Among those lovely flowers there grew A lily, frail, but very fair ; 'Twas purer than the driven snow .-That lily was my tenderest care.

I gazed not on the roses bright, Or sought the lowly violets' bed ; If my sweet flower could bloom for aye, I cared not though the rest were dead.

But ah! it was not left me long,-There came a cruel blast one day; It passed the rest unheeded by, But took my favorite flower away.

I mourned my loss with childish grief, Nor loved that little garden more; But always wandered from the flowers That bloomed around the cottuge-door.

I had a little sister once-The idol of our family ; As fair and lovely as my flower, Too pure for earth she seemed to be.

When shadows flitted o'er our sky, With childish prattle free from guile, She kissed the starting tear away, And lit our faces with her smile.

Death looked iato our cottage-door, And singled out this shining prey; And ere we knew that he was there, He bore her in his arms away.

And when our darling Carrie died,

And passed from out this world sf sin, The gates of Heaven flew open wide, "To let the little stranger in." Her short earth-pilgimage is donehe rests on Jordan's other shore:

And now we think of her as one "Not lost, but only gone before." Montreal, August 17, 1859

The Babe in Prison.

"Under sentence for murder !" The whispered words made me tremble. I could hardly gather courage to look within -but on turning my head uneasily, my gaze was arrested by the sight of a white face that in all the features but the eyes seemed dead. Those two lights set in the livid face, burned and glowed as if a fire, deep and intense, blazed behind them. "Under sentence for murder !"

I looked at the white hands—at the beautiful organization, so undulating and graceful in every outline-and then the blood-red form of murder stalked before me. Had this fair being been in league with such as he? Had those gory fingers, from which the life of many a heart fell in thick, heavy drops to the ground, fondled the white hands of the woman! Yes, it was too true. Tempted, and yielding to the temptation, she had sent the soul of a man unprepared to meet God. Awful thought! A temple of God's own workmanship destroyed by the hand of a wo-

Thus I thought, with those eyes haunting me. I longed to tear away the coverings of that poor, weak heart, to see what emotions were doing battle there just then. Whether the woman hated me for intruding upon her misery-whether defiant thoughts of man's mercy or dread of God's judgments were uppermost, whether before her mental vision, stamped on the walls of the chambers within, whichever way she looked, her crime met and appalled her-or if the consience were iron and the heart adamant.

But one eye only could pierce those depths -nothing could be told from her manneronly that she hoped no longer-perhaps had done fearing.

Just as I was leaving, the jailor passed by, and the woman, her face changing from its apathy, sprang forward. Her eye burned less fiercely-and I never can forget the voice with which she cried, "Have you brought my child?"? The man shook his head.

"Will you bring my child?" she cried, in the same fearfully low tones. "I believe they are bringing her" was the

Another change came over the woman .-A fierce, wild joy, lighted up her face, while every fibre in her body seemed quivering Her teeth were locked in her lips-then she would press her folded arms to her bosom and look round so helplessly! so imploringly!

Suddenly there was a sound of footsteps. The woman seemed to dilate in all her frame -her arms flew forward convulsively, then catching her breath, she held against the

A sweet, innocent face came along those gloomy walks-an angel-face, pure as the dew-drop, with silken tresses curling over the tinted cheeks, and lips reddened with the sweet breath of infancy.

Then came a cry! I never heard such a sound before—I hope never to hear such another. Now-the pale cheeks of the woman were dashed with red. It seemed as it all the blood in her heart had leaped up to them. Her arms outstretched shook with delirious eagerness-her lips quivered like asper leaves, and down from these eyes no longer defiant, rained the tears of mingled love and despair. She clutched at the bars as if her single strength could wrench them from their sockets, and when the door was open she flew towards the child with inartieyes, its silken curls, its lips, its little hands;

A crowd of shouting children playing near a fountain stopped short, and held their breath in admiration as the chariot passed.

"Ah," said they, " is he not great and happy?"

As they swept on towards the palace, they passed a company of peasants, busy at work, in the vine yards. These paused in their work, their hands filled with the purple fruit, and feasted their eyes on the royal splendor.

The Martyred Blind Boy.

