

MISCELLANEOUS.

YOUR MOTHER.

BY THE REV. A. L. STONE.

Young man, have you a mother living still on God's earth? What is she to you? An old woman with wrinkled face, and gray locks and plain cap, high-waisted dress, and form bowed and crushed together with the weight of years, altogether unbecomely to your fastidious eye. Ah, look again. Each of those wrinkles is a sublime poem of self-devotion; each furrow on that face some long-enduring care has ploughed; the silver lines in those dark locks have changed their hue in busy household thoughts, the patient toil of day, the wearying nightly watches, and burdens borne for you, as well as others, have lain more heavily on her head than the pressure of years. Can there be another face that can match that wrinkled face in beauty to your eye? Do you touch any hand with such tender deference as that with which you lift that trembling clasp of age to your heart?

Where dwells this mother of yours? In the old early home, with but few of the voices that have once been musical there left to cheer her gathering loneliness. The ash gray evening is coming upon her. What lights do you keep burning there to drive the gloom away? Does the frequent post carry her filial greetings from you? Do little tokens, precious to her heart, not because of the cost, but of the loving remembrance they attest, go from your hand to hers? Does she know she is forgotten in your bright, busy career? As oft as Providence permits, does your face break in upon her solitude? Are you repaying in her uncheered age, the debt your early years contracted? The dear friends of long ago have most of them left her side; do you feel that, and feel it for her? Does she have it to muse upon in the brooding hours of her long twilight, how thoughtful this great, grown boy of hers is for her comfort? She never complains of you, I know. That she would not do. But silently, like a cancer, neglect, your neglect, would eat into her heart.

Or is she beneath your own roof? Has she the seat of honour in every available comfort there? Does she feel in your way there? Are you more forgetful to her will than even in childhood's days? To her does your voice ever utter impatience, your eye look reproach or anger? Oh, how soon will the inexorable gear ring its sharp clang between you! Then memory will sit down with you every evening to rehearse to you the story of your filial life—what you have been as a son! If you have brightened and gladdened the life of her decline, that evening's recital will be as heavenly minstrelsy to your spirit. If there is one painful recollection, no grief can be so bitter as that in which you grieve out, "Oh, if she could but return!"

THE REBELLIOUS PRAYER.

Let him become what he will; so he may live, I shall be.

Thus prayed a father by the sick-bed of a youthful and an only son. He had prayed importunately for the abatement of the disease, but the child continually struggled with intense pain. A calm at last visited the sufferer. The pulse that had thrrobbed and fluttered beat feebly and slowly. A deathlike hush overcame the features. The physician shook his head sadly, and said there was no hope. Suddenly the father thought that perhaps God was about to take away his child, to save the child from a life of error. Should he pray God to change his purpose? There was a struggle in the parent's heart. He gazed wistfully upon the child's countenance. It was calm, beautifully calm. The checks that were wont to dimple with laughter, were rigid, still, marblelike. The eye, that deep of affection into which he had loved to gaze, was unusually brilliant. The pale, red lips were those marks of sorrow that always touch a parent's heart. The longer he looked upon his idol the more lovely it seemed. All his desire and affection centered upon it. It seemed hard to give it up—hard, very hard. Tears filled his eyes, and he uttered the rebellious prayer recorded above.

The child recovered.

"Father, will you see me to the tree?"

Many years have passed since the scene we have been describing. That son had passed through an almost unparalleled course of iniquity and villainy. He had broken the sensitive heart of an affectionate and watchful mother, and brought her to a suicide's grave. He had been tried for crime, convicted, and sentenced to death. Pardon was offered him by the officers of the law if he would reform and lead an exemplary life. But he preferred the alternative of the gallows. In vain his white-haired father expostulated with him. With a careless air the criminal asked him if he would see him to the tree, and then went out of the prison with the sheriff, and was hanged.

"The above story is true and instructive. In our dissatisfaction with the prospective providences of God, we are in danger of having our desires granted us. It is our duty to bear, as well as to do, the will of God. All his acts toward us are acts of love. Our journey heavenward is necessarily variable. We have our Gethsemanes. Let us not forget, when praying for the bitter cup of affliction to pass, the words of our Master, 'Nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt.'—Butterworth.

AN AFFECTING INCIDENT.—The following touching incident, as occurring in a hospital, is given by a correspondent of the Buffalo Courier, writing from St. Louis. What agony and sorrow have been produced by the war, a millionth part of which will never be known until the judgment of the last day.

In another ward, I saw a Tennesseean, whose cheek presented the pallor of death. I walked to his bedside. His hand was trying to clasp some object that in his fitful delirium, was pictured on his dying imagination. His lips feebly uttered the word, "Catharine." I took his hand in mine—his eyes, that were rolled upwards in their sockets, wandered around until he was able to fix his gaze upon me. "Do you say something," said I, tenderly. He motioned for me to put my ear down. "Oh my wife—my Catharine—my children." His breath was short—his voice very faint. "How many children have you?" said I. He held up four fingers. "What is your name?" said I. "William C. Brandon," replied he. "Where are you from?" I asked. "Doddsville, Jackson county, Tennessee." I was revolving in my mind if there would be an opportunity to forward intelligence of him to his family, when he pulled my head down and whispered, "Will you write to Catharine; tell her I—thought of her and the children; I—prayed for them—oh God! oh God! I assured him I would endeavor to fulfill his request. I then talked to him of a Redeemer, and after awhile he seemed happier. His looks spoke that words could not.

