EUROPEAN NEWS.

From our London Correspondent.

LONDON, Nov. 4, 1859

EUROPEAN CONGRESS.

It cannot be said that the political firmament or horizon wears a very bright and assuring appearance. The Emperor Napoleon pursues his idea of a European Congress with characteristic energy, and it is at present a mooted point whether England has consented to form a member of that Congress. All that is stated on authority is, that Lord John Russell as Foreign Secretary, has laid down certain sine qua non conditions involving, no doubt, securities against armed intervention in the affairs of Central Italy. We can be no party to a Congress which dains to settle for Italy the form of Government she shall receive either in gross or detail. On the other hand the French Emperor's letter to the King of Sardinia, shews the limit to which he goes in reconstituting the smaller Italian States. This plan would reimpose Ducal government again on Tuscany and Modena, and the Papal yoke on the inhabitants of the Romagna. Why Louis Napoleon is so anxious for a Congress may be that he wishes a formal annulment of the Treaty of Vienna, which declared the throne of France for ever barred against a Bonaparte.

SPAIN.

Spain has put itself into a warlike posture against Morocco. It seems that Spain is suddenly smitten with military ardour, and finding something of a greivance against the Moors, and they being the least powerful enemy to be singled out, war has been proclaimed. In a few days news is expected of the arrival of General O'Donnell on the Barbary coast, and the formal opening of the campaign. France encourages Spain, and the fact of a secret treaty is confidently affirmed. It would be folly to deny that every movement of France is jealously watched, and its intervention in this Morocco rupture is thought to have ulterior motives affecting British influence in the Mediterranean That the Emperor seriously contemplates a war with England as a proximate contingency, I do not believe, but he is evidently engaged in a policy which may lead to embarrassments before many years are over.

PROPHECIES.

Students of Prophecy are on the qui vive, and the other day a long review appeared in the Times of some prophetical books, in which great respect was shown to their interpretations, especially that which makes 1867 a crisis year in the history of the world. One would have expected a bantering tone in such an article, and that a very different manner was exhibited is a sign of the times that will make the prophetical shool—(not more confident, for lack of confidence is not its failing;—but) more hopeful of the public conversion.

FRANCE—AUSTRIA.

The Emperor of Russia and the Prince Regent have had a meeting which has revived a cordial feeling between the two Courts, and is calculated to keep in check any ambitious designs of the present occupant of the Tuilleries.

Austria is in a hobled state. Baron Hubner, a popular man, has resigned because he was opposed in recommending liberal concessions.—The new arrangement respecting the Protestant communities is said not to work well; and on every side cries for reform are long and loud. Perhaps as the feudal system was mortally wounded in Palestine during the Crusade fever, the centralistic despotism of Austria received its deadly hurt in Italy. But great and heavy abuses die shortly, and the subjects of the Emperor Francis will see many things before they regain the constitutional rights which were lost ten years ago.

TURKEY.

Turkey is struggling. The conspiracy was a rough, rebellious contest against corruptions so glaring, that the new Grand Vizier refused to take office except the lives of the plotters were spared. Urgent fiscal reforms are promised, but in the Turkish code of government promises and performances are kept at a respectable distance; or shall we say that the transmitation of the former into the latter, is a process which occupies an era? The 'pickman' is no better, and the diplomatic physicians have about exhausted all the resources of their art.

BRITISH AFFAIRS.

The Government has kept very snug all its plans (if it has any), in relation to Reform and other subjects which will have to come on for discussion in the next session of Parliament.—The Houses are again prorogued, and it is not likely that they will assemble for work before the end of January or beginning of February.

The Liverpool Conservatives gave a grand banquet to the late Cabinet on Saturday last, when Lord Derby, his son, Mr. Disraeli and others, uttered speeches in which much care was taken to avoid committing themselves to any policy, lest, I suppose, a time for 'ratting' should arise. Sir Robert Peel's last concession and its consequences, have made the Conservatives profoundly anxious not to say much about their principles, lest 'humble pie' might have to be eaten.

The Lancashire Reform Union and the Northern Reform Union have commenced the winter's agitation on the Liberal side. In other respects we are tolerably quiet, and the political quarrels of the month took place on the 1st instant, when the members of our Municipal Councils are chosen yearly—such as go out of office by rotation. This does not apply to London, where the electors for the Parish vestries are held in May—except the Lord Mayor's pagentry, which keeps of course, to the memorial 9th of November. In several places Temperance candidates proposed for Municipal offices, have been returned over the heads of other candidates.

