Hovetry. Written for the Religious Intellingencer. BY BENJAMIN F. RATTRAY.

" Set your affections on things above ; and not on things on the earth."

O why all this clinging to earth, This sin stricken, sorrowing state ; Forgetting the spiritual birth, Likewise the Impenitent fate !

Time, time, hear the strong angel cry, Time, time, it will soon cease to be; O set your affections on high, Repent, Beleive and be free.

No longer in darkness abide, No longer consent to be there; Make an effort, whatever betide To escape from old Giant Despair.

O set your affections in heaven, The glorious home of the soul, O wash and be cleansed from pollution ; Christ's blood can alone make you whole.

The thought, (how consoling inspiring) This pilgramage journey shall end And then where affections were centered Our songs shall eternally blend.

DO NOT I LOVE THEE ?

Do not I love thee, dearest Lord ? Behold my heart and see ; And turn the dearest idol out That dares to rival thee.

Is not thy name melodious still To my attentive ear? Doth not each pulse with pleasure bound My Savior's voice to hear?

Hast thou a lamb in all thy flock I would disdain to feed ? Hast thou a foe before whose face I fear thy cause to plead ?

Would not my heart pour forth its blood

GOOD MOTHERS.

I was once on a visit at a gentlemen's house in the town of Huntington, and my attention was arrested by a picture that hung in the dining-room. It represented an aged woman in homely dress, It was not a fine work of art, and it boasted no decoration or peculiarity, but that of extreme simplicity of delineation, yet my eye rested complacently on that good, calm face. with its thoughtful eyes, and kind mouth, that one almost expected to break into a smile. looked at my host, he had similar bright dark eyes and open brow, and without asking, I was aesured the picture, with the plain close cap and neat apron, represented his mother. Seeing my eyes fixed on the painting, my host came to my side as I stood gazing, and after a little pause, while a slight mist-it might be a gathering tear -dimmed his eyes, said half absteractedly, as though he was thinking aloud, " I know she was a sinner, because the Bible says all have sinned, so of course she like the rest of us must have been a sinner, but I cannot call to mind a word or deed she ever said or did that was sinful." I turned to him as he was speaking, and his eye caught the inquiring look of mine. He smiled and repeated, "Yes, it's true, my only knowledge that she was a sinner is, that the Bible says. " There is none righteous, no not one." " "What a testimony !" I exclaimed, "O, that my children could say the same of me!"

These words of my friend, a man not given to strong, still less to exaggerated expressions, sunk deep into my heart and led me to think a great deal more about mothers than I had ever previously done.

Reader, the best earthly blessing is a good mother, and the greatest earthly curse is a bad

Children may overcome the misery of bad father, but rare indeed, are the instances where they have esceped ruin when tney have had a bad mother. But I have not the heart to write about bad mothers ; it's satan's worst mischiefthe mystery of iniquity. Let us comfort our soul as we travel life's journey by thinking over some good mothers.

George Stephenson, the great railway engineer had a good mother. In all her proverty, and it was bitter, she was spoken of as "a raal caanny body," the highest praise her neighbors knew how to give.

Sir Humphrey Davy had a good mother, one who encouraged him to study ; one who during her widowhood devoted herself to her children, and taught them perseverance by her good example his frequent domestic and toreight wars calling up on God, "evening, morning, and at noon." Thank of Daniel, with the affairs of a hundred and twenty provinces burdening his mind, yet finding time to enter his closet three times a day, to pray and give thanks to God. Think of Wilbefore, whose life was spent amid the conflicting and dispating scenes of Parliament, yet neverallowing the hurry of business or the pressure of company to encroach upon his hallowed seasons of retirement. No time to pray! when the Saviour bids you "seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness." O, if your heart were right you would find time, on God, " evening, morning, and at noon."
