"OH SING TO ME OF HEAVEN" "Yes, sing to me of Heaven. Tell me not of the possibility of my sinking into hell; tell me not that I am in danger; tell me not that my soul may be lost; do not make me miserable, and gloomy, and unhappy ! Tell me of joys above; of white robes, and golden palms, and starry crowns. Tell me of the love and compassion of Jesus, of the preparation he has made for those who love him to follow him to his bright Home good." above, where there are 'many mansions.' O, is there not one for me? Then let gloom and dullness take to themselves wings and fly away, we will hope for the best; I will be a Christian bye and bye; 'My heavenly home is bright and fair, nor pain nor death can enter there."

Very, true, young pleasure seeker, there is a robe and a palm for you; a crown of glory to deck your brow; and a mansion where you may be forever a guest of Jesus. Yet there is a possibility that for a moment's earthly pleasure you will throw aside those priceless gems, you will bask in the sunshine of worldly joys, until alas! you find that they have not only stung you, but that you have no hope of joys above.

God has proclaimed himself to be "long-suffering and gracious, plenteous in mercy ;" yet he has as surely said in the inspired word "the soul that sinneth it shall die." O, that death ! it is not a sleep, not a calm and peaceful repose; it is a fearful thing, described only in the language of inspiration "everlasting burnings," "everlasting destruction" "blackness of darkness forever" &c.

How we do cling to sin-how hard, even when we believe it to be right to follow the dictates of conscience and God's Holy Word, is it to give up the service of Satan. What an astonishing power the adversary has over poor fallen man : truly "they are taken captives by him at his will." The improve, make good resolutions, and, like you, thought perhaps arises-if Satan has such a power over man, if man is delivered up to that power, what is the use of trying to serve God ? Man is not given up to Satan's power ; if he were, miserable indeed would be our condition : no, man has power, power and choice to serve his Maker and Preserver, or his enemy and destroyer, and man, foolish blind and deluded, yields this power to the adversary, strengthens his kingdom, serves his interest, and not only this but helps to rivet the chains of others also. What would we think of a youth belonging to our city, who should join the most urgent warnings, and throws himself and all that he might be, into the power of the deceiver. The first might say of the enemy of his country, that he joined him because he was more powerful and would ultimately succeed; but the unconverted sinner can have no such plea for his conduct, for he cannot but know and feel that God's power as well as his love "neither knows measure nor end." Shall we then sing of Heaven while perhaps we are serving Satan and hastening towards hell ? Heaven is a sweet, a cheering theme ; but let us not be deceived ; if we live in sin we are not fit inhabitants for that glorious home, but may expect to find our "destined place" with the master we have served, for the "wages of sin is BEULAH. death."

gifts upon you. Try and obey that blessed Saviour who has been a little child like yourself, and who has left to little children, as well as to grown persons, an example that they should follow. We read in his word that he obeyed his parents in the days of his childhood; and his word says also that he was 'meek and lowly of heart,' and so my Anne must also become meck and lowly of heart if she obey God."

"But, aunt, it is impossible ; it seems as if there is something in me that prevents me from being

"This something, my child, is your bad heart, and while that remains unchanged all must be bad. You know the Bible says, 'A corrupt tree cannot bring forth good fruit.' But the Lord can change it, and he has promised to do so for all those who ask him in Jincerity. You are fond of stories; would you like me to tell you one ?" "Oh, yes, aunt;" and the smile re-appeared upon the lips of Anne, who placed herself against er aunt's knee. "You have not forgotten your cousin Theresa ?" said Mrs. Grey, her eyes filling with tears, and her voice low and sad, for Theresa was her only child, and she had died of scarlet fever at the age of sixteen.

"Oh no, aunt. Though I was very young when my dear cousin died, I remember well how kind she always was to us, and how well she knew how to amuse us. We often tormented her, but she "Oh no, aunt. Though I was very young when was nover impatient; every one loved Theresa. Oh, dear aunt, if I could be like her !" And the child put her arms round Mrs. Grey's neck, and kissed the poor mother, who was now weeping at the rememberance of her lost darling.

After a few moments of silence she began "When Theresa was a very little girl she had some faults which troubled me greatly; she was violent, disobedient and passionate." "Aunt, it is impossible

 "Aunt, it is impossible !"
 "No, my child, it is quite true; Theresa, whom you knew so sweet, so gentle, so amiable to all, was, until she was six years old, one of the most troublesome children 1 ever knew. I often spoke to her of her sins; she would weep, promise to improve, make good resolutions, and, like you, fall soon again into the same faults. I read with her the word of God, I spoke to her of the Saviour. and she often seemed to take pleasure in listening, Sometimes I thought 1 saw in her some serious

Sometimes I thought I saw in her some serious impressions; then would come a temptation, the least difficulty in her lessons, and my poor Theresa would give way again to all her impatience and passion. I was very sad at seeing the faults of my dear child, and I ceased not to ask God to have pity on her, and change her heart. All at once I noticed a difference in Theresa's conduct, which delighted me. "Many days passed without my having any fault to find with her. She was sweet-tempered, youth belonging to our city, who should join the ranks of an enemy who was fighting against his Sovereign? Yet is not he worse who ungratefully casts aside the tenderest admonitions, and the Theresa came to me and said, 'Mamma, have you not been pleased with me for some days ?' "'Yes, my child, I have had every reason to be so, and I bless God for it, and pray to him to help you to persevere.'

