"The Ministry, as I wrote you in my last, have positively decided upon recognition. The announcement made by Mr. Gladstone, a week ago, at Newcastle, was echoed and received with great enthusiasm a day or two ago at Southampton, by Lord Hardwick, in the presence of Lord Palmerston. The clamor for recognition increases daily, and the Proclamation of not go to the polls on account of McClellan being in the President has sensibly increased the clamor-for, while England and Europe would rejoice at any measure looking to a gradual and peaceful emancipation, consistent with the best interests of both the white and black races, they look with horror and indignation at a war of savage negroes upon women and children. In the expression of this indignation, the whole vocabulary of abuse is exhausted. Abolition, pure and simple, would have found a degree of sympathy; but abolition partial, and as a military act, meets with little but condemnation. There is no doubt that Lord Lyons carries to America the determination of England, France and Russia to recognize the Confederacy, and that he will also bear an earnest protest, on the part of these Powers, against any method of conducting the war which McClellan's removal is his disobeying orders in rethey may consider opposed to the usages of civili- fusing to advance for want of certain preparations,
