for Naples was premature.

Sardinia, or Piedmont, which is now the great centre of interest in the civilized world, as it is to be the battle ground of nations, formed the subect of a very able and instructive article in the North American Review for October, 1857, from which are gathered the subjoined facts, based upon a History of Piedmont by Antonio Gallenga, an Italian exile, known in Boston twenty years and the French army in Rome has the very unago as L. She dates her Christian civilization from St. Barnabas, one of the original apostles. From 1798 till the fall of Napoleon, Piedmont and Genoa were incorporated with the French empire, but the Congress of Vienna disturbed that arrangement and parcelled out the smaller kingdoms of the continent to suit the views of the monarchs there represented, without consulting the wishes of the different peoples in the premises. The fortress of Alessandria is the frontier citadel of Sardinia, and it is here that the cannon presented by different countries, as testimonials in favour of Constitutional liberty, are mounted. The geographical features of this remarkable territory are described by the reviewer as not less varied than its historical features. It touches and includes all that is most characteristic of mountain and plain, river and lake, sea-shore and forest. Within the limits of the kingdom may be seen the maize-fields and mulberry groves, the wheat-meadows, and the vineyards, that belong to the most fertile regions of Italy, and with them the snow-crowned peaks, the fir-clad ravines, the military highways, and the "inviolate

THE FEELING IN THE PAPAL STATES .- The Graves' in Elgin, at 4 o'clock, P. M. Papal government is full of apprehension for the future, and not without reason; for, not to speak of the menacing aspect of affairs beyond the Roman States, the excitement in the inte-rior increases from day to day. As one strolls through the Piazzi di Spagna or down the Corso, and watches the groups of curiosity hunters. some doubts might arise in the minds of the uninitiated as to the reality of this reported excitement. Nevertheless, it is not the less true, and I hear continually of those who have escaped the vigilance of the authorities, and have gone to join the national army. From Perugia, t is said that one hundred and seventy five oung men have gone to Piedmont, and among hem the two Counts Cesari and the two Counts Montesperelli. From Romagna tt 1s added that rom three to four hundred have left, and from Rome itself upwards of sixty. Passports are their several demands. now positively refused, so that other means of eating have been sought and found; perhaps what we commonly call "French leave" has been taken. The fact is, however, that the fernent increases, and that the youth do leave, ither by Civita Vecchia or by the land frontier. It is an indication of a much healthter state of ! hings than has long existed here, and a good
