THE SPIRIT LAND.

BY BENJAMIN F. RATTRAY.

A vision I've had of a land far away,
A land where the night succeeds not the day;
A land where the waves of adversity roll
No more without mercy o'er body and soul.

A land where black clouds intercept not the sky,
Nor thunders shall mutter, nor lightnings fly,
No winds howl with fury our peace to disturb,
No dangers to fear, nor passions to curb.

A land where no sickness, nor sorrow, nor death,
Nor sin with its vile and deceivable breath
Have ever found entrance, for feign would it there Spread dire desolation through heavens pure air.

A land where base error can ne'er find a place,
Nor hold consultation with hells legion race;
For the king of that country has passed a decree
That from all such creatures his realm shall be free.

O, blessed abode, where the saints of the Lord
All see eye to eye and speak the same word;
Saying glory and honour, dominion and sway
Be unto the Lamb for ever and aye.

O, come then blessed Jesus I wait for the sound
Of thy chariot and horses o'erseraphic ground;
I stand on the mountains of anticipation,
And quietly hope to behold thy salvation.

PRINCIPLE PUT TO THE TEST.

BY COWPER.

A youngster at school, more sedate than the rest,
Had once his integrity put to the test:—
His comrades had plottled an orchard to rob,
And asked him to go and assist in the job.

He was very much shocked, and answered—"Oh no!
What, rob our poor neighbor! I pray you don't go:
Besides, the man's poor, and his orchard's his bread:
Then think of his children, for they must be fed."

"You speak very fine, and you look very grave,
But apples we want and apples we'll have,
If you will go with us, we'll give you a share,
If not, you shall neither have apple nor pear."

They spoke, and Tom pondered—"I see they will go;
Poor man! what a pity to injure him so!
Poor man! I would save him his fruit if I could,
But my staying behind will do him no good.

"If this matter depended alone upon me,
His apples might hang till they dropped from the tree;
But since they will take them, I think I'll go too,
He will lose none by me, though I do get a few."

His scruples thus silenced, Tom felt more at ease,
And went with his comrades the apples to seize;
He blamed and protested, but joined in the plan;
He shared in the plunder, but pitied the man.

Conscience slumbered awhile, but soon woke in his breast,
And in language severe the delinquent addressed:
"With such selfish and empty pretences away!
By your actions you're judged, be your speech what it may."

Miscellany.

UNSEEN WRETCHEDNESS.

The misery of a great city cannot be seen at a distance. It must be examined near by and in detail to know its true charcteristics and extent. In looking in upon some places of resort for the vicious poor, last week, with a friend who is familiar with the worst localities, strange and startling scenes were discovered. They range all the way along the journey of life, from "the cradle to the grave," with the nameless surroundings of abject proverty, squalid vice, and the lowest imaginable personal suffering and degradation.

There are places in New York where men and women, and children too, live and vegetate, which are unfit for a decent dog to occupy. Hundreds of houses, with cellars and garrets, populous as a pigsty, and quite as dirty, are to be found in Mulberry and Baxter streets, and all the region round about 'Five Points." In one of these dismal dens, blackened by time and smoke, and saturated with the vilest odors, and so low in its broken ceillings, that an ordinary adult could not stand erect, were gathered one day last week, not less than nine of the vilest-looking remnants of humanity the sun ever shone upon. They were lying about and sitting down among their wretched furniture so closely, that it was difficult to enter, and the darkness was prevented from being total only by crevices in the walls, and a broken window. They were women, with one exception: all low thieves and vile drunkards, some of them nearly ready to go up, and others just liberated from Blackwell's Island.

In another wretched apartment where proverty was struggling against dirt, and the influence exerted by the "House of Industry" upon children, was trying to make parents have an appreciation of cleanliness and respectability, there were husband and wife in a low, dingy garret, and five little children, Three of them were sitting on the floor, eating something of the consistency of dirt and water, while in another quarter was a pile of vibratory rags, concealing two new-born infants. They were twin girls, little, shrivelled, gaunt faces, with bodies so small and so attenuated that they seemed a caricature upon poor humanity, and easily mistaken for kittens. Here was an illustration of the how and the why two and three hundred children die weekly in this city. Most of them are born in squalid wretchedness, the first objects they see and here and smell, bearing along the seeds of degradation, disease and death.

