JESUS.

We see Jesns .- Heb. ii. 9. " We see Jesus."-in the manger. Laid upon his bed of hay; Born from home, a little stranger, Where the beasts are wont to lay. Shining hosts make known the story, "Christ, the Saviour's born to-day Glory in the highest! Glory !" And the sages homage pay.

See Him, from his country driven Into dreary regions wild: By the royal mandate given, To destroy the kingly child, Angels give the timely warning, "Rise—with child and mother flee!" And, before the light of morning, They're beyond the king's decree.

See Him round the country going, And the Gospel trumpet blow; Hunger toil, and suffering knowing, To redeem our souls from woe, Once, the Lord of earth and heaven, Now, to lay His head, no place! Pressed with care from moru till even, Sorrow sits upon his face.

See the thousands fed and gladdened By His gracious power and will; Now he walks the billows, maddened, At his voice they all are still. On the water, weary, sleeping-In the Mount all night in prayer; Over hardened sinners weeping, Who refused His life to spare.

See His works of love and wonder, On the poor, the blind, the lame; Death's strong fetters turst asunder, And the dumb sound forth His fame. But we see Him scorned and hated, Loaded with reproach and shame; Scoffs and insults unabated, Poured upon His lovely name!

See Him with his chosen, seated, Round the sacramental board; From the bustling crowd retreated, Special comforts to afford. Lo! He takes, and with His blessing, Gives the sacred emblems round! Precious food! O, how refreshing Are the heavenly symbols found!

See Him in the garden bleeding, Prostrate on the damp, cold ground; With His Heavenly Father pleading, In a plaintive, solemn sound. Hark! in agony He's crying, Brushed to earth beneath His load ! Swiftly comes an angel crying, Bringing help and strength from God!

See Him purple mock robes wearing, Buffeted and spit upon! See the thorns His temples tearing, And the blood fast trickling down! O, what gently, heavenly meekness! "Like a lamb to slaughter brought," Toiling 'neath His cross in meakness, Not a murmuring word or thought.

See Him on the cross suspended, While His enemies deride! Insults with His sufferings blended, And reproaches multiplied! Lo! the Sun the sight refuses; Solid rocks aud marble rend! Death, its hold on many looses ! Earth convulsive throbs doth blend!

"We see Jesus," hanging-praying, " Father, O, do them forgive, For they know not whom they're slaying, Spare, O spare them-let them live." See him, too, his soul committing To His Heavenly Father's hands; Then, "'Tis finished," all that's written, Or the broken laws demands,

"We see Jesus," buried, rising, On the third, appointed day; Priests, and Roman Guard surprising, Angels roll the rock away. Victory! to our Jesus glorious; Victory! to our rising King; Over every foe victorious, Death has lost its power to sting.

See him now to heaven ascending, On a chariot of cloud; And bright angels him attending, Bear him to the throne of God. There, we see him interceding For his faithful followers here; Advocate, successful, pleading, That they all his bliss may share.

"We see Jesus," there preparing Thrones and mansions for them, too; Soon we shall his joy be sharing, And his glory soon shall view. See him coming to receive us On a cloud of dazzling white; "O, come quickly, come, Lord Jesus;" Waits my soul to take its flight.

A Horrible Outrage --- A Man Kid-

RUTLAND, Ohio. March, 1, 1858. BRO. BURR :- The following heart-rending and disgusting scene occurred about twenty miles from this place, on the 9th of Feb. last, on the steamer "Ohio," a boat that performs weekly trips between Marietta and Cincin-

While the boat was leaving Point Pleasant, Va., several persons took passage to a point on the Virginia side, a short distance above Gallipolis, Ohio. When the boat landed at the point designated, behold the innocent passengers proved to be, in fact, "negro I saw the reluctant, heavy step with which he catchers!" They instantly seized upon the what a nest he would find there. A hornet's prey, on the claim that he was a fugitive nest would be about as peaceful. He looked slave! Having produced a warrant for his Virginia, and, doubtless, into eternal slavery! And what was the pretenece that this man was a slave? It was that, many years ago, somebody at Point Pleasant had made a slave of his mother! He was well known to several on the boat as an industrious and temperate person, that he had been married and lived in Oho for more than twenty years, and that he had purchased a pleasant farm, with the design and hope of making a happy home in the country, where, humble as he my own root."
