[Written for the Religious Intelligencer.] FAMILIAR PAPERS ON SABBATH SCHOOLS. BY A LADY .- NO. I.

WHO SHOULD BE A SABBATH SCHOOL TEACHER. As we look abroad in the world and observe the various means by which God seeks to restore fallen man to his own image, there appears none of higher importance, and more certain of success than a faithful energetic ministry; and we must acknowledge that the Sabbath school is its most powerful auxiliary in promoting the great work of man's salvation. Some may be inclined to doubt this, and say that parental influence-that influence which is exercised from the earliest dawn of intelligence-is superior. It should be, but we remember that parental influence is not always exercised in the right way, while that of a well directed Sabbath school always is, and indeed somebody or something must be greatly at fault if it has not always the desired effect, which is the

The greatest agency in this is the teachers. The superintendent's office is undoubtedly one of responsibility; but he may exert himself to the utmost; the secretary may prepare suitable class books, mark the attendance, register the number of lessons and the events of the day, and attend to his other duties with the strictest attention; the other officers may do all that can possibly be done; good books may be provided, and they are no trifling benefit to the school; and yet nothing be accomplished. The first requisite is a band of faithful active teachers; and until these are provided vain will be any attempt at success.

spiritual and mental improvement and conversion of the pupils.

And can there possibly be an office more noble, more sacred, and affording more real enjoyment, than that of training the young mind, planting good impressions there, and watching and perfecting their growth? Such is the delightful privilege of the Sabbath school teacher. All, however, do not enjoy this privilege alike; they assert that they cannot discover any good they have ever done; no one seems either better or worse for their instructions; and in short that they find it an irksome, disagreeable task; why is this? we will see. To be successful, a person must be qualified for whatever he undertakes; if then the object or end in view of Sabbath school education is conversion-and this is the opinion of the wise and good of all denominations-the first qualification for this office must necessarily be a heart devoted to God, and consequently a heart devoted to God's work.

Why is piety so necessary in a teacher, might be questioned; cannot one teach children, and even make them understand the Bible, without being decidedly religious? We answer the object is not merely to cultivate the mind, but to convert the heart and renew the life, and therefore religion, and religion principally, must be placed before the mind of the child. No person can teach another that with which he is himself practically unacquainted; for if he do attempt it, with his life and conversation in the world, he will render of no effect what he may seek to im-

He may be a man of strict morality-and yet

if he tell his pupils how beautiful and how pleasant are the paths of piety; how necessary to give the heart to God; and how much better to give it early in life; if he teach them from the Scriptures how, and why, "Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners," and, "whosoever believeth on Him shall not perish, but have everlasting life," who can wonder that the child, no matter how young, should reason in his own way :- " My teacher tells me I must repent of my sins or go to hell; he says it is pleasant to love and serve God, and that I cannot go to heaven unless I do so; but he is much older than I, and I am sure he has not done so, yet he should know better than I, and if I put it off as long as he, why shouldn't I be as safe?" Is it questioned how can the child arrive at this conclusion, by numerous indications in his words and actions, which are watched with the closest scrutiny, and also by the opinions of those around him.

That every child watches both his parent and teacher, and marks attentively what they say and do is well known: how anxious then should teachers be that their example be worthy of imi-

THE LISTENER AT THE DOOR.

Many years ago, up where the spruce and pine make beautiful the hills of Vermont, lived a little boy whom we will call Willie.

Willie had no kind father, for his young heart had been grieved by seeing the form of this loved friend of his infancy shrouded in death. But he had a loving band of brothers and sisters, and a mother who nobly strove to stand in the place of both parents towards her fatherless little ones.

But Willie's mother did not feel that she had given her heart to God; and coming from church one day, bowed beneath a sense of guilt before God's pure eye, she sought her own room for

Willie followed as far as the door, and throwing himself on the floor, he placed his ear at the crack, that he might hear his mother pray. And that prayer-it has ever since lingered in his heart. Such earnest pleading for mercy, for her-self, and her children, through the Lamb which was slain on Calvary, that God would indeed give her a good hope, which should daily grow brighter and brighter, and at last end in perfect rest-that

DON'T SHUT THE BIBLE. "Mother, the icy hand of death Doth chill my limbs, and stop my breath; Read me those sacred words again, They soothe my spirit, ease my pain."

She took the precious book and read, How Jesus long ago had said, "Let little children come to me, For such skall heaven's household be."

She closed and laid aside the Book. And in her arms the sufferer took; His eyes grew dim, his utterance weak, But still he struggled hard to speak.

He struggled long! what would he say, Ere death had sealed his lips for aye? "Don't shut it up," at length he cried-"Don't shut the Book;"—then calmly died.

"Don't shut it up," his spirit sings, While upward borne on angels' wings; "Don't shut the Bible," seemed to say His cold and pallid lips of clay. "Don't shut the Bible," still I hear

REMEDY FOR LITTLE INJURIES .- My friend, it will often happen to you, should your life be spared, and you should grow up to womanhood or manhood—nay, it may happen to you while you are still in the green and tender period of early youth -that somebody will be unkind to you, and you will have your feelings hurt, when you will be conscious that you have done nothing to warrant such an injury. Now, will you listen to a word of advice touching a case like this? The word is not mine, but it agrees with my experience exactly, and I can't help thinking you will find it not only true, but very valuable to you. A man strikes me with a sword, and inflicts a wound. Suppose, instead of binding up the wound, I show it to every body; and after it has been bound up, I am | may 14.-wpi taking off the bandage continually, and examining the depth of the wound, and making it to fester, till my limb becomes greatly inflamed, and my general health is materially affected. THE ARAB'S GIFT .- A poor Arab was traveling in the desert, when he met with a spring of 15 cases Men's Hats; 20 cases Boots and Shoes. clear, sweet, sparkling water. Accustomed as he was to brackish wells, to his simple mind it appeared that such water as this was worthy of a nonarch; and filling his leathern bottle from the spring, he determined to go and present it to the caliph himself.