The banquet to Lord Brougham at Edinburgh was a tribute well deserved, and to which distinguished men of all parties brought their offerings. A few days afterwards the graduates of Edinburgh University were called upon to elect their first Chancellor. The eyes of all were on Brougham; but the Duke of Buccleugh was put in opposition, and he, in truth, was the only man in Scotland who stood any chance of success, but on a poll the votes were distributed—for Brougham 654, for Buccleugh 419. The defeat was signal, and was a merited rebuke to the impertinence which could undertake the competition on the score of broad acres, clannish feeling, and Ducal title. Lord Brougham was born in Edinburgh, and before leaving that city visited the room where he was ushered into a life one of the busiest, and in some respects the usefullest which the last hundred years has witnessed. His vis vivida is extraordinary. On Friday night he delivered a speech at Newcastle-on-Tyne, and the next evening had arrived in Paris!

THE LATE GALE.

Two tremendous gales have beaten in upon us since my last letter. The first rose on Tuesday week, and continued during Wednesday, doing great damage to shipping out at sea and in port. The fate of the Royal Charter you will have heard of, and mourned over. The inquest is still in progress, and but few new facts are brought to light. Only about 40 bodies out of 459 have been recovered, and the bullion chest worth about half a million has not been found. In the same storm the Great Eastern, anchored off Holyhead, suffered severely, and only her enormous magnitude preserved her. A line of battle ship similarly placed must, it said, have gone ashore.

The Mammoth of the deep is now moored off Southampton, where she will remain till fully equipped, taking short trips during the winter, reserving herself till Spring for her American visitation.

The Channel Fleet was out in the midst of the same hurricane, and was brought into port free from damage, owing to the admirable seamanship displayed. The second hurricane a few days ago was also very severe, and did more damage in London than the other, but was less destructive in the open sea. The river Thames rolled and foamed under the besting of the wind like an inland sea.

RELIGIOUS MATTERS.

Some important meetings have been held of late which require approving mention. At the Mansion House a service attended by members of the Evangelical Alliance was given on Tuesday by the Lord Mayor, and the proceedings included devotional exercises and addresses.—Sir John Lawrence, of India fame, was present. In Oxford a great gathering was called for the purpose of setting on foot an Episcopal mission on the track of Dr. Livingstone's researches. Mr. Gladstone and the Bishop of Oxford delivered speeches, and the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge have agreed to join in this missionary enterprize. It is curious that the prime mover in this matter was an independent minister, and it is a hopeful sign that High Churchmen recognize in him a successor of the Apostles after a fashion other than that dependent on Episcopal consecration. Of course the intended missionary staff would be composed of 'Churchmen," a Bishop and three Clergymen, according to report, going as a pioneering band. News has come from Dr. Livingstone that the 'Pearl' steamer is too weak to resist the strong currents of the Zambesi, and asking for another vessel.—The cost would be about £3000, which will be cheerfully subscribed. The commotion connected with St. Georges'-in-the-East Church had not subsided. The Rector refuses to refer the whole matters in dispute to the Bishop of London, and the Parishioners are now calling out for the reopening of the Church which was closed by the Bishop's order. There are none too many places of worship even in any part of the metropolis, and they ask that the afternoon lecture may be resumed. The rector has a meagre congregation, but the afternoon lecturer, Rev. H. Allen, draws a church full. The Bishop is in a difficulty. In such matters he has but little legal power, and Parliament is not in the mood to add to the Episcopal authority at present vested in the office.

A large number of Arch Deacons have signed a petition against the abolition of Church Rates; and the evidence taken before a Select Committee of the Lords on the same subject has been printed; but that this impost will be long retained is not probable.

The Irish Roman Catholic Prelates are trying to upset the mixed system of National Education, and even in England addresses sympathizing with the Pope are in course of signature. It seems infatuation that Romanists, especially English ones, should identify the Pope's civil and spiritual jurisdiction, and to oppose themselves to those reforms which the Roman Catholics of Italy demand with heart and voice.

Mr. Binney has returned from Australia, having providentially omitted (through Mrs. Binney's persuasions it is said) to take passage in the "Royal Charter." He had a thronging congregation to meet him last Sunday at the Weigh House, and the work before him will task his recruited health.

An address from 140 Episcopal clergymen on the abstinence question to their brethren in the ministry has been advertised and published very extensively. I enclose a copy. Similar addresses from Ministers of other denominations will probably follow. I may whisper that one to Baptist Ministers is ready for the reception of signatures. In this and every other work of kind love may we be most active and vigilant, that "God's way may be known upon earth, His saving health among all nations." B.

Losses by the Great Storm in England.

The British Ensign of November 2d, says:—

Up to the close of Lloyd's on Saturday afternoon, intelligence was still coming in of casualities and losses during the late great storm. Its equal for violence and terrible consequence has not been experienced for the last twenty years, and the boisterous weather of Sunday night led to some apprehension that there would be a renewel of the gale.

By a return made up on Saturday evening of the result of the gale we find the following:—

Vessels totally wrecked,	96
Vessels stranded and other casualities,	530
Total	626

Probable loss of life, including the Royal Charter, 600. Many of the losses will fall heavily upon Lloyd's and the various Marine Insurance Offices, but the bulk of the casters were principally insured in clubs.