In the "House of Industry," a little girl gathered in from some haunts of poverty and crime lay dead in one of the upper rooms. She was a poor emaciated little creature of some six or eight summers,—if life had ever experienced any summer in her brief existance. Extended on one of the benches waiting for her shroud and sepulcher, the little paupers would come up and look with hushed astonishment at her cold motionless face, and then run away again without a full appreciation of its meaning. Wretched in her life, death brought a welcome release from suffering, although her closing hours had been made comfortable by the unwearied attentions of Christian friends in that noble and blessed institution.—N. Y. Observer.

ADULTERATION OF LIQUORS.

It is generally known that intoxicating liquors drank at the present day are greatly adulterated, though there is not so definite knowledge on the subject as would be desirable. We therefore present the following results of scientific investigation, which ought to be universally diffused:

A letter from Dr. Hiram Cox, official Inspector of Liquors at Cincinnati, has been published, which contains some remarkable statements relative to the adulteration of liquors. He says that a Cincinnati druggist, desirous of obtaining some pure liquor as a medicinal article, purchased in New York two half-pipes of extra "Seignette brandy." one pale and the other dark. He called the Doctor's attention to his "beautiful pure brandy," which the Doctor at once tested by inserting some blue "litmus" paper. It came out as red as scarlet. He then put a polished, "spatula" (an instrument for spreading plasters) into a tumbler containing half a gilll of the liquor, allowing it to remain fifteen minutes, at the end of which time the liquor was black as ink. The spatula corroded, and when dried a thick coating of rust appeared, which when removed left a copper coat almost as thick as if it had been plated. A chemical analysis of these liquors resulted as follows:

"First sample (dark,) 55 per cent. alcoholic spirits by volume, and 41 per cent. by weight; specific gravity 0 945. The tests indicate Sulphuric Acid, Nitric Ether, Prussic Acid, Guinea Pepper and an abundance of Fusil Oil. Base—common whiskey, not one drop of wine.

Second sample, (pale,) 54 per cent. alcoholic spirits by volume, 40 per cent. by weight; specific gravity 0955. This article has the same adulterations as the first, but in greater abundance, with the addition of Catchuc."

The druggist was forbidden to sell the brandy, and in consequence refused to pay the New York dealer for it. The latter sued him in the Cincinnati courts but lost his case, the poisonous character of the liquor being fully demonstrated. Dr. Cox remarks:

"I was appointed to the office of Chemical Inspector on the 19th day of March, 1855. Since then I have made upwards of 600 inspections of stores, and lots of liquors of every variety, and positively assert that 90 per cent. of all that I have analyzed were adulterated with the most pernicious and poisonous ingredients. Since my appointment I have, as physician to the Probate Court, examined upwards of 400 insane cases, two-thirds of which number became insane from drinking the poisonous liquors sold at the groggeries and taverns of our city and country. Many of them were boys of from 19 to 20 years of age, some of whom were laboring under a hereditary taint—and perhaps in many of them the mental derangement would never have been developed had they not drank of those poisonous decoctions."

The following incident shows what sort of liquor is furnished to the poor fellows who frequent low groggeries.

"I called at a grocery store one day, where liquor also is kept. A couple of Irishmen came in while I was there and called for some whiskey, and the first drank, and the moment he drank the tears flowed freely, while he at the same time caught his breath like one suffocated or strangling. When he could speak, he says to his companion—'Och, Michael, but this is warming to the stomach!' Michael drank and went through like contortions, with the remark, 'Wouldn't it be foine in a cowld frhosty morning?"

After they had drank I asked the landlord to pour me out a little in a tumbler, in which I dipped a slip of litumns paper, which was no sooner wet than it put on a scarlet hue. I went to my office, got my instruments and examined it. I found it had 17 per cent, alcoholic spirits by weight, when it should have had 40 per cent. to be proof, and the difference in per centage made up by Sulphuric Acid, Red Pepper, Pelitory, Costic Pottasa and Brucice, one of the salts of Nucis Vomicæ, commonly called Nux Vomica. The pint of such liquor would kill the strongest man."

