home, after he had been a long time away. He was very impatient to see his friends once more; to behold the green fields, to go back to the dear old country-house where he and his sisters were born, and where they passed their happy childhood. But, more than all, he longed to see his dear father, and the churchyard where his mother was buried. His father's hair must be white now; it had been black and glossy when the young officer left England; and his sisters must be grown tall women, though he had left them little girls.

When the ship was still some way from England, on the wide sea, the air grew sultry, the sun shone brightly, the wind ceased to blow, the large sails hung down, and the ship did not appear to get any nearer to the land. For six days she lay still on the top of the water, and never seemed to move at all. Then the young officer used to walk up and down the deck. Sometimes he would get so impatient, that he would swear at the ship, the sea, and at everybody; sometimes he would play at chess, or at some game, to pass away the time. One day he was walking the quarter of the ship where the sailors sit, and seeing one of them under the shade of the sails, reading very attentively, he asked him whether he was doing so in order to kill the time.

"No, sir," said the man, "not to get rid of it, but to make the most of it."

The officer, surprised asked him what he meant. The sailor answered, he was reading a precious book, for it was the Bible, and that he read it whenever he had a spare moment, as his time was very precious; for he knew not when God would give him another time to read. Then the officer laughed at him for thinking that time precious which he thought so long.

But the sailor did not care for being laughed at, and he told him the time might yet come when he would gladly buy one moment of time, and that he would not be able to do so. A little boy, a midshipman, was standing near the officer and the pious sailor whilst they were talking, and some weeks after this he had a good reason for remembering all they had said about time. After six days, the wind blew again, and filled the white sails; and every day the ship got nearer to England, the people could see the land at a distance, and the white cliffs; and the young officer, in high spirits, kept saying what he would do when he got home; and the sailor, too, thought of his cottage, and his wife and little children, for whom he had so often prayed to his God.

But, alas! just when they thought themselves quite safe, and that it would only take a few hours to sail up the River Thames to London, a great storm came on. The wind blew, and tore the sails; one of the masts broke; and the large waves, with white foam, came dashing over the ship. Some of the people were very much afraid; for they knew that they were near some dangerous sands, and that if the ship went on them, she would be wrecked, and they might be drowned. Some knelt and prayed to God, some wrung their hands and cried, some called to the captain, to know if they must be lost.—At night came on, the wind roared, the waves rose higher, and the captain fired guns slowly, so that they could be heard on the shore, to let the people know they were in distress; but not even the brave boatmen of Deal could go off to try and save the poor people in the ship, for the night was too black and dark; and, at last, in the middle of the night, that fine ship struck on the sands, a hole was made in her side, and she soon filled with water. Some of the people were drowned, as she sank deeper in the sand; some were washed overboard; some threw themselves into the sea, in hopes of saving themselves; but all perished, except three.

When the sun rose the next morning, the waves were still high; but the Deal boat-men determined to go off to the ship in boats, to try and save as many of the crew as they could; but when they sought for that fine ship, they could only see the top of two masts, and three persons clinging to them. Then they put up the sails of their boat, and made haste to get to the ship. Who do you think the three people were? They were the officer, the sailor, and the little midshipman.—The officer still thought of home, and hoped and prayed that a boat might come and save him.

The sailor, too, thought of home, and prayed that, if he were drowned, God would forgive him his sins for Jesus Christ's sake, and that his soul might go to heaven, and that God would take care of his wife and children.

The midshipman kept watching the boat in the distance coming to save them; but as the tide got higher and higher, the waves kept dashing over them, and nearly swept them off the masts. They knew if the tide got quite high before the boat reached them, they must be lost. Nearer it came, and nearer; but higher the waves too rose, and higher. Then the officer shouted to the men in the boat to make as much haste as they could, or they would be drowned; and the boatmen put up all the sail they could, but they could not make their way.

