A Sabbath-School scholars RECOLLECTIONS.

BLEST Sabbath School! thy name recalls A thousand hallowed thoughts to mind, Things seen and heard within thy walls, Still in a thankful heart enshrin'd.

There happy faces used to meet, With health and hope and ardor glowing ; There youthful voices, sounding sweet, Sang God's high praise in numbers flowing.

There rich and poor together came, And gathered round the Book of God ; To hear of Christ, that precious theme, The works He did, the way He trod.

There moral precepts first were learn'd, Then doctrines open'd to the mind, Then Types and Prophecies discern'd, And Proofs we dearly lov'd to find.

At d there our yearly Feasts were spread, And friends, to mark our joy, came there; There Proofs rehears'd and Lessons said, And there our Pastors join'd in prayer.

I know no spot on memory's page, Ting'd with a clearer, brighter hue; No scene on earth's short pilgrimage, Which more I love to call to view,

Than that dear place, where Teachers kind, Touch'd with a sense of Christ's own love, Impress'd upon my youthful mind,

The truths He brought from realms above. Those precious truths their light have shed

A Daughter's Request.

A young lady who was the subject of the remarkable work of grace for which the past winter has been distinguished, was deeply solicitous that her father who was an avowed infidel should be brought to a knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus. He was a man of peculiar temperament, and would not brook anything he considered dictation. He prided himself on his resisting powers, and she of course would not attempt to argue with him. She knew not how to approach him, and yet she felt impelled to make some efforts on his behalf.

One evening as he sat reading a newspaper beside his daughter, whose heart was aching with anxiety for him, " the sound of the Church going bell" was heard.

"I wish, dear father," said she, " that you would go with me to meeting this evening. Will you, dear ?"

"No, child," he replied, " it is no place for me."

His manner was so decided that her heart sunk within her, and she left the room with tearful eyes to prepare for going out. As she passed through the room where her father was sitting, on her way to church, she noticed that he had dropped his newsparer, and was leaning on the table with his hand on his forehead, apparently lost in thought. She said again affectionately, " Do, dear father, go with me just once. Wont you ?"

"No, indeed," said he; " four years have passed since I was in a religious meeting, 1 shall not go now."

Sadening as was the reply, there was something in his look which excited hope in the daughter's heart. There was an expression of deep feeling, a solemnity which she had never seen in him before. As she went to the place of prayer she lifted up silent but earnest entreaties that, though he would not go to meet his heavenly Father at the appointed place, God would meet him in his solitude, and pour upon him the richest bless-

On her return from the meeting, she found her father precisely in the attitude in which she left him, his face indicating anguish of mind. She asked tenderly what cansed his sadness, and repeated her expressions of interest till he rose and exclaimed, "God have mercy on my soul." His agony was so great that she feared he would lose his reason, and she ran for a pious neighbor, who spent the night in conversation and prayer with him. Ere the morning dawned, " the day star had arisen in his heart," and he now seems an humble follower of the Saviour he has so ong rejected.

First Melted, then Molded.

Lessons of vast profit may sometimes be found in the mechanical, as in the natural world, by studying which, we may grow wiser and better. " First melted, then molded," broke from our lips, not long since, in an iron foundry, while watching the workman preparing for a "cast."

The roar of the bellows and the crackling of the fire were almost deafening; the men were busy, preparing ladles to receive the melted metal; glitering sparks of blazing iron were flying from some uncovered orifice, in the "cupola," and all was activity and atchfulness.

We had scarcely taken a position of some security from the said sparks, when one of the men, into whose head an economical thought seems to have broken, seized a shovel, and commenced scraping up fragments of cindery iron scraps, and small pieces, knocked from castings. These he threw into the open mouth of the blazing furnace; then he gathered up, here and there, about the shop, broken griddles, superannuated slowshares, noseless tea-kettles, spiders whose handles had departed, pots whose legs had been lost in the battle with servants and fire,

Nor life nor death the future closes : And round the shadowy brow of Care, Will Hope and Fancy twine their roses.

I know the effect of it in every case. So sure as water will extinguish fire so sure will this cure ha-mor. I never sold a bottle of it but that sold another after a trial it always speaks for itself. There are two things about this herb that appears to me surprising ; first, that it grows in our pastures, in some places quite plentiful, and yet its value has never been known until I discovered it in 184 -second, that it should cure all kinds of humor. In order to give some idea of the sudden rise and grea opularity of the discovery, I will state that in April, 1853, I peddled it, and sold about six bottles per day : in April, 1853, I peddled it, and sold about six bottles per day : in April, 1854 I sold over one thousand bottles per day of it. Bome of the wholesale Druggists who have been in busi ness twenty and thirty years, say that nothing in the annals of patient medicines was ever like it. There is a universa puaise of it from all quarters. In my own practice I always kept it strictly for numbore fut since fits introduction as a general family medicine, grea and wonderful virtues have been found in it that I never sus pected.

Several cases of epileptic fits—a disease which was always considered incurable, have been cured by a few bottles. O what a mercy if it will p.ove effectual in all cases of that awful malady—there are but few who have seen more of it

I know of several cases of Dropsy, all of them aged people cured by it. For the various diseases of the Liver, Sick Hendache, Dyspepsia, Asthma, Fever and Ague, Pais in the Side, Diseases of the Spine, and particularly in diseases o the Kidneys, &c., the discovery has done more good than any medicine ever known.