Alchohol in any form, as a beverage, is bad enough; but when mixed with the most noxious and poisonous compounds, it become awfully destructive. It should be understood, also, that very nearly if not quite all that is now sold in the shops under the name of wine, brandy, &c., even when advertised as pure, is adulterated as described above. No wonder that Heidseck's (headsick) Champagne and the like make the brain reel, and send their victims to a speedy grave. Who can be willing to drink such compounds, to say nothing of being a drunkard now-a-days? Time was when one might be what is called a moderate drinker, or even a drunkard and yet prolong his days; but now, unless the system is proof against rank poison, there is no safety but in totalabstinence.—Morning star.

MODERATE DRINKING.

Let any of our readers ask himself or herself the simple question—How many moderate drinkers have I seen turning out confirmed drunkards and perishing in their iniquity? Little did that young lady think that her end would be a fearful and a shameful death! She was beautiful, intelligent, accomplished, amiable. She married a man in every way worthy of her heart and hand—a man who held a high position in his country's eye. She was the mother of several children.—She was quite a moderate drinker. Nobody suspected that anything was wrong. Yet as years hurried on in their course—as the flush of youth gave place to staid demeanour of mature womanhood, and as her raven locks were becoming inte-spersed with grey hairs, the appetite for strong drink was becoming daily more powerful. Her husband suspected no wrong—hoped for the best for a long time: but at length the fearful fact flashed on his mind, and he had not another day of happiness in this world. He died disappointed, grieved, broken-hearted. She survived him several years, a disgrace to her family, a nuisance to all her friends.

Well do we remember that sweet sunny Sabbath morning, as we ware walking leisurely to our place of worship, encountering this Lady (for to such a title her position in society entitled her) staggering home with a bottle of rum under her arm. Most melancholy sight! Well for her husband that he had slept his last sleep before that sad morning! Once that woman was a regular, if not a devout, worshipper, and one was sure to find her in her accustomed seat in the House of God. Now, when the snows of threescore and five years are on her head, she is tottering home at half-past ten o'clock, Sabbath morning, with a bottle of rum! And it was bought by means of a borrowed shilling. Her husband was a man of great wealth. His family also was left wealthy, but they found it necessary to keep every shilling out of the reach of the unfortunate mother.

That Sabbath morning she managed to borrow a shilling and the result was what we have described! Alas for human frailty! This poor woman—this lady—continued to drink till the day of her death; and her end was inexpressibly awful. We will not describe it now—for by doing so the subject of our sketch might be identified. This one out several cases which have come under our own observation. How many such cases have occurred even in course of the last few years in this province we will not venture to say. But the lesson they teach is plain and unequivocal. Avoid the very appearance of evil. Resist the beginnings of the fearful appetite for stimulants.—Abs. Journal.

SONG OF THE DECANTER.

There was an old decanter and its mouth was gaping wide; the rosy wine had ebbed away and left its crystal side;
and the wind
went humming, humming, up and down the sides it flew,
and through the reed like hollow neck
the wildest notes it blew. I placed it in the window where the blast was blowing free, and fancied that its pale mouth sang the queerest strains to me. "They tell me—puny conquerors! the Plague has slain his ten, and War his hundred thousands of the best of men; but I"—twas thus the bottle spake—"but I have conquered more than all your famous conquerors, so feared and famed of yore. Then come, ye youth and maidens all, come drink from out my cup, the beverage that dulls the brain and burns the spirit up; that puts to shame the conquerors that slay their scores below; for this has deluged millions with the lava tide of woe.
Though in the path of battle darkest waves of blood may roll; yet while I killed the body, I have damned the very soul.
The cholera, the sword, such ruin never wrought
as I, in mirth or malice, on the innocent have brought.
And still I breathe upon them, and they shrink before my breath;
and year by year my thousands tread the dismal road to Death."

