BY MRS. SEWELL .-- FIRST PART. The vellow fog lay thick and dim O'er London city, far and wide; It filled the spacious rocks and squares, Where noble lords and ladies ride.

It filled the streets, the shops were dark, The gas was burning through the day; The Monument was blotted out, And lost in gloom the river lay.

But thicker still, and darker far, The noisome smoke-cloud grimly fell Amongst the narrow courts and lanes, Where toiling people poorly dwell.

No sun above, no lofty sky, No breezy breath of living air, The heavy, stagnant, stifling fog, Crept here and there and every where.

Down seven steep and broken stairs Its chill unwelcome way it found, And darkened, with a deeper gloom, A low, damp chamber under ground,

Beside a woman on a bed; A worn-out woman, ghastly pale, Departing to the peaceful dead. Two little boys, in threadbare clothes,

A glimmering light was burning there,

Stood white and trembling by her side, And listening to his mother's words, The youngest of them sadly cried.

The elder boy shed not a tear, Nor stirred a moment from his place, But with a corner of the sheet He wiped his mother's cold, damp face.

"Ah, John!" she said, "my own dear boy, You'll soon be in this world alone; But you must do the best you can,

And be good children when I am gone. "And listen, John, before 'tis night, My weary spirit will be free; Then go and tell the overseer,

For he must see to bury me. "You'll walk behind my coffin, dears, There's little more I have to crave, But I should like to have my boys Just drop a tear beside my grave.

"And then you'll have to leave this room, Because the rent is not all paid,— Since I've been ill, I've let it run; You know, I've barely earned your bread.

"I don't owe much, I've minded that, And paid it up, though hardly pressed, The man must take the little things, And sell the bed to pay the rest.

"I've mended up your bits of clothes, It is not much you've left to wear, But keep as decent as you can, And don't neglect the house of prayer.

"I can't speak of your father, John, You know that he has been my death; If he comes back, you'll say, 'His wife Forgave him with her dying breath.'

"But oh, my children! when I'm gone, Do mind your mother's warning well, And shun all drinking, swearing ways, As you would shun the pit of hell.

"I'm going to a happy place, So beautiful and dazzling bright, 'Twas in a vision or a dream, It passed before me in the night.

"I felt my spirit caught away From all the crowd of toiling tolk, Above the cross upon St. Paul's,

And far above the fog and smoke. "And higher, higher up I went, Until I reached a golden gate,

Where all about, in shining rows, I saw the holy angels wait. "At once, they bid me welcome there, And all at once began to sing,

'Come in thou blessed of the Lord, For thou art welcome to the King. "Then one stepped forth and took my hand,

And spake like music, passing sweet, 'We have been watching for thee long, To bring thee to our Master's feet.'

"Then hand in hand we floated on, Through glowing fields of lovely flowers, And saw ten thousand happy souls At rest among the shining bowers.

"Our Saviour walked among them, John, Most beautiful He was to see, And such a heavenly smile He gave, When first He saw poor worthless me.

"And oh! the gracious things He spoke, I hardly could believe the word; 'Come in, thou faithful,' He said, And rest thee now beside thy Lord.'

"Then all around, I heard the sound Of joyous voices singing praise, And I stood there, and joined the song, And looked upon his blessed face.

"And as I looked, my heart grew strong, And then I fell before His feet; 'Dear Lord,' I said, 'I pray thee send An Angel to our wicked street.

"'I've left two little boys behind, To get through this bad world alone, And much, I fear, they'll miss their way, And never reach thy glorious throne.

"'I will,' He said, and then He called A beauteous Angel by his name, And swifter than an arrow flies, That beauteous Angel to Him came.

"And as I knelt before His feet, I heard the order plainly given, That He should guard my little boys, And bring them safe to me in heaven.

"I saw the Angel bow his head, And cast on me a look of love, Then spread his snowy wings to leave His blissful seat in heaven above.

"So do not fret about my death-I know you'll not be left alone, For God will send the Angel down,

To care for you when I am gone. "I'm sure you will have daily bread, For that the King gave strict command, And all the wealth of London town

Is in the power of His hand. "So never join the wicked lads To steal, and swear, and drink, and lie; For though you are but orphans here, You'll have a Father in the sky,

"I can't see plain what you should do, But God, I think, will make your way; So don't go to the workhouse, dears, But try for work, and always pray."

The woman ceased and closed her eyes, And long she lay, as if at rest, Then opened wide her feeble arms. And clasped her children to her breast.

