[From the London Patriot. The Well of Bethlehem.

2 SAM. XXIII, 15, 17. "O for a cooling draught
Of Bethlehem's cooling spring, My boyhood drank it oft, Exclaimed the Jewish king; "Through all the land there's near a stream So sweet as that of Bethlehem,

His words three worthies heard. And instantly arose, On them their arms they gird, And thus their vow disclose "Monarch, this day a goblet clear From Jesse's well thy heart shall cheer."

Around that crystal stream Philistine warriors stood, Their spears and swords horrific gleam; They vow they'll drink the blood Of any Jew whose madness fell Should dare approach old Jesse's well

But soon these foes beheld The Jewish worthies come; Instant their vaunting souls were quelled, Their fears foretold their doom, Goliath's fate awaited them; Away they hied and left the stream.

A goblet from the well Before the king was placed, But horror on the monarch fell. His thirst refused to taste; "To obtain this drink, these men," he said, "Their precious lives have jeoparded!

King David would not drink
The cup which life defied;
His princely heart recoiled to think Three subjects might have died The drunkard's cup has thousands slain, And shall we taste that cup again?

A Living Miracle.

OR, AHE STORY OF POOR ALECK.

The bird that soars on highest wing, Builds on the ground her lowly nest; And she that does most sweetly sing, Sings in the shade when all things rest; In lark and nightingale we see What honour hath humility.

The saint that wears heaven's brightest crown, In deepest adoration bends; The weight of glory bends him down The most when high his soul ascends; Nearest the throne itself must be The footstool of humility.

" Poor Aleck !" sighed many, as they laid him low in his woodland grave, near Martinville, Ind. Aleck was a living miracle, a triumphant refutation of infidelity, a constant rebuke to sin, an heir of immortality, locked up in cumbrous clay.

The heart swells with singular and lively faith at the remembrance of this poor saint, poor. He was born of poor parents. He was poor in spirit, in a double sense. He was impotent in mind. He never could nor did learn any of the commonest facts of life. He never knew enough to tell one piece of money from another. He frequently got loss going along the public highway, in the neighbourhood where he was born. He often left his clothes at houses, or in fields, and never could tell where they were. He could not learn his letters, nor learn to count. Many of the people Aleck knew were wicked. He learn ed to work at the plainest kind of labour, such as shovelling or digging, and was often engaged in public works. He often had to associate with swearers, drunkards, and Sabbath-breakers. He learned oaths with some facility; drank whiskey whenever he could get it; fought with loafers, and danced for their amusement. It might have been truly said, "Poor Aleck!" then.

His reason dethroned or imbedded, his passions flaming up like those of a ferocious beast, Aleck was, indeed, in a pitiable plight. Aleck had one advantage, which many, alas! have not. His mother loved God, and she loved, too, the blind and erring soul of her boy. He was rapidly hastening to ruin and death, when his attention was arrested by the kindness of a simple-hearted and aged minister, familiarly known by the endearing title of "Father Spilman."

He heard this servant of God preach because he loved him. He loved him and his mother. Of these he often spoke-these he never forgot. While all else of earth seemed a blank to him, he never ceased to remember good old Father Spilman and his mother. Aleck loved dancing, and whiskey, and fighting, and swearing. Which will conquer? the right or wrong.

said a minister to Aleck, when he was sick. "He is that," was the poor saint's reply. Aleck will have stars of rejoicing in the final day. He has done an immense amount of good. His example was an unanswerable argument in favor of the Christian religion. I asked an intelligent physician in Martinsville, what wicked men generally thought of Aleck's piety. Said he, "I never heard any one hint that he had not the most implicit confidence in him. His example, no infidel pretends to combat-it always silences the enemies of religion.' Should I ever revisit the scenes of former labors, I would like to shed a tear on the grave of this child of the skies. He who never knew what power, ambition or money was, knows now the new song-the song of Moses and the Lamb. Alexander M'Gowan will never again get lost while praying in the woods. He has met father Spilman and his mother now. Who would not like to see him again, that knew him here? I very much want to see him. I want to know what Jesus can do for us.

