THE LAST DAY. Day of wrath, that day of burning, All shall melt, to ashes turning, As foretold by Seers discerning.

Oh ! what fear it shall engender When the Judge shall come in splendour, Strict to mark and just to render.

Trumpet, scattering sound of wonder, Rending sepulchres asunder, Shall resistless summons thunder.

All achast when Death shall shiver, And great nature's frame shall quiver When the graves their dead deliver.

Book where every act's recorded, All events all time afforded Shall be brought, and dooms awarded.

When shall sit the Judge unerring, He'll unfold all here occurring, No just vengeance then deferring.

What shall I say that time pending ? Ask what Advocate's befriending, When the just man needs defending ?

King Almighty and all-knowing, Grace to sunners freely showing, Save me, Fount of good o'erflowing, Think, O Jesus, for what reason Thou endur'dst earth's spile and treason, Nor me lose in that dread season.

Seeking me, thy worn feet hasted, On the cross, thy soul death tasted-Let such labour not be wasted.

Righteous Judge of retribution, Grant me perfect absolution. Ere that day of execution.

Culprit-like, -heart all broken, On my cheek shame's crimson token-Plead the pardoning word be spoken.

Cheer with hope my lost condition.

Though my prayers do nothing merit, What is needful, thou confer it— Lest I endless fire inherit.

Mid the sheep a place decide me, And from goats on left divide me, Standing on the right beside thee.

When th' accursed away are driven,---To eternal blessings given, Call me with the bless'd to heaven.

I beseech thee, prostrate lying, Heart as ashes, contrite sighing, Care for me when I am dying.

On that awful day of wailing Human destinies unveiling, When man rising, stands before thee, Spare the culprit, God of Glory.

The Temptation.

William Carter arose from a fitful and uneasy slumber. The night had been cold and windy-such a night as December usually brings among the hils of New Hampshire. William's bed was hard, and the cold wind had found its way through many a crack and crevice in his ruinous cottage ; but he might have slept if his mind had been at ease. His wife was a delicate woman ; toil and exposure brought on a lingering illness, and she lay all night moaning with pain and shivering with cold. William arose, and having kindled a fire went forth into the open air. The clouds were black and heavy and the wind swept in gusts through the naked trees. Away in the distance the tops of the hills were already white with snow. He had engaged a day's work on a neighbouring farm ; but it was useless to go ; the farmer would not work that day, so he turn. ed away with a heavy step and entered his dwelling. The children were soon stirring, and the pale, suffering mother rose from her couch to prepare the morning meal. A few potatoes were boiled for the father and children, and a cup of gruet prepared for herself.

William Carter and his wife had seen better days; but sickness and misfortune, the fraud of some, and the cruelty of others, had driven them forth from their pleasant home, which he had spent the strength of his early manhood to purchase, and forced them to take shelter in their present miserable abode.

"Why can't we have some bread and butter ? soid little James, a child six years old, pushing away the potato that was offered him. "We used to have bread and pies, and I don't want pota oes all the time.'

There has been so much practiced under the pretence of furnishing the public with superior medicines that the in venter of a GENELISE ABTICLE only begs that each one would try for himself, for society demands that Good Medicines should be made public. Even those which do possess some sirtue are held at such exorbitant prices that they do not come within reach of the poor; while they, above all, are the most liable to suffer from the consequence of neglect and Do not the poor suffer daily? It is true they do, for the

No not the poor suffer daily? It is true they do, for the want of a medicine which they are unable to purchase.— The proprietor of the Vegetable Cough Candy has obviated this difficulty by inventing a Medicine compounded of twenty-nine different ingredients, extracted from the Vege table Kingdom, and sold at a price which will place it with-in the reach of all. It is well known that many ingredients when used singly are inefficacious, but when combined with others are h ghly salutary.

Macer's Vegetable Cough Candy