And then aloft her hands she raised, And heavenward gazed with beaming eyes, "I see, I see, the Angel come, I see him coming from the skies.

"Good bye-good bye, my children dear, My happy soul is caught away; I hear, I hear, my Saviour call, He calls me up,-I cannot stay."

Then soared her soul from that dark room, Above the crowd of toiling folk, Above the cross upon St. Paul's, Above the fog, above the smoke.

And higher, higher, up she went, Until she saw the golden gate, Where night and day, in shining bands, The holy angels watch and wait.

And she went in, and saw the King, And heard the gracious words he spoke To her who, in this sinful world, Had meekly berne her daily yoke.

But sadly sobbed the little boys, As from the bed of death they crept; Upon the floor they sat them down, And long and piteously they wept.

The dreary walls around them closed, No father came to share their grief, No friendly neighbor heard their cry, None came with pity or relief.

They cried until their tears were spent, And darker still the chamber grew; And then said little Christopher, "Now, mother's dead, what shall we do?"

Then John rose up, and with his sleeve,

He wiped away the last sad tear, "Well we must go as mother said, And tell the parish overseer."

"But won't the Angel come to us?" "I cannot tell you," John replied; "I think he will," said Christopher, "My mother saw him when she died."

They stumbled up the broken stairs, And pushed their way along the street, Whilst out of sight an Angel bright, Walked close behind, with shining feet.

He stood behind them at the door, And heard the growling overseer, Then touched his heart with sudden smart, And brought an unexpected tear.

"Here lads," he said, "divide the bread, You both look hungry any way; We'll see about the body, child, And bury it on Wednesday."

The hungry children ate the loaf, And then the younger brother said, "Our mother told us right, you see, That was all true about the bread."

"It does seem so," was John's reply, "I say Chris, shan't you be afraid To go and sleep at home to-night, All in the dark there, with the dead?"

"Why should we, John? dead folks don't hurt, She would not hurt us, if she could, And as she laid upon the bed, She looked so happy and so good"

"Well, come down then-I'm not afraid." They entered in, and shut the door, And made a bed, as best they could, And laid them down upon the floor. (To be continued.)

WHAT A TESTAMENT DID.

It used to make me shudder to hear Willie Hpass the house, he was so profane. Many times I have called my little ones from their play, when I have seen Willie passing the house, as he drove a neighbor's cows to and from the pasture. Such vulgar and profane language I had never heard from the lips of a child. One day a lady called him to her.

"Do you go to a school, Willie?" A gruff "No," was the only reply. "Can you read?"

"No, not much; and don't want to." were very poor, and what is far worse, vicious, price paid for raw Fur skins. and the people with whom he lived saw little to | Oct 9.

You would not recognize him as the ragged, rough, vulgar boy of a year ago. He still passes my house with his daily errand, but the children are der, is seen in the Sabbath-school as often as the house with his daily errand, but the children are no longer called away at his approach. appeared to take little or no interest in learning, so that he was pronounced by his teacher a very dull scholar. He learned to read but very slowly, and finally neglected the school, thinking he should never succeed. There was a Bible class organso that he was pronounced by his teacher a very ized, which he was induced to attend. And here he soon began to manifest an interest in the study of the Scriptures. He learned to read very well, which much astonished his father, who was a very wicked man. One Sabbath his father took some nails and a hammer, to nail up a fence, when he was reproved by his little son who spoke about was reproved by his little son who spoke about Furnishing Goods, &c. &c. working on the Sabbath day, and invited him to Dec. 13 .-- wi attend public worship. away sorrowful. Not long after this, as the little boy returned from public worship, he went and looked over his father's shoulder, and observed that he was reading Hume's History of England. He went into the middle of the room, and said, "Father, where do you expect to go when you die?" Such a question from such a boy could not be borne,—"Away," said he, "from my presence immediately, or I will whip you." The child retired, but the latter was troubled. He went out to take a walk, but still a load was pressing upon his agonized soul. He thought of attending public worship, for nothing else seemed so likely to soothe his troubled feelings. He entered while the minister was at prayer, and that day was the beginning of better days to him. He sought from God forgiveness of his sins, and soon obtained the hope of eternal life.

A few years passed away, and the old man was on his dying bed. His son attended him constantly ministering to his spiritual wants. To a Christian minister the father said, "I am dying but I am going to heaven; and my son has been the instrument of saving my soul."-Soon his spirit was released, to be welcomed, as we have no reason to doubt, into the mansions of glory. Happy child! to be the instrument of saving his father from death. Happy parent to be blessed with such a child.—Facts for Boys.
