

nothing by delay, others construe the delay unfavourably. The Morning Post thinks that it diminishes the hopes of peace, and that the Washington Government will propose compromise which will not for a moment be entertained. The Times asks why decision should be delayed? If favourable to peace, and says, immediate surrender of Mason and Slidell would have been a greater blow to the Confederates than a victory on the Potomac and worth millions to the Federal Exchequer. The Daily News sees nothing but peace.

All the journals publish a semi-official account of the proceedings of Lord Lyons up to Dec. 23rd, when he presented formal demand. A definite answer is looked for in England by the 15th of January, and a Council of Ministers is summoned for the 14th.

Russell in his correspondence to the Times predicts refusal to surrender. He also says a victory over the rebels had become a political necessity, and McClellan was being pressed to advance.

The "Europa's" news caused an upward tendency in war risks at Lloyd's.

Paris Patrie and Pays both assert that Washington Government offered to restore Mason and Slidell on condition that England would not recognize the South.

The Morning Herald says that if the affair is settled, England and France have every inducement on commercial grounds, to recognize the well-earned independence of the Confederates, and unless this step is manfully taken by Ministers at once, it is certain to be taken by Parliament on assembling.

The Daily News, says, that any recognition of the Confederates is too abhorrent to English principles, to be really a subject for apprehension.

Additional Batteries of Artillery are under orders to embark.

The Times shows that by the beginning of February, Admiral Milne's squadron will number seven-line-of-battle ships, 33 Frigates, and 25 Corvettes and Sloops, and it speculates upon what he can do there-with.

Shipments of ammunition to the Atlantic Squadron continue unabated.

The Privateer Sunder on arriving off Cadix, with the officers and crews of three Federal merchant vessels, solicited permission to enter. The American Consul demanded that the request be refused, but it was granted on condition that the prisoners be placed under protection of Spain, and the Sunder entered the port without being saluted. It was rumored that the American Consul would leave on account of this resolution of Spain.

Parliament is summoned for the 4th February, but can be called earlier if exigency demands.

Text of Austrian despatch on Trent affair dated Vienna 18th is published, and fully justifies the act of England, says America may comply with the demand without the least sacrifice of dignity.

CANTON, Nov. 30th.—Coup de Etat at Peking. Cabinet imprisoned. New ministry formed under Prince Kong.

MELBOURNE, Nov. 15.—Gold shipments since last mail, 149,000 ounces.

The "City of Manchester" and the "Jura" arrived on the 8th. They brought intelligence of the adjustment of the Trent affair.

The news was received with the greatest satisfaction, but some journals complain of the ungracious manner in which the Washington Cabinet proceed; others accord due credit for the act.

Federal steamer "Tuscarora" arrived at Southampton, supposed to be looking after the "Nashville," which remained there ready for sea.

The vessels destroyed by the Sunder were, ship Vigilant, bark Eben Dodge, and schooner Arctide.

UNITED STATES.

By dispatches from the States we learn that a serious battle has been fought in Kentucky, resulting in the defeat of the Confederate forces with a heavy loss of men and army equipments. A large number of prisoners were taken. The Federal loss also was severe; one regiment lost 70 killed and wounded.

General Zollicoffer, of the Confederate forces, is among the killed in this battle. Congress has authorized two additional Secretaries of War to facilitate the army business. The late Secretary, Mr. Cameron did not co-operate unanimously with General McClellan.

Under the new head the War Department is organizing vigorously for active operations. Gen. McClellan is preparing to take the field, if not already in it.

The North seems confident of success, and in all probability the rebellion will be effectually suppressed within a few weeks, or it never will be. From various sources we select the following most important items of news:—

At last the forward movement has commenced, Burnside's expedition has set sail from Annapolis, and Forts on the same day, left Cairo. Our forces in Kansas and Missouri, in eastern Kentucky, and in both sections of Virginia, are ready to act in unison with them, and the final struggle with the monstrous rebellion is close upon us; any day may now bring the news of decisive events. Gen. Burnside's expedition sailed on the 9th, stopped at Fortress Monroe next day, to receive powerful accessions, and departed next morning. It will be far the strongest invading force yet sent out. The secret of its destination is so far perfectly kept, and Gen. B. having shrewdly secured the reporters, in a polite manner, all together on board one vessel. It does not even appear what it will be the number of vessels or men; but doubtless not less than 40 or 50 of the former, and 20,000 of the latter.—The Mississippi expedition is to consist of the enormous number of 78 steamers and 60,000 men.