The Slave's Story

On Saturday afternoon a poor fugitive slave, who arrived three weeks ugo at Liverpool from New Orleans, stowed away in the hold of a cotton ship, was brought to this fronted Papist could not say a word .- When office. The following is his own plain unvarnished tale, taken down as the narrative fell

'My name is Tom Wilson. I arrived here "Yes, and there's a time to quit, too; but in a ship called the Metropolis, Captain Foster. I am slave born. I have been under now forty-years old. I belonged to Mr. Henry Fastman of New York, cotton presser. Before then I belonged to Colonel Barr of Woodford, Mississippi. There I had a wife The whole crowd was convulsed with the flogged. They used to tie me down across a leather strap. I was marked with the whip the knee joint.] Burks (he continued) rode up to me with his gun, and shot me in the seen and examined at any time. The dogs that I knowed nothing about what they did to me for about a week. When I got a litle strong they burned my back with a red hot to punish me for escaping. They put an iron collar round my neck, which I wore for eight months, besides two leg irons, one on each leg. After that I was watched very closely but one night about a week after Christmas I ran away and hid myself under the sawdust, in a sawmill pit, below New Orleans. I was followed by Burks, the overseer, and the dogs, but they did not find me. I crept out, and ran away, for more safety, to the Great Salt Water Lake, behind New Orleans, secreting myself under the bushes and vines. There are alligators in the lake, and as I waded up to the knees in the water, the alligators followed me, grunting and bellowing and trying 10 get me. I had several times to climb up trees to escape them; but I felt safer among the alligators than among the white men. In the morning at four o'clock, I went down to the wharf. On the road I came across some of the men who were out watching for me with guns and dogs. It was just getting light. I began to whistle and sing, and walked close by them, and they paid no attention to me .-When I got down to the wharf some of the coloured crew of the American cotton ship Metropolis took me on board, and hid me among the bales. One of the coloured men split on me, and there was a search for me hat day, but they did not find me though they came very near me, and I trembled to think should be taken back and tortured. I was frightened, too, for the coloured men who had befriended me. I was kept out of the sight of the white men, and Captain Foster did not know anything about it until after the men were paid off at Liverpool. I remained hid from a week after Christmas until about three weeks ago, when the ship came here "The nails are gone, but the Marks During the time I was secreted I was kept alive by the coloured men, who had been so good to me. They brought me something to eat and drink every night. When I first landed here I was frightened at every white man I passed, and I hid myself about where I could, and begged at night for bread. I was afraid I should be taken into slavery again. I did

With regard to the future, poor ' Tom Wilson' said he would be very glad of a fireman's place on board a coasting steamer. When in slavery, in America, he had been hired out as fireman on one of the lake steamers. He said he could do that wo k very well, and could stand any amount of heat.

From inquiries we have made, we are in, duced to believe that the foregoing narative, which reads like a lost chapter of Uncle Tom's Cabin, is substantially true .- Albion.

I know the effect of it in every case. Some as water will extinguish fire so sure will this cure in a trial it always speaks for itself. There are two thing about this herb that appears to me surprising; first, that grows in our pastures, in some places quite plentiful, and y its value has never been known until I discovered it in 18—second, that it should cure all kinds of humor.

In order to give some idea of the sudden rise and groupularity of the discovery, I will state that in April, 1863 peddled it, and sold about six bottles per day: in April, 1864 is seid over one thousand bottles per day of it.

Some of the wholesale Druggists who have been in business twenty and thirty years, say that nothing in the annual patient medicines was ever like it. There is a universe praise of it from all quarters.

raise of it from all quarters.

In my own practice I always kept it strictly for number that since its introduction as a general family medicine, and wonderful virtues have been found in it that I never Several cases of epileptic fits—a disease which was alw considered incurable, have been cured by a few bottles, what a mercy if it will plove effectual in all cases of awful malady—there are but few who have seen more than I have.

I know of several cases of Dropsy, all of them aged people cured by it. For the various diseases of the Liver, Sit lieadache, Dyspepsia, Asthma, Fever and Ague, Pain in Side, Diseases of the Spine, and particularly in diseases the Kidneys, &c., the discovery has done more good than y medicine ever known.
