No recent political news of importance

Arrangements for the great exhibition of 1862 are in progress, and promises from foreign countries are said to exceed by far those received in connection with the exhibition of 1851. The building itself is rising above the ground, and though not of a "crystal" character, will be superior to its predecessor in spacioussness and convenience. This is only just—for what experience good for, if not to serve for a teacher? The first exhibition was regarded as a kind of apotheosis of Peace, and perhaps that was the reason why that godship was invisible in 1854. We want her on earth as well as in heaven.

The Pope obstinate as ever, and a "crisis" is expected, arising out of a quarrel between one of the Cardinals, Monseigneur Merode, and General Guyon, the French Commander. The papers attributed to General G. a spirited line of conduct which he has denied and has called upon the Government to contradict, but the Moniteur is silent because, say the wits, the Government want to show the General what he ought to have done, though he did not do it. On the same principle we may account for some of the older Bonaparte's bulletins, as intended to notify the brilliant victories which were not gained, only should have been! The Austrian difficulty with Hungary is no nearer adjustment. The Diet is unanimous in opposing the Imperial Rescript, and not having the means of military resistance is bent on wearing out Francis Joseph's anti-constitutional predictions.

most of the troops, and turned the red tide of battle against the veterans of France, fighting under the eye of the Emperor, had never been under fire before. He will require much hard fighting on the part of the Federalists to retrieve for them that good opinion of their soldierly abilities which they commanded previous to the rout of the 21st of June. The United States Government is now discovering what it was tried our troops in the Revolutionary war. In every pitched battle the Colonians were routed; and but for Washington's extraordinary care, and his opponents' extraordinary carelessness, that war would have ended very differently for the Stars and Stripes. I do not argue that the present result must be successful because that of 1775 was; but there are closer marks of resemblance between the case at least in a military point of view, than Northern men are ready to perceive. With regard to our expenses they are entirely with

Of ecclesiastical intelligence I have not time to speak at large. Mr. Spurgeon in his tabernacle, as handsome as it is capacious, crowded audiences to listen to the gospel, is a great good—and to the gospel Spurgeon is somewhat of a drawback. The death of the Bishop of Carlisle places another in Lord Palmerston's gift. The late prelate is a leader of the Low Church (Evangelical) considered a very good man. He acquired real censure, you will remember, by putting a young man, his son-in-law, into the rich see of his diocese. There will be a fluctuation of clerical circles concerning his successor. NORTH AND SOUTH.

Nothing important has transpired at the Seat of War this week. Preparations seems to be going forward on both sides for fiercer conflict. Numerous arrests are being made by the Federal government of persons supposed to be aiding the rebels, among them the Mayor of Washington. A large number of ladies are suspected of disloyalty, and some of them are placed under the strictest surveillance of the police. It is not improbable but the next battle may be fought near Washington, and which may to a great extent decide the future of this unnatural contest. From our American exchanges we subject interesting extracts on the condition of the army and the country.

The N. Y. Observer under the heading "Our greatest National Vice" says:—

If we were called upon to name the evil nearest to that of civil war, with which this country at present afflicted, we should probably astonish many a reader who has so long heard of

Distress in Consequence of the war
The most melancholy pictures of both the present and future of the American States are drawn by some of the most discreet and enlightened of the American journals. The riches of the merchant princes of New York and other cities are being swept away like dust in immense marble palaces which were constructed in some of the great cities for places of business have depreciated to half their value, and a reaction in the expense of living has been produced by the war. God is having a contest with the people for their pride and extravagance. The N. Y. Independent writes in its commercial column:
says:—

crisis should inevitably sweep over the whole country, the law of the land would stand by exceptions to the general rule. Men who owe comparatively little to the community have large means and a host of friends to help them through. We would that facts could justify a more cheerful view of things—do not.

The failure of Claffin, Mellen & Co., merchants of this city, the past week has been the foundation of credit and confidence they could not stand, who can ?" is no claim on every side. They managed a money business with great sagacity and ability and they have, as their assets show, attained a position of wealth and money from year to year.

It is not surprising that they were approached by some for doing such an business, and that they were not of the worst of the worst. They were supposed to be more careful than others. Certainly not. Small failures are numerous now as large ones. Can ness man be expected to calculate the wholesale repudiation as that which is the law of the whole South? Certainly ordinary or even extraordinary times will live surplus of capital will save any business from even the thought of trouble, but man is safe who has not the money left to cancel every debt that can be brought home. A surplus of property will not surplus of notes and accounts will not must be a surplus of money.

The failure of the well known firm is a great calamity. Thousands will it here and elsewhere, directly or indi-

BOY BURNED TO DEATH.—On Sunday Evening about 6 o'clock, a fire broke out in a barn adjoining a house owned by Mr. Wm. Lockhart, nearly opposite the Baptist Chapel, Brussels Street. So fiercely did the flames rage that before assistance could be obtained the lives of the inmates were in peril, and we regret to state that a little boy aged 10, perished before the fire could be so far extinguished as to permit any one to go in search of him.