The recent returns of duty made by Government for this latter year (1858) again show the "Royal" as more than maintaining the ratio of its increase as stated in former years. The amount of new Life Premiums received this year is by far the largest received in any similar period since the commencement of the business, and must far exceed the average of amount received by the most successful offices in the kingdom. The number of policies issued in the year was 832, the sum assured £387,752 6s. 8d., and the premium £12,354 8s. 4d. These figures show a very rapid extension of business during the last ten years. "It is impossible ! I have tried, and I cannot be good," cried little Anne, and she burst into

Her aunt Grey, who entered the schoolroom just then, and heard her crying, approached her and said gently, "What has happened, my child ? What is the cause of this great grief? Where is a good impression. your mother; is she in the house ?"

Anne's sobs redoubled at this question. " Oh no, aunt, mother is gone out with my sister. They are gone to take a walk, and I am left at home with the servant."

"My poor child," replied her aunt, "your mother must have been sorry not to take you out; but she surely had a good reason for thus punishing you?"

Anne hesitated a moment, and then repeated sadly, "Aunt, I cannot be good."

"How! you say that you cannot be good ? Are you sure that you have a sincere desire, and do what would help you to become so ?"

"Yes, I am sure I try, aunt; I wish to be good, for it is very sad to be always getting punished, Last night they sent me to bed an hour before my brothers and sisters went, and I said to myself, 'I will try to-morrow, and not do anything to deserve punishment.' But this morning, when getting up, I spoke in a naughty manner to the servant; I gave a slap to my brother, who was teasing me and when my sister Henrietta spoke to me about my faults, I answered her that it was no business of hers. I came to breakfast very cross, fought

"' Mamma,' said she, ' do you know how I try to be good ?'

"' No, my child,' said I.

"' When I feel inclined to be bold, I go into a corner, and I pray to God with all my heart to help me to be good, and then I can be.'*

" My dear Anne, the course of my Theresa's life proved the excellency of this way for being good. From that time she was what the word of God calls 'a new creature,' She never had a fit of passion, or disobedience; she was truly another child. I could not say all she became to her father and to me; I possessed in her at the same time a daughter and a friend. God has CONSTANTLY ON HAND. taken her from us very young, but we bless him for having given her to us, and we know that we Broad Cloths, Cassimeres, Doeskins, have returned her to him.

"Dear child, would you not wish to do as Theresa did ? would you not wish to seek with all your heart from the Lord the strength to conquer all your faults, and resist the sins which besct you? Ask, as Theresa did, and he will give to you as he did to her." Anne was much touched : she said little, but her aunt saw that she had received

Mrs. Grey knelt with the child and asked God to bless Anne, and give her the new heart which she needed. When they rose, Anne threw herself on Mrs. Grey's neck and said to her in a trembling voice, "My dear aunt, if the Lord make me good, as you have asked of him, perhaps I may be able to fill, in some degree, the place of your Theresa."

> Jesus, Saviour, pity me : Hear me when I cry to thee. I've a very naughty heart, Full of sin in every part ; can never make it good Wash me, wash me in thy blood.

Though I cannot cease from guilt, Thou canst cleanse me, and thou wilt; Since thy blood for sin was shed, Crown'd with thorns thy blessed head, Thou who once didst suffer so, Ne'er wilt bid me from thes go: Jesus, thou wilt pity me; Save me when I cry to thee.

for the cure of the disorders it entails. That it is far sup rior to any other remedy yet devised, is known by all who has given it a trial. That it does combine virtues truly extraordinary in their effect upon this class of complaints is indisputably proven by the great multitude of publicly known and remarkably cures it has made of the following diseases: King's Evil or Glandular Swellings, Tumor's, Eruptions, Pumples, Blotches and Sores, Erysipelas, Rose of St. Anthony's Fire, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Coughs from tuberculous deposits in the lungs, White Swellings, Debility, Dropsy, Neuralgia, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Syphilis and syphilitic Infections, Mercurial Diseases, Female Weaknesses, and, indeed, the whole series of complaints that arise from impurity of the blood. Minute re-ports of individual cases may be found in AYER'S AMERICAN ALMANAC, which is turnished to the druggists for gratuitous distribution, wherein may be learned the direction for its use, and some of the remarkable cures which it has made when all other remedies had failed to afford relief. Those causes are purposely taken from all sections of the country, in order that every reader may have access to some one who can speak to him of its benefits from personal experience. Scrofula depresses the vital energies, and thus leaves its victims far more subject to disease and its fatal results than are healthy constitutions. Hence it tends to shorten, and does greatly shorten, the average duration of human life. The vast importance of these considerations has led us to spend years in perfecting a remedy which is adequate to its cure. This we now offer to the public under the name of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, although it is composed of ingredients, some of which exceed the best of Sareaparitla in alterative power. By its aid you may distempers which lurk within the system or burst out on We know the public have been deceived by many com-
