"Intelligencer" will hear from you soon.
Your's truly
B. F. R. W. For the Religious Intelligencer. "Blessed are the peace-makers: for they shall be called the children of God. Mat. 5-9." Hark! what voice is that which floats from You hilltop, and echoes softly, sweetly through The vale below; holding you gathering throng In breathless silence; through each soul And vibrating on each heart string? Behold! amid that countless multitude A careworn pilgrim. "'Tis he who speaks." And on each listening ear, his voice falls In sweet melodious accents. Who is he? 'Tis God omnicient and Almighty. Ho who spake worlds from naught, and Gave them visibility. At whose command The sun and moon came forth, and Took their station in the azure space. At whose word myrinds of stars bedecked The cloudless canopy of heaven; and By whose power they yet fulfil their mission. Behold him! As he stands or yonder Mountains brow, clothed in meekness And humility, yet in Majesty! His mighty voice subdued. He breathes Forth words of peace and consolation. What are they? Listen-The man Who maketh peace is blessed, And shall be called, "A child of God!" " A child of God !" Awake disheartened one And toil afresh to heal the wrankling festering Wound within the bosom of thy tellow-men, And say no more, "Tis all in vain; But labour on, and weary not In this thy work of love, till thou Accomplish peace. Then shalt thou bear The sacred appellative, "Peace maker." And claim the rich reward, That blissful name "A child of God!" But see! The Prince of peace has left The mount of Palestine. Where is he now! Behold! he stands before his Father's throne As Mediator! making peace between Rebellious man and offended God! Hark! How he pleads for those he died To save! See him display his bleeding Wounds, and cries, spare them another year! He wearies not in this his sacred office. Thine is the same. Wouldst thou have more?

And the blessing shall be thine, The title thine, A child of God! Then be content : bid thy murmuring Love be still, and labour in thy Sphere; that when thy work is done, And thou art called to stand before The Judge of quick and dead He will not seem to the arrayed in Furious wrath and seated on a flaming Throne of Vengence; but kindly Will he smile on thee and say Well done. The Design Of The Bible.

Suppose, dear readers, that you were invited by some mighty prince to visit his court in some distant, and to you, unknown land, with the assurance that when there, he would confer upon you the highest honor and supply you with everything which could make you happy. Suppose that only one individual had visited this country, and that on his return he had written you a book, for your guidence in traveling to it. Suppose further, that he had described the country in all the peculiarites of form and language which distinguished them, and the customs and em ployments which amuse their retirement or contribute to their individual or social plea pointed out the way, that you could not miss it and mentioned every danger, so that they may all be avoided; that he told you every. thing you would need and pointed out the various places where you might stop and obtain refreshment and repose.