To the west of the Mississippi, in Missouri and Kansas, the stern, decisive measures of Gen. Halleck, and the vigorous movements and preparations of Lane, Montgomery, and Jennison, appear to have about ended the career of the rebels in those States. Paris has retreated to Cowkin Prairie, in the south of Missouri; the railroad burners on the north of the river are undergoing their deserved punishment; and Lane is preparing for a rapid and energetic advance to the southward, which, in co-operation with the movements down the Mississippi, can hardly fail to wipe out all the strength of the rebellion as he proceeds. He will find powerful allies in the friendly party among the Indians west of Arkansas, now in arms under the Creek war-chief, Opothe-ohole, whose force, in the first days of the year, repulsed an attack of Texans and rebel Indians, killing many of them, with small loss. Lane's force, which is to rendezvous at Fort Leavenworth, is to be 30,000, and he sensibly purposes to live on the enemy's supplies, and to use the enemy's negroes to do the drudgery of his army.

In Western Virginia the unbroken series of Union victories has been increased by a handsome affair in Tucker county, where 800 of the 28th Ohio, under Capt. Lacey, were sent by Gen. Milroy against 400 rebels there, dispersed them, captured several, killed and wounded a number, and captured a large amount of stores. On the Upper Potomac, nothing of importance has occurred.—Gen. Jackson, after his foolish bravado of trying to shell out Gen. Lee at Hancock, disappeared from the scene, and was next heard of after he had made a tortoise march forty or fifty miles across the mountains, with all his 15,000 men and eighteen guns, had appeared before Gen. Kelley at Boonville, and after looking at him, had retreated. Along the lines before Washington, great activity has prevailed in the supply departments, and many mysterious movements have been made. It is believed that dispositions are in progress for an advance there also. The war-steamer Pensacola, for which the rebel batteries on the Potomac have been waiting so long, got ready, filled up with warlike stores, and quietly passed down the river on Sunday, the 12th. Twenty-two shots were fired at her, but none struck her, and she made no reply. Her machinery, which has been very expensive, and which includes the well known "Sickles cut-off," is said to work well. Hooker's brigade on the Lower Potomac quietly guards the river. At Fort-Munroe, Magruder's forces have been withdrawn from before the fortress to the vicinity of Yorktown, and the rebels, trembling with doubtful fears whether Burnside's expedition is to penetrate from Pamlico Sound by the inland water routes against Norfolk, or is to come up the James or the York, or the Rappahannock, seem to be only preparing to run away and burn everything behind them, in just as many places as possible. They are however endeavoring to prepare for defending Roanoke Island.

A writer who is said to speak from the highest possible authority, asserts that before another month shall have passed the war will be brought to a close. We quote a portion of this letter:—

I write warmly about Gen. McClellan, because I know and love the man. Your suggestions to attack Manassas even at the risk of defeat, on one ground, that we had better be beaten than not to pieces, is not like your usual good sense. Any military man would tell you that to hurl our forces against those strong entrenchments would be sheer madness. But Gen. McClellan has them caught in their own trap. They are like a fox in a burrow with one hole, where they must soon be forced out, and then General McClellan will fall upon them like a thunderbolt. The public will not then complain of his want of energy.

Let me tell you it will be so fearful as to have waiting and moping go up from every Southern household. Knowing what I do, and have thus but barely hinted at as the grand plan of the campaign, I repeat that the rebels are doomed, and secession will never again raise its hydra head in the land. The folds of the giant constrictor are now tightening around the rebellion, and the coming month will see it crushed out completely and forever. Again I say, look out for a short war and a desperate one!

DOMESTIC.

The arrival and departure of troops, with the hostilities of the citizens to them, are the subjects at present of absorbing interest in this city.

The steam ship Parana arrived at this port on Sunday, with 32 officers and 887 privates of the Scots Fusilier Guards, and 5 officers and 120 men of the Royal Engineers. The steamship Hibernia also arrived on Monday, with 5 officers and 120 men of the Royal Engineers; 7 officers and 255 men of No. 8 Battery of the Royal Artillery; 6 officers and 117 men of No. 6 Battery Royal Artillery, and 4 officers and 147 men of the 15th Regiment. These men were all safely landed, and are now lodged in different parts of the city. It is stated that the head quarters of the 15th Regiment were to leave Dublin on the 4th inst., in the steamer Adelaide, and may be hourly expected.

On Tuesday evening three hundred men of the Royal Artillery and Engineers were entertained with a sumptuous supper in the basement of the Union Street Congregational Church. On Wednesday three hundred of the Artillery and Military Train were entertained in the same place. On Thursday afternoon seven hundred of the Scotch Fusiliers were regaled at the Car shed, and another party at the Union Street Church at 6 o'clock.

