"Having described the ascent till they were five his Florida Free Labour Colonization Co. miles and a quarter, he proceeds;-I read the dry bulb as minus five degrees ; in endeavoring to read the wet build I could not see the column of mercury. I rubbed my eyes, then took a lens, and also failed. I then tried to read the other instruments and found I watch. I asked Mr. Coxwell to help me, and he said he must go into the ring, and he would when he came down. I endeavoured to reach some brandy which was lying on the table at about the distance of howitzer, crossing the river day and night in quest of a foot from my hand, and found myself unable to do so. My sight became more dim; I looked at the barometer and saw it between 10 and 11 inches, and tried to record it, but I was unable to write. I then saw it at ten inches, still increasing fast, and just noted it in my book ; its true reading, therefore, was at this time about 93 inches, implying a height of about 53 mile, as a change of an inch in the reading of the barometer at this elevation takes place on a change of height of about 2500 feet; I felt I was losstruggling and shaking. I attempted to speak, and found I had lost the power. I attempted to look at in sleep; this must have been about 1h. 54m.

I could neither see, move, nor speak. I then heard bill of fare such as the labourers in the southern him speak more emphatically, ' Take an observation; now do try.' > GARIBALDI.-The last movement of this Italian oldier has been brief and disastrous. Soldier, but not Stajesman, he had miscalculated the opinion of the people and his own strength. On Saturday the telegraph intimated that he was defeated, wounded, a encountered a nearly equal force of Piedmontese soldiers. The combat was short, Garibaldi was wounded along with his son, and along with him he was made prisoner. A few volunteers were slain more were wounded; the others were dispersed. Garibaldi was in Calabria; he was placed on board Garibaldi was in Calabria; he was placed on board a frigate, conveyed to the gulf of Spazzoa, and will be tried for treason by the Senate at Turin.

"Rome or death" is over for the time. Napoleon's heel is on the neck of Italy. He keeps it there, and will keep it until a French revolution or a great Italian soldier, relieve the old city from its foreign garrison.

Garibaldi's last expedition was ill planned. At least a patriot is not warranted to strike until be can strike hard. A wrong by itself will not justify war without preparation for the war. Garloald loves Italy, in this case well but not wisely. So we can now say with the benefit of the events to guide us; yet the success of the revolution in Italy might have shaken the seats of more statesmen than Ratazzi. One rude check may have modified many plots; and one bullet postponed many projects. Garibaldi must be tried according to Italian usage, without preparation for the war. Garibaldi loves but the proceedings will not strengthen the Government.

He may be banished, but the bonds of union be tween the north and south of Italy, will go into exile and south would expire on that day. Napoleon's interests will be saved in either way. Any turn of this political penny brings heads to him, and loss to
