ample proof before us that these poor fellows retain a singular delicacy of handiwork, and even a certain wild and rough sense of beauty. The most prominent | taining their position for a long time after all their object in the trophy of this department will be a ammunition was expended. The paddles- 52 missing. Rebel loss not known. that of the squaw being somewhat smaller than the one wielded by her spouse-are stained of a blueish colour by the bark of the white maple. The whole canoe, which will carry four persons at need, does not weigh more than a hundredweight, and may thus termined to fight, and give no quarter. Anything be readily transported along the shore when the may be expected of the men, when the officers order rapids are too dangerous to admit of its further progress by the stream. Various baskets, constructed of porcupine quills which have been dyed red, yellow, or green, will also attract attention; and others, framed of white ash, of willow, or of maple, are very graceful in form, and often very attractive in colour. On the whole, the poor Micmacs-whether living in the outskirts of the white man's city or dwelling by themselves in their settlement at Lennox Island - ing the magazines which it is supposed they left prehave been enabled to send specimens of workmanship, to which the fact that their race is so surely dying out, lends a certain melancholy interest. The woods of Princ. Edward Island are, of course, amply represented; many of them are singularly beautiful, and the exquisite grain of the bird's maple is especially deserving of attention. Amongst the manufactured articles, the most prominent is a combined mowing and resping machine, which by a simple contrivance, the invention of a colonist, can be instantly thrown out of gear and checked whenever any obstacle is in its path. The textile fabrics are numerous and well arranged—and the formidable thickness of mitten and Hunter, its officers being appointed from Massachusocks serves to remind us of the severity of a North setts. The regiment and the movement meets with American winter, against which such precautions are favor, as the negro soldiers are able to perform duties needful. The visitor to this court should not over- which will relieve our troops. look a handsome fire-screen, on which appear the dried leaves and flowers of the colony. Our own fuchsias and pansies are mingled with wild woodland blossoms, and many of the dried leaves, beautiful with the red flush of autumn, are in themselves as lovely as any flowers. Some handsome set of harness, a large quantity of furniture, samples of her agricultural products, and of her dried provisions, complete the very creditable display made by Prince Edward Island, all the more interesting from the fact that the whole of its contents are bond fide the produce of the The space allotted to New Brunswick is, of course,

Indians. The Micmac tribe has sadly dwindled down somewhat larger, and it is filled with articles less characteristic. The most interesting of them all to the man of science will undoubtedly be the open specimens of "Albert coal," a glossy jet variety, from which is manufactured a new oil named Albertine. The coal itself is so inflammable that a small piece of it, held in the hand and ignited, will burn like a torch, and the large manufactory of the oil by Mr. Spurr, of St. John, has recently been one of the chief features of New Brunswick industry. The collection of woods is rich, and admirably arrangedthe leaves, flowers, and fruits, of the various trees being also represented. A very beautiful door of maple will be one of the chief attractions of the court. ton and vicinity. Amongst its models are two of peculiar interest; the 181 14 168 coth & the magnificent suspension bridge, that has been thrown across the river St. John, and the span of which is longer than that of Niagara; the second reminding us under what difficulties our colonial cousins labour, shows us a railway train, on the American principle, but preceded by a special carriage which acts as a snow cutter, and which, as it dashes along over the rails, catches the snow, flings it up into the air, and sends it back in a wild flying foam behind the train. Amongst the agricultural specimens, we may specially mention the Indian corn, the culture of which is now brought to a high degree of ex-cellence in the brief summer of the colony. The "trophy" includes one of the most magnificent black bearskins ever seen; and there is also a beaver-coat, the cosy warmth, the indescribably delicate softness and smoothness of which will send all its fair beholders and examiners into mild ecstasies of admiration. Surely it is worth while to have a bitter winter, if only for the pleasure of being so luxuriously clad to resist its rigour! Other garments will also have their admirers. The Melicete Indians, like their Micmac kindred, have sent a goodly show; and the specimens of their clothing-some of them executed under the personal superintendence of Mrs. Manners Sutton, the States now existing or hereafter to be formed or acwife of the late governor of the colony—are really well worth attentive examination. Rough in texture. somewhat gaudy in colour, they may be; and yet they have a certain beauty. The shirts are as red as French army is those in which Garibaldi conquered Sicily and little opposition. Naples; and the bead-work with which they are ornamented often displays a very considerable degree of taste in its arrangement. Mr. Daniel, the superintendent of the court-a gentleman whose zeal and ability have materially contributed to the creditable state in which it now appears-himself exhibits an interesting collection of Indian caps, mocassins, snow shoes, and other articles. Cutlery, furniture, textile fabrics, and some thirty specimens of the wild plumed grasses of the colony, are also among the attractions
