nal nationality and allegiance. Mr. Seward cannot endure the delay of obtaining an alien act, serters who but he adopts the easier and more efficacious by prisoners mode of declaring that no foreigner shall land in the United States who has not a " passport from his own government, countersigned by a poor Irishman who has saved money to join his relatives and friends in Illinois or Michigan proceed to Dublin first to get a passport from " his own government"-either Lord Carlisle or Sir Robert Peel-and then pay a fee for the counter signature of a United States Consul? Does Mr. Seward intend so far to recognise the "Know Nothing policy" as to place a prohibitory duty in the shape of a passport system on the importation of the very men, many of whom in all h of the reprobability, would as readily join the federal army as earn a day's wages at less hazardous and ex-

> The result, of course, cannot be doubted. That stream of emigration which so unaccountably has proceeded from Great Britain to North America will be directed to Canada, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. We shall no longer hear of two hundred thousand British subjects landing in a year at New York and only a few thousands at Quebec. The numbers will be reversed, and the strength, population and prosperity of Canada will receive augmentation in the same proportion. When no sound of war shall be heard for any American government to recall the policy of exclusion which Mr. Seward has inaugurated. Emigration, like many other things, as often depends upon popular caprice as upon any peculiar advantages which one country may be supposed to possess over another. The present condition of affairs in the United States certainly offers no very great temptation to British emigrants. Land may be cheap and productive but Englishmen should they go there, will find not only heavy taxation, but an utter subversion of ordinary law and personal liberty. The merits of Canada will become better known and better appreciated, and Engand will retain in her allegiance thousands of subjects who otherwise might have resorted to a foreign and never very friendly country. The Cabinet att Washington no doubt has a right to say that the time has arrived when some check ought to be put upon immigration. The presence of a large foreign element armed with political power may be inconvenient, especially at a time of civil war, but if this be Mr. Seward's object, the subterfuge of a passport system, vexatious and harassing to the poor foreigner, is only a proof of that rash-ness and imprudence which Mr. Seward mistakes affects every European State, but yet we learn from Lord Lyon's letter to Earl Russell, published in last night's Gazette, that " this notice nac remain has been issued without any previous communication on the part of the Secretary of State with me, or so far as I know, with any 'of my collevagues, nor has it as yet been officially communicated to me." This is a most uncivil and disrespectful act, and we infer that it is to be attributed to the extremely hostile views which Mr. Seward has always entertained towards England-feelings which are not likely to be mollified by the freedom of speech which prevails in this country, and which may have some ineringly on fluence even in the Northern States, unless Mr. Seward should follow up his passport system by papers."

As that admits the holding of Exhibitions in every three years, we have made arrangements for a large attendance of Exhibitors and spectators, and have felt ourselves justified in incurring considerable expense in endeavouring to make the Building and grounds as commodious and attractive as time would permit.