In the reign of "Bloody Mary," of Engand, when the good Bishop Hooper was about to be burned to death, a blind boy, by much importurity, prevailed on the guard to bring him to the bishop. This boy had lately suffered imprisonment in Gloucester for confessing the truth. After the bishop had examined him concerning his faith and the cause of his imprisonment, he looked on him stedfastly, tears standing in his eyes, and in our city. He was loved by all who knew said, "Ah, poor boy. God hath taken from thee thy outward sight, for what reason he gloom over the business men of our place, best knoweth; but he hath endued thy soul and it was hard to realize that he who, only with the eye of knowledge and faith. God give thee grace continually to pray unto him, that thou lose not that sight, for thou shouldst then be blind in body and soul."

The boy's name was Thomas Dowry. How often or how long he had endured imprisonment for the trutn's sake is not known; but on his final examination he was brought before Dr. Williams, Chancellor of Gloucester, made. It was resolved that the festival and sitting judical with the register of the dtocese in the consistory, near the south door of the been witnessed in this part of our land. The place of my residence is most intimately connected with the railroad on which the calamity occurred. On the morning after the fatal night, business called me into the vicinity of the telegraph-office. I then heard the brief but awful import of the message received. It stated that upwards of thirty were killed, and among these was a certain young man known to almost every one him. The news of his sudden death cast a a few hours before, had passed along these streets, was now in eternity.

The news of the disaster reached us on Tuesday morning. The next evening had been designated as the time for opening a magnificent hotel just completed. Guests from a distance in great numbers had been invited. Extensive preparations had been ball should be the grkatest that had ever great design. The citizens all felt deeply interested in the opening of such a splendid and popular establishment. Many of them tions for the bail.

On Tuesday morning, at the very time that the sad message reached our city, a young married woman, the mother of two lovely children, was busily engaged in making certain purchases to complete her equipment for the following evening. Her doting husband had given her spos al directions to procure these articles. He had left the ciry only a short time before, and she expected to meet him at the depot that very morning. While yet engaged in one of the stores, the message came. It brought the news that the young man mentioned above, her husband, was attend that ball.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. A compound remedy in which we have la bored to produce the most effectual alterna tive that can be made. It is a concentrated extract of Para Sarsaparilla, so combined with other substances of still greater after lative power as to afford an effective antiote for the dise uses Sarsaparilla is reputed to cure. It is beleived that such a remedy is wanted by those who suffer from Strum-ous complaints and that one which will accomplish their cure must prove an immeuce service to this large class of our afflicted fellow citizens. How completly this compound will do it has been proven by experiment on many of the worst cases to be found in the following complaints—Scorfula and Scrofilous complaints. Eruptions, and Eruptive Diseases, Ulcers, Pimples, Blotches, Tumors, Salt Rheum Scald Head, Syphilis and Syphilic Affections, Mercural Disease, Dropsey, Neuralgia or Tic Doulouroux, Debility, Dyspepsia, and Indigestien, Erysipelas, Rose or St. Authony's fire and indeed the whole class of complaints arising from Imparity of the blood.

This compound will be found a great promoter of health when taken in the spring, to expel the foul humors which fester in the blood at that season of the year by the timely expulsion of many of them rankling d sorders are nipped in the bud. Multitudes can by the aid of this remedy spare thems lives from the endurance of foul eruptions and ulcerous sores through which the system will strive to richtself of corruptions, if but ass sted to so through the natur al channels of the body by an alternative medicine. DECEIVED per Admiral and Eastern City from more because many preparations, pretending to be concentrated extracts of it contain but little of the virtue of Sarsa arilla, or any thing else. During late years the public have been misled by large bottles, pretending to give a quart of extract of Sarsaparilla for one dollar. Most of those have been frauds upon the sick, for they not only contain little if any Sarsaparilla. but often no curative proportions whatever. Hense bitte and painful disappointment has followed the use of the various extracts of Sarsaparilla which flood the market. until the name of itself is justly despised, and has become synonymous with imposition and cheat. Still we call the ompou d Sarsaparilla, and intend to su ply such a remedy as shal rescue the name from the load of obliquy while it rests upon it. And we think we have ground for heleiving it has virtues which are irresistables by the ordidary run of the diseases it is intended to cure.
