The Morning Star, organ of the Freewill Baptist Denomination in the States, has commenced its Thirty-seventh volume. It was commenced by a company of brethren at Limerick, Maine, in 1826, and "advocated Gospel order, temperance, missions, Sabbath schools, education, and improvement generally." "Inaction in the cause of missions, education, support of the ministry, &c., had opened the way for many evils, disheartened some of the most talented and intelligent ministers, and prevented the union of many with the denomination who had been converted under the labors of its faithful preachers." The Star plead for reform and progress. It suffered some reverses during the first years of its existence, but survived them all. It is now the property of the Denomination, has a circulation, we believe, of six or seven thousand, and is an ably conducted religious paper. It is now published at Dover, N. H.

During the first three months of this year 873 emigrants arrived in Canada via Hamilton, against 619 during the same period in 1861.
