THE HARVESTS PAST. "The harvest is past the summer is ended, and are not saved."-Jer. viii. 20 Rehold the leaves which fade and die,

They speak the summer gone; . Ah ! listen to the warning cry, When thou art left alone ! The fields, once green with waving corn,

The reaper's work is done; The sheaves are gathered-none remain-The tares are left alone. Companions of thy youthful day

Hark! as they pass, they seem to say, Wilt thou be left alone? Hope beam'd upon the early spring, How bright the rising shone Yet others first their offerings bring,

Are now to Jesus drawn;

Wilt thou be left alone! The world with all its joys must fade, The curtain must be drawn; And thou upon a dying bed, Shall soon be left alone!

And Oh !--if then no hope appear-No bright immertal dawn, Will not thy trembling spirit fear To pass the gloom alone?

In the tremendous judgment day,

When the last trump is blown, How canst thou bear to hear Him say, "Depart," --- with flends alone. Ah! then the harvest would be past,

The gracious summer gone, Hope's light forever overcast, And dark despair alone.

Flee --- flee to Christ with earnest prayer, Behold the open door; Jesus will gather me with care, AND CLAIM ONE JEWEL MORE. [London Patriot.

SISTERS' PLEA FOR GOD'S HOUSE. The Isrealitish camps were clean,

Such was their institution, And why should not a meeting-house, Be guarded from polution? Religion is a cleanly thing, And decency befits it, Spitting the floor a nauseous thing,

And every one admits it. Yet this vile practice here prevails, It pains me to relate it, And rational, reflecting men, We hope, will roprobate it. The rules of moral decency, Our mothers in culcated Are here profaned and trampled on, Too bad to be related.

Pray lend a kind propitious ear. And do not be offended, When we purpose a remedy, To have this evil mended Let those who will indulge at home There use it unmolested, If those around them Can submit to be so infested.

But when you come to worship God, Behave as is befitting, Oh, then refrain for conscience sake, And quit your nasty spitting. But for inveterate cases when They cannot be obedient, And for accommodation sake

Let each procure a calabash, This from his neck suspended Would answer well, and cleanliness Would be therby befriended.

Triumphant Death of a young Indian Woman.

We hope that no one of our young readers will fail to read the account given below of the triumphant death of a young Indian woman. It appears that she joined the mission church when she was only eight years of age Though she did not always live a christian life, yet God at length, used means to bring her back wholly to himself.

Is it a mystery that this Indian woman should be permitted, while yet living, to have such a view of the great company of the Redeemer around the great white throne, with their harps in their hands, and to hear their songs of praise and honor to God and the Lamb, who has redeemed them by his preci ous blood. But we know that Paul was caught up into the third heaven, and there saw things unutterable. The excellent Rev. Wm. Tennent of New Jersey, was for days thought to be dead, and yet revived again, telling his friends that he had been to heaven, and there " saw glory unutterable," but was told " you must go back." Some of you may remember the account of the little Indian girl who died near our mission, about a year ago. When suffering great distress of body, her father, to comfort her, said to her " my daughter, God loves such as you, He will take you to Himself." "Yes, father," said he, "I see Jesus, He takes me." These were her last words on earth; with them she breathed out her life, and was with her Saviour to be separated from him no more forever.

Dear young freinds, will these untutored Indians rise up in judgment to condemn you! They repented under the preaching of the Gospel, and believed to the saving of their souls. Their religious privileges bear no comparison to those you have enjoyed : have you too repented and given your hearts to God! If not, now, in this time of his merciful visitation, seek him with all your hearts, that you may at last be found among the blood-washed throng, who in heaven, shall praise God and the Lamb forever and ever.

There are two things about this herb that appears to me surprising; first, that it grows in our pastures, in some places quite plentiful, and yet its value has never been known until I discovered it in 1840.

The second, that it should cure all kinds of humor.

In order to give some idea of the sudden rise and greatopularity of the discovery, I will state that in April, 1853, I peddled it, and sold about six bottles per day: in April, 1854, I sold over one thousand bottles per day of it.
