The R. Mr. Brooke, in the course of his speech, read extracts from letters from the deceased General to his wife. In one of which, a short time previous, to his death, he said, should he fall, he should leave his wife to the care of his Sovereign. (Cheers.) 'The reverend gentleman said :- The will of Havelock was proved under £1500. This was all he had to leave to his wife and family after forty-three years' service, but the nation must repair the self sacrifice. - (Cheers.)