Then the sailor turned to the officer and said quietly and calmly, "Nothing now, I think, can save us; the sea will cover us in five minutes, and the boat cannot reach us, I fear, in less than ten."

When the young officer heard this, he gave one loud cry, calling on God to save him—to grant him a few moments more, and he should be saved—the boat would reach him. The precious moments God had formerly given him he had wasted, and now God would not give him any more. The sailor who had spent his time in reading of Jesus, was ready to die. He looked up to the sky, dark clouds were there; he looked on the sea, covered with white foam, and said, "Lord Jesus receive my spirit." Hardly had he said this, when one large wave swept over the mast, and all three were washed into the sea. The boatmen picked up the midshipman before he was drowned, but the bodies of the officer and poor sailor were never found—they had sunk to the bottom of the deep sea, but their souls God would judge at the last day. One had wasted his precious moments; the other had employed them in praising God, and I trust the sailor is happy forever.—Happy Sundays.

Rapping me over the Knuckles.

A. I'll not like our minister yesterday forenoon at all!

B. Why not?

A. Because he was personal.

B. Personal! What do you mean?

A. I mean that he was rapping me over the knuckles.

B. Rapping you over the knuckles! How so? do you mean to say that you are covetous?

A. No! I don't—but Mr.——thinks I am.

B. How do you know?

A. He has as good as told me so.

B. When?

A. Why, at different times he has hinted at it. Only last week, he told me to remember that the good book says—"The liberal soul shall be made fat."

B. Do you really think he had you in view yesterday?

A. I know he did!

B. How do you know?

A. From what he said to me, and because he so often looked at me while preaching that sermon.

B. Well—he looked at me to.

A. But not so often as he did at me. White he was speaking of the uncomfortable feelings which the covetous man experiences in his own heart, he looked at me so steadily and so long that I was actually ashamed.

B. Ashamed of what?

A. Why, to be looked at so before all the congregation.

B. But at he look at you in the afternoon?

A. I was'nt there to hear him.

B. Why no?

A. Because I got enough in the morning.

B. Well, I don't understand it. You say you are not covetous, and yet the preacher meant you when preaching on the sin of covetousness, and gave you such a dose in the morning that you could not go in the afternoon.

A. I declare you are most as bad as the parson himself.

B. You know I am a plain spoken man. Now I thought the discourse an excellent one, and thought I did not think he meant me, or any one else in particular. I have reflected upon what he said, and concluded that I must give more in future than I have heretofore. Why did I not think he meant me?

A. Probably he has never said such things to you as he has to me.

B. He has more than once quoted texts to me about being liberal, and has often spoken to me about the good I could do with my property, and I was always glad to have him talk to me so freely, and never thought of being offended at it.

A. Well—people differ. For my part I don't want to be told about giving. I can judge for myself, and I don't like personal sermons either. I shan't go to meeting any more if I am to be shot at in this way.

B. You are a strange talking man. You say you are not covetous, and yet you are telling how the minister is shooting at you when he preaches on covetousness.

A. You wouldn't like preaching either, if you thought was aimed at you.

B. But I never would think that I was rapped over the knuckles by a sermon that did not apply to my case—as you say you do.

A. Well—I see we don't agree.

B. Have you said anything to anybody else about this matter?

A. Only to 'Squire C——and Deacon D——

B. What did 'Squire C——say?

A. He guessed the sermon wouldn't hurt me any.

B. And what did Deacon D——say?

A. He said wounded birds fluttered most, and that I must have been hit dreadful hard, or I would'nt make such a fuss about the matter, and it made me real mad, and as I left his store I banged too the door as tight as I could; I shall give old Deacon D——a wide birth after this.

B. Why so?

A. I believe I must go now? Good morning.—Olive Branch.

PROFESSOR WOOD'S HAIR RESTORATIVE.
IT HAS WORKED MIRACLES!