Alarm Bell.

THE LAST TIME.

There will be, kind readers, a last time to us with all things earthly. A last time we shall have of enjoying the privilege of attending the house of God. A last sermon we shall hear. A last time we shall have the privilege of attending the social praying circle—of inviting the thoughtless to come to Jesus, and be forgiven.

A last time to speak of the goodness of God, and urging sinners to come to this fountain of life.

A last time we shall have of speaking to a beloved brother or sister, or kind father or mother it may be, who know not as yet the blessedness of religion.

A last time the Sabbath-school teacher will have, of appearing before his class.

A last prayer the Christian will offer—a last hymn of praise he will sing.

There will be too, to the sinner, a last time; a last time of attending the prayer meeting, a last prayer he will ever hear offered for his salvation. A last sermon, a last Sabbath will ever dawn upon him.

There is to be, there must be, a last time to all these privileges which we now enjoy.

Do we rightly consider these blessings? The present is ours, it may be our last. Let us wisely improve each day and moment, as though it were indeed our last, then shall we be prepared for the unknown future.—Christian Era

A RISING ITALIAN PRACHER.—At this moment in Florence, a converted Romanist is preaching to crowds, who flock nightly to hear him. He is a man of great controversial ability, singularly eloquent, and endowed with a consummate tact which enable him even on such tender ground to walk with safety. Even when assailing, as he does, with all the force of a large and powerful sarcasm the doctrines of Romanism, he has the skill to avoid committing himself before the law, insomuch that M. Salvagndi, being applied to by the Archbishop of Florence to silence the heretic and expel him from the State, was able to reply, that having himself heard the preacher, he could vouch for the guarded care with which he restrained himself within the bounds of true and legitimate controversy. 'Go and listen to him, reverend father,' he is reported to have said, 'and you will hear many truths, such as we do not meet with every day of our lives.' The fame of this preacher, whose name is Mazzarella, is daily increasing, and in the same proportion are the efforts of the priests to silence or banish him.—Such is the enthusiasm of the people to hear him, that the doors of his chapel are besieged for hours before they are opened. Smaller signs than these have prognosticated great events.—and assuredly a great change must have come over the Italian mind, ere the claims of a scriptural preacher could be recognised and valued by a population long accounted the most frivolous and pleasure-seeking of Europe —English Paper.

DIAMOND CEMENT.—This is a most excellent material for repairing broken china, ornaments, jewelry, and nick nacks. Take half an ounce of gum ammoniac and a tablespoonful of water; melt them together till they form a milky fluid. Then take one ounce of isinglass and six wineglassfuls of water; boil together till the quantity is reduced one half; then add a glassful and a half of strong spirits of wine. Boil this mixture for three minutes, and then strain it through muslin, adding after while hot, the ammoniacal fluid formerly made. Finally, add half an ounce of tincture of mastic resin. The cement thus made is best preserved in small phials, in which it sets when cold. When required for use it can be liquified by placing the phial in a cup of boiling water.—Scientific American.

Ladies and Gentlemen in all parts of the world testify to the efficiency of Prof O. J. Wood's Hair Restorative, and gentlemen of the Press are unanimous in its praise. A few testimonials only can be here given, see circular for more, and it will be impossible for you to doubt.
47 Wall-street New York, Dec. 25th, 1868.
Gentlemen:—Your note of the 15th inst., has been received, saying that I had been benefitted by the use of Wood's Hair Restorative, and requesting my certificate of the fact if I had no objection to give it.
I award it to you cheerfully, because I think it due. My age is about 50 years; the color of my hair auburn, and inclined to curl. Some five or six years since it began to turn grey, and the scalp on the crown of my head to lose its sensibility and dandruff to form upon it. Each of these disagreeabilities increased with time, and about four months since a fourth was added to them, by hair falling off the top of my head and threatening to make me bald.
In this unpleasant predicament, I was induced to try Wood's Hair Restorative mainly to arrest the falling off of my hair, for I had really no expectation that grey hair could never be restored to its original color except from dyes. I was however, greatly surprised to find after the use of two bottles only, that not only the falling off was arrested, but the color was restored to the grey hairs and sensibility to the scalp, and dandruff ceased to form on my head, very much to the gratification of my wife at whose solicitation I was induced to try it.
For this, among many obligations I owe to her sex I strongly recommend all husbands who value the admiration of their wives to profit by my example, and use to i growing grey or getting bald. Very respectfully

