

The Sweetness of the Christian's Experience. When the turbulent waves of affliction deep roll, And the waters of trouble encompass the soul. How sweet to the tempest-tost Christian to find 'Tis the trouble which Infinite Wisdom designed !

When the battle of life waxes hot and is sore, And the legions of hell maliciously roar, How sweet to the combatting Christian to know That the will of his Father appointed the foe !

When carnal professors the truth from them thrust, And would, if they could, tread us down to the dust, How sweet to the witnessing Christian to learn That the slaves of the devil God's freemen discern !

When the fogs of mistrust and heaviness rise, And thick clouds of darkness envelop the skies, How sweet to the suffering Christian to hear The firm Word of his Master, which maketh all clear ! add the of hear second here

When harassed and worn by the labors of day, Oppressed and fatigued by the toils of the way, How sweet to the travelling Christian to lean On the strong arm of Jesus, His succour to glean !

When the Lord's hand seems straitened and all is in gloom,

How sweet to the yet wrestling Christian to bear Ris wants to his Jesus in incense of prayer!

When the backslider, grieved for his folly returns, And the flame of pure love in his breast again burns, How sweet to the prodigal Christian to find, As his Father was once, so he ever proves-kind !

When the future appears uncertain with trial, And the enemy's forces rally the while, How sweet to the poor trembling Christian the word, "I, Jesus, am with thee-thy God is thy sword !"

When the last dying throes of sickness assail, Prepares to be rent round eternity's veil, How sweet to the conquering Christian at death. That Jesus attends to receive his last breath !

When all the election of grace are brought home, And the day of full triamph of Jesus has come, How sweet to the glorified Christian the strain, "Alleluia ! All hail! Alleluia !" again." A TRUMPETER IN THE KING'S ARMY. * "And again they said, Alleluia !"-key, xix. 3.

The Lamp in the Dark.

" Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path."

It was a bleak, cold, winter's evening, the clouds were dark and stormy, the wind blew loudly, and the rain pattered against the casement. On the hearth, inside a pretty little cottage, a bright fire was blazing, the kettle was steaming and hissing, the cat was stretching herself on the warm rug, curtains were drawn, the supper-table was arranged, all looked as though some one was expected, whilst Mrs. Rogers, the owner of the tidy little cottage, wan- rarely waited, according to his frank confession, dered about from the door to the fire, and from for deeds. Hearing once that a certain schoolthe fire back to the door, which she opened, remaster named Gelyn de Muler, of Audenarde, gardless of the blast of rain and wind that came in, vainly peering out into the darkness to see if some one was not coming down the lonely lane heresy. The schoolmaster claimed, if he were guilty of any crime, to be tried before the judge that led to her house. Whoever it might be that of his town. "You are my prisoner." said Tishe was looking for, certain it is that they did telmann, " and are to answer me, and none not come when they were expected, and Mrs. Rogers grew more and more uneasy.

"Foolish boy that he was to go of such night as this," she muttered to herself : " lads are always so thoughtless. But then, to be sure, it was for a good object," she added, relenting a master refused. " Do you love your wife and little. " The time was when I would gladly have walked three miles to a missionary meeting, but those days are past now for me, and I ought to be thankful that Jem isn't after anything worse.' And with this reflection Mrs. Rogers sat down more quietly than before, and took up her work. But it is no very easy thing to sit still and sew when the mind is full of anxiety, and this. Mrs. Rogers found out.

" Suppose he fail into the stone-pit," exclaimed she, after she had put a few stitches with forced diligence; and, with this new fear, she got up, and went to the door for the twentieth time, calling loudly on "Jem, Jem, my Jem," but the echo from the neighboring rocks, faintly repeating the word, was her only answer.

"Suppose I put the lamp in the window instead of on to the table," thought she to herself ; " the night is so dark, he might very well miss the house." So the lamp wan placed in the window, and the poor woman felt somewhat has bappier.