THAT ALL THE BALD AND GRAY CANNE RESTORED PERFECTLY to original growth, and color so far as their locks are concerned does not admit of doubt; neither it will cure every possible disease of the scalp, whether developed as dandruff itching or in the shape of cutaneous eruptions—every scaly crust—and in the possible case will in fact be starting to fifty young, active or periodical head-aches, and if used twice a week by the young regularly, it will preserve the color, and keep the hair from falling, to any imaginable age. Read and judge.

Milford, Worcester Co., Mass., Nov. 1855.

PROF. O. J. WOOD—Dear Sir: I take pleasure in inserting voluntary testimony to the magic effects of your wonderful Hair Restorative. In the fall of 1854, my hair commenced falling off, and the top of my scalp became bald and smooth as glass, and in one continued to fall for a great many years, notwithstanding I have used many celebrated preparations for re-location. Seeing your advertisement I was induced to give your article a trial, and to my utter astonishment, found, after a few applications, that my hair became finely set, and presented a glossy and beautiful appearance; and by the time I had used a quart bottle, my bald head was covered over with a young and vigorous growth of hair, which is now from one to two inches in length, and growing fast.

Yours, truly, HENRY GOODRICH.

CHARLESTOWN, Mass., Aug. 2, 1855.

Gents:—Nothing but a duty and sympathy that I feel to communicate to others that are afflicted as I have been, would induce me to give this public acknowledgement of the benefit I have received from Prof. Wood's Hair Restorative. When I first commenced using it, my hair was quite gray and in spots entirely bald. I have now used the Restorative about five months, and my hair is entirely changed to its original color, brown, and the new hair is over three inches in length on the spots where it was bald. I have also been much gratified at the healthy appearance and vigor of the hair, which before was dry, and it has ceased to come out in any quantity. Respectfully yours, &c., MRS. E. A. STODDARD.

From Mrs. Ingalls, a well known nurse in Boston.

BOSTON, Oct. 29th, 1855.

GENTS:—At your request, and being so highly pleased with the effects of the Restorative, I am free to say that my hair has become quite thick, and entirely white. I have for the last few years been in the habit of using dye, but hearing of the extraordinary effects of this article, I was induced to try it. My hair has been restored to its original thickness, and also to its former color, which is right brown.

Yours respectfully, MRS. INGALLS.

The following is from the Pastor of the Orthodox Church, Brookfield.

BROOKFIELD, Mass., Jan. 12, 1855.

Prof. Wood—Dear Sir:—Having made trial of your Hair Restorative, it gives me pleasure to say, that its effects have been excellent in removing inflammation, dandruff, and a constant tendency to itching, with which I have been troubled from my childhood, and has also restored the hair, which was becoming gray, to its original color. I have used no preparation of any kind, before or perceived benefits, and if I used twice a week by the young regularly, it will preserve the color, and keep the hair from falling, to any imaginable age. Read and judge.

When I first commenced using it, my hair was quite gray and in spots entirely bald. I have now used the Restorative about five months, and my hair is entirely changed to its original color, brown, and the new hair is over three inches in length on the spots where it was bald. I have also been much gratified at the healthy appearance and vigor of the hair, which before was dry, and it has ceased to come out in any quantity. Respectfully yours, &c., MRS. E. A. STODDARD.

From Mrs. Ingalls, a well known nurse in Boston.

BOSTON, Oct. 29th, 1855.

GENTS:—At your request, and being so highly pleased with the effects of the Restorative, I am free to say that my hair has become quite thick, and entirely white. I have for the last few years been in the habit of using dye, but hearing of the extraordinary effects of this article, I was induced to try it. My hair has been restored to its original thickness, and also to its former color, which is right brown.

Yours respectfully, MRS. INGALLS.

The following is from the Pastor of the Orthodox Church, Brookfield.

BROOKFIELD, Mass., Jan. 12, 1855.