MOTHERS

In presenting you with Dr. Eatons Infantile Cordial we desire to state its superority over every nostrum that nurse or quack has heretofore offered you
First it is a preparations of a regular physician, who is well qualified from much experience in infantile complaints to prescribe for them. Secondly—It is free from paregoric or opiate of any kind, and consequently relieves by removing the suffering of your child, instead of deadening its sensibilities. Thirdly it is put up with great care as a comparison of it with any other article for infantile complaints will show; the very ingredients from which it is distilled being dug from the forests under the directions of Dr. Eaton, many of them by his own hands. Fourthly—It is perfectly harmless and cannot injure the most delicate infant and is certain cure and relief in all the following cases which is its chief merit over every preparation viz:
For all Complaints attending Teething; such as Dysentry Colic &c.; a so for soften ng the gums and relieving pain. For egulating the bowels it is unequalled. For cold in the head it is a sure relief. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA.
Rx
A compound remedy in which weave labored to produce the most effectual alternative that can be made. It is a concentrated extract of Para Sarsaparilla, so combined with other substances of still greater alterative power as to afford an effective antidote for the diseases Sarsaparilla is reputed to cure. It is believed that such a remedy is wanted by those who suffer from Strumous complaints and that one which will accomplish their cure must prove an immeuce service to this large class of our afflicted fellow citizens. How completly this compound will do it has been proven by experiment on many of the worst cases to be found in the following complaints—
Scorfula and Scrofllous complaints, Eruptions, and Eruptive Diseases, Ulcers, Pimples, Blotches, Tumors, Salt Rheum Scald Head, Syphilis and Syphitic Affections, Mercural Disease, Dropsey, Neuralgia or Tic Douloureux, Debility, Dyspepsia, and Indigestion, Erysipelas, Rose or St. Anthony's fire and indeed the whole class of complaints arising from Impurity of the blood.
This compound will be found a great promoter of health when taken in the spring, to expel the foul humors which fester in the blood at that season of the year by the timely expulsion of many of them rankling disorders are nipped in the bud. Multitudes can by the aid of this remedy spare themselves from the endurance of foul eruptions and ulcerous sores through which the system will strive to rid itself of corruptions, if but assisted to so through the natural channels of the body by an alternative medicine. Cleanse out the vitiated blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in pimples, eruptions, or sores, clense it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the vains; clense it whenever it is foul and your feelings will tell you when. Even where no particular disorder is felt people enjoy better health and lives longer for cleasing the blood. Keep the blood healthy and all is well; but with this pulsum of life disordered, there can be no lasting health. Sooner or later something must go wrong and the great machinary of life disordered or overthrown Sarsaparilla has and deserves much the reputation, of accomplishing those ends. But the world has been egregiously deceived by preparations of it, partly because the drug alone has not all the virtue that is claimed for it, but more because many preparations, pretending to be concentrated extracts of it contain but little of the virtue of Sarsaparilla, or any thing else.
During late years the public have been misled by large bottles, pretending to give a quart or extract of Sarsaparilla for one dollar. Most of those have been frauds upon the sick, for they not only contain little if any Sarsaparilla but often no curative proportions whatever. Hense bitter and painful disappointment has followed the use of the various extracts of Sarsaparilla which flood the market, until the name of itself is justly despised, and has become synonymous with imposition and cheat. Still we call this compound Sarsaparilla, and intend to sustain such a remedy as shall rescue the name from the load of obliquy while it rests upon it. And we think we have ground for believing it has virtues which are irresistables by the ordidary run of the diseases it is intended to cure. In order to secure their complete eradication from the system, the remedy should be judiciously taken according to the directions on the bottle.