For the information of our country readers we re-publish from the Globe of Thursday, the subjoined account of the Military entertainment in Union Street Congregational Church vestry, on Wednesday:—

Last evening in the basement of the Union Street Church, three hundred of the Royal Artillery and Military Train, were sumptuously entertained by the ladies and gentlemen of St. John's—this constituting the second festival of the kind given since the arrival of the Hibernian in port, and the continuation of the "Welcome to the Troops" which commenced when the first transport ship arrived. The tables were most beautifully supplied with all imaginable luxuries and substantial, which the brave fellows seemed to enjoy and appreciate, both for their excellence and the manner of their provision. The Rev. W. Scovell acted as Chairman with ability. Mr. John Boyd pronounced a very happy and eloquent address of welcome, in substance as follows:—

FRIENDS AND FELLOW COUNTRYMEN.—"With full free hearts, we bid you welcome to this festive scene; while we yield grateful adoration to the Giver of all Good, who has preserved you in safety, and while we hail your arrival in our midst, we have a relief, from our fears for your safety, while through fearful storm and tempest, you were experiencing a full answer to the childish question, 'What are the wild waves saying?'

"When over the Atlantic, as on the wings of the Wind, the news spread, that the flag, which has never been stained by covering a coward's home, had been insulted by a neighbouring Power, then out spake the British Voice, as the voice of one man, declaring that whoever claimed its protection was safe, however much they may have disliked the person, and that while slaves cannot breathe in England, neither can they breathe under her banner, whether it be on tower, or fort, or tented ground, or on those mighty ships which have carried her name to every land, and brought back their rich treasures, and laid these, at the Nation's feet.

"We welcome you then—as brave British Soldiers should be received. We hail your arrival here as the best preventative of War—the surest guarantee of Peace, and while we receive you as men of War, you are the men who, above all others, will secure to us the blessing of Peace.

"The tokens that a grateful Nation has placed upon the breasts of many of you, bear ample evidence that you fear not War, but a greater than man has in mercy spared our World from the commission of such a crime, as the plunging of these two great nations into deadly conflict, and never may the time arise, when our hands shall, in such a struggle, be imbued in our brother's blood.

"To-night our Mothers, our Wives, and our Sisters are here to encourage you by their presence—in their joy with their smiles—and to aid you with their hands. The sight of them may revive in your breasts the cherished memories of 'Home, sweet Home,' and of the dear ones there, on whom your affections dwell, but rest assured of one thing, that warmer hearts and truer friends than those around you, will not be found on this side of the Atlantic.

"In every land, in every good work, Woman is the Pioneer. In our Nation, we have in that best of women, our gracious and beloved, but now sadly bereaved Queen, an example that is not lost upon her subject sisterhood of New Brunswick, and in their name, the Ladies of St. John, I am commissioned to extend to you on this occasion, a hearty, generous, British Welcome!"

Rev. J. Bennett appropriately and impressively invoked the Divine Blessing; then, with one consent, the large gathering of ladies and gentlemen, including the whole Military force, sang that old time-honored Doxology: "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow" with splendid effect. And now come the "clangor" of dishes; the "din and noise of clashing" knives and forks; and the "courage" upon the feast. We confess we don't like the manner in which some papers have spoken of the men, as "demolishing" the viands with almost ferocity. This is unjust to them. On this occasion, with the utmost regularity and good breeding, and with full but rational gusto, the men did justice to the provision made for them; and every man seemed happy, while from mouth to mouth was heard the praises of the hospitable people of Saint John, who, they say, seem to appreciate the soldier as a man, not a machine. After tea, addresses were delivered by the Hon. Mr. Gray, M. H. Perley, Esq., and others, all (with a trifling exception) in very good taste, interspersed with excellent singing by the Quintette Club, and by volunteers from the Regulars. Mr. Beard also sang most capitally. Rule Britannia, The Artillery, Cheer, Boys, Cheer, The Red, White, and Blue, and other national and patriotic songs were given, particularly in the choruses, with stunning effect, while the Slave Ship, the Queen's letter, and other Solos were very beautifully and effectively rendered.

Col. Turner of the Royal Artillery, in a few eloquent remarks, full of deep feeling, thanked the Ladies of St. John for this reception, which he said was unequalled in the history of the British Army, and that through the most remote districts of Scotland—and the hills, and in the glens of old Ireland—and in every cottage in England, the news of this, which he had heard and welcomed with gratitude, would reach to the most distant portions of our great Empire. The letters which the men would write descriptive of their treatment here, each giving his own impression of it, would if gathered together, form one of the most interesting volumes ever published, and from Her Gracious Majesty down to the humblest subject, the reception here would be talked of and remembered.

"Take it for all in all. It was a most enjoyable reunion—a very 'feast of reason and a flow of soul.' Let us not omit that every reference to the Queen last night evoked enthusiastic cheers, every allusion to her recent affliction called out many tokens of sympathy and love, and when the National Anthem was announced by the Chairman, the vast concourse rose, and rendered it most beautifully, as 'with the heart and the understanding also.'

H. M. S. Orpheus, 21 guns, arrived at this port on Saturday. She lies at anchor off Sand Point.

The Rinaldo, with Messrs. Mason and Slidell on board, has safely reached Bermuda. She proceeded from thence to St. Thomas, where those gentlemen will embark in the regular mail packet for England.