Prof. Wood—Dear Sir:—Having made trial of your Hair Restorative, it gives me pleasure to say, that its effects have been excellent in removing inflammation, dandruff, and a constant tendency to itching, with which I have been troubled from my childhood, and has also restored the hair, which was becoming gray, to its original color. I have used no preparation of any kind, before or perceived benefits, and if used twice a week by the young regularly, it will preserve the color, and keep the hair from falling, to any imaginable age. Read and judge.

Above we present you with a likeness of DR. MORSE—the inventor of MORSE'S INDIAN ROOT PILLS. This gentleman has spent the greater part of his life in traveling, having visited Europe, Asia, and Africa, as well as North America—has spent three years among the Indians of our Western country—it was in this way that the Indian Root Pills were discovered. Dr. Morse was the first man to establish the fact that all diseases arose from impurity of the blood, and that strength, health, and life depended upon the vital fluid.

When the various passages become clogged and do not act in perfect harmony with the different functions of the body, the blood loses its action, becomes thick, corrupted and poisoned; then coming all pains, sickness and distress of every name and nature is occasioned, our healthy action destroyed, and all nature is not assisted in throwing off the stagnant humors, the blood will become thicker and cease to act, and then our light of life will forever be blown out. How important then that we should keep the various passages of the body free and open. And how necessary is it that we have it in our power to put a medicine in your reach, namely, Morse's Indian Root Pills, manufactured from plants and roots which grow around the mountainous cliffs in Nature's garden, for the health and recovery of diseased mankind. The roots, from which these Pills are made is a Sudorific, which first opens all the pores of the skin, and next proceeds in throwing out the inner parts of the corruption within. The second is a plant which is an Expectorant, that opens and unclogs the passages to the lungs, and thus, in a soothing manner, performs its duty by throwing off phlegm, and other humors from the lungs, by copious spitting. The third is a Diuretic, which gives one and double strength to the kidneys, thus evacuating many gallons of impurity from the blood, at once as they thus empty out bountifully by the urinary or water passages, and which would not have been the case if the kidneys were clogged. The fourth is a Cathartic, and accomplishes the other properties of the Pills while engaged in purifying the blood; the coarser particles of impurity which cannot pass off by the other outlets, are thus taken up and conveyed off in great quantities by the bowels.

From the above, it is shown that Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are the greatest blood purifier in the world, they search out the blood, let they last way to every part, and completely root out and cleanse the system from all impurity, and the life of the body, namely, the blood, becomes perfectly healthy; consequently all sickness and pain is driven from the system, for they cannot remain where the body becomes so pure and clear.

The reason why people are so distressed when sick, and why so many die, is because they do not get a medicine which will reach the affected parts, and which will open the natural passages for the disease to be cast out; hence, a large portion of the poisonous matter is left in the system, and either enters the stomach and bowels, and are literally overflowing with the corrupted mass; thus undergoing a degeneration, constantly mixing with the blood, which throws the corrupt matter through every vein and artery, unfitting it more and more for the use of nature. Dr. Morse's PILLS have aided in thousands upon thousands of cases, by restoring such to the sick to blooming health and happiness. Yes, thousands who have been racked, or tormented with sickness, pain and anguish, and whom feeble friends have been scrambled by the burning element of raging fever, and who have been almost ready to testify that they would have been numbered with the dead, but it has been for the great and wonderful medicine, Morse's Indian Root Pills. After one or two doses had been taken, they were astonished, and astonished at the wonderful power of their cleansing effects. Not only do they give immediate ease and strength, but they never fail to give permanent ease and strength, and there is never any return of pain, and anguish, but they at once go to work at the foundation of the disease, which is the blood. Therefore, it will be always, especially by those who use these Pills, "Good for Ever." And it is a fountain and purify, that cannot fail, in every case, to cure, with all of the Eight, and the Best of Health, and beauty will again revive, and the prospect of a long happy life will cheer us and brighten your days.

Get life of Dr. Morse's Indian or bring them to us, and we will forward them to you immediately.