The Ensign has an excellent Editorial on the lessons of the storm. The loss of the "Royal Charter," the particulars of which we have already published, is appropriately alluded to.

Of this disaster an exchange remarks:—

"Like so many other similar disaters, it was the result of Rum. One of the passengers states that he believed the captain was not sober.—There had been a jollification on board on account of their safe arrival, the vessel having touched at Queenstown, and the captain was probably unfitted by it to manage the vessel in the gale which succeeded. Some of the passengers were carried down by the gold which they attempted to save, showing how vain is wealth as a ground of dependence in such an hour, as it will prove to all who make it their trust. A gentleman, named Welsh, white in the lower saloon, tied two black canvas bags full of gold around his neck; he was lost. Several other passengers fastened money about their persons, but they were carried down and lost."

The Ensign says:

Among the lessons which both individuals and nations require to be taught is, their constant and entire dependence on an unseen Hand.—Such, however, is their pride, self-sufficiency, and self-reliance, that to learn it—and keep it in memory when acquired—they must have line upon line and precept upon precept. Among the instruments employed are pestilence, famine, war, earthquake, and hurricane. The one or the other of those is used according to circumstances. From her insular position the last is most commonly sent to chasten England. The "abundance of the sea" has made her rich, and her wealth but too often perverts her judgment. Her gold is her deity; she worships Mammon, and forgets the Most High!

The consequences of this transgression are sure; the love of Heaven is manifested by the rod! He frowns and calamity ensues, sometimes laying prostrate a class or classes, and sometimes a whole people. The frame of society, indeed, is such that what at first seems to affect only a few is, in the end, felt more or less by millions. An example of this is furnished in the recent all-devouring storms which have shaken the Isle and raged around its shores.—There is scarcely a port in Great Britain where the effects are not severely felt Large numbers are stricken with a blow from which years will be required to recover; not a few industrious people have lost their all, and been plunged into the depths of poverty!

The grand type of this dreadful havoc, however, is the Royal Charter, which stands up amid the wide-spread ruin as a rock in the sea, or a mountain in a plain. The two grand features in the horrid catastrophe are the loss of property and the loss of life. Gold in freight was lost to the extent of half a million sterling! Add to this the large property of numerous individuals, a portion of them known to be wealthy, and to the whole the ship, and now vast the aggregate!—But this is a thing of nought compared with the loss of life; well nigh five hundred immortal beings perished! We have here an accumulation of destruction seldom paralleled!

The Royal Charter was a favourite vessel, and hence probably the number, the extraordinary number, of passengers on board from Melbourne and the other Colonies. We have no recollection of a like number on board any homeward vessel. It is not often, indeed, that any ship of her class has half the number, even going out with emigrants. There seems to have been something in the affair wholly fatuitous! The vessel ranked with the finest on the line, her commander was a prince of his class, and the voyage out and home was the shortest upon record. That the people might be cheered on the way a band of musicians was taken on board with them. Thus they came merrily along till once more their delighted vision rested on the white cliffs of Old England. Rejoicing in the speed and safety of their passage, they made a handsome present to the CAPTAIN, and also to one of the two Reverand passengers who had conducted worship among it them. All hearts rejoiced in the past, and were filled with hope as to the future.—Amid the sweet delusion the Divine command went forth: Old Ocean promptly obeyed, and after, for a little, tossing the splendid ship as a bauble, he seized her in fury, broke her as a rod, and tore her in pieces, precipitating the petrified and shrieking multitude into the all-devouring abyss!

Reason reels as she stands on the shore and surveys the terriffic scene! Death reigns all around! Ruin is the attendant of death! No such spectacle of havoc and of horror has met the eye, on the coast of England, for many long years. But, while reason observes, contemplates and mourns, compassion, on the wings of imagination, goes forth to the multitude of hearths throughout the land where bosoms throb, where tears are streaming, and nothing is heard but the wail of desperation. The disappointments are unutterable! The sorrow is equal to the disappointment! The scenes are agonizing!—The very sight sickens the soul! It is intolerable! Humanity is compelled to turn aside and weep.

Australia! The sad, sad intelligence, as fast as the winds and the waves can carry it, is being wafted thither! But who may abide its arrival! None are prepared for the heart-rending news There is, we believe, not one of the Colonies but is more or less involved in the calamity. It will clothe numbers in mourning, Many left Melbourne in the full expectation of returning, bidding and receiving a temporary adieu, which has proved a last, long farewell! Many whose endeavours had been successful at the diggings and elsewhere, who had realized a competency, and were returning to enjoy it to the land of their fathers' sepulchres, have found a tomb on its shores!

The moral of the whole is, "Boast not thyself of to-morrow!" There may be "but a step between thee and death!" If already reconciled to GOD, "watch and pray," "for in such an hour as ye think not the SON OF MAN may come!" If not so reconciled, then, "turn thou to thy GOD; keep mercy, and judgment, and wait on thy GOD continually."