WHAT TEMPERANCE CAN DO.—In Mrs. Hall's book on Ireland, occurs the following passage, which a person will hardly read without emotion:

We entered a cottage one day, in the suburbs of Cork; a young woman was knitting stockings at the door. It was as neat and comfortable as any in the most prosperous district of England. We tell her brief story in her own words, as nearly as we can recall them: "My husband is a wheelwright, and has always earned his guinea a week; he was a good workman, but the love for the drink was strong in him, and it wasn't often he brought me home more than five shillings out of his one pound on a Saturday night, and it broke my heart to see the children too ragged to go to school, to say nothing of the starved look they had out of the little I could give them. Well, God be praised, he took the pledge, and the next Saturday he laid twenty-one shillings upon the chair on a sit upon. O, didn't I give thanks upon my bended knees that night; still I was fearful it wouldn't last, and I spent no more than the five shillings I need to, saying to myself the money will be more wanted than it is now. Well, the next week he brought me the same, and the next, and the next, until eight weeks had passed; and glory to God! there was no change for the bad in my husband; and all the while he never asked me why there was nothing better for him out of his earnings; so I felt there was no fear for him, and the ninth week when he came to me, I had this table bought and these six chairs, for the children and one for himself; and I was dressed in a new gown, and the children all had new clothes and shoes and stockings, and upon this chair I put a new suit, and upon his plate I put the bill and receipt for them all, just the eight sixteen shillings, the cost that I'd saved out of his wages, not knowing what might happen, and that always went for drink. And he cried, good lady and good gentleman, he cried like a baby, but 'twas with thanks to God; and now where's the healthier man than my husband in the whole county of Cork, or a happier wife than myself, or decenter or better fed children than my own."

HOW, WHEN, AND WHERE TO DIE.

FROM THE GERMAN BY BENJ. SCHMOLKE.

That I shall die, full well I know;
All human life is short and frail,
Fleeting and vain are things below,
All portion here must quickly fail.
In mercy, Lord, direct my ways,
That I in peace may end my days.

When I shall die is all unknown,
Except to thee omniscient mind;
Lest, then, with life my hope be gone,
May I from thee such favor find,
That I may always ready be
For death and for eternity.

How I shall die is hidden, too;
Death does his work in varied forms;
To some with agonies of woe,
And some sink peaceful in his arms;
Just as thou wilt;—if then 'tis past
My soul be found with thee at last.

Where I shall die I may not know,
Nor where his sleeping dust be laid;
Only be it happy lot,
With saints redeemed to leave the dead
Shall care to me the place afford—
The earth, throughout, is all the Lord's.

When'er in death I shall recline,
Then let my soul ascend to thee!
Through Christ's redemption I am thine,
By faith his glories now I see—
'Twill all be well!—I little prize
When, how, or where this body dies.

FAITH.—The soldiers that, like Cromwell's march with Bibles in their boots, load the cannon by the grace of God, and fire it with a psalm, cannot easily be beaten. Give us plenty of the substance of things hoped for, and an evidence of things not seen. Let one feel that he stands on earth, and that the law of the universe, and the attributes of the Almighty are pledged to his support, and you might as well try to chase a rock as him. Faith justified Abel and translated Enoch; floated the ark and founded the church; crossed the Red Sea and shook down the walls of Jericho. In all ages it has out of weakness become strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens, and led out willing martyrs for the mountains or the flames.

A CHILD'S REBUKE.—The Albany correspondent of the Syracuse Courier gives us this little instructive incident:

"The greatest rebuke I ever heard given for profane swearing was administered to a New Yorker by a little candy boy, at the Delevan House yesterday. As several of the Syracuseans were in conversation together at the Delevan, an Albany boy about seven years of age came up to vend his candy. His intelligence and remarkable precociousness of manner attracted our attention, when a prominent New Yorker came up and said, 'But, (with an oath) if you will come home with me I'll educate you.'"

The child looked up in the New Yorker's face with extreme contempt, and replied, 'Sir, I would not go or live with any gentleman who uses profane language.'"

The cutting rebuke drove the New Yorker from the room with a crimson face."

"HE READS AND I PRAY."—Alice M.—had received a fine education. Her mind had been naturally and evenly developed. She had committed many select texts of Scripture to memory, and had enforced their lessons on her own heart. The Spirit of God took of the things of Christ and showed them unto her. She received the truth in the love of it. Her Bible and her closet were dear to her. Her happiest hours were her seasons of communion with her Saviour. The Sabbath was to her a heaven below.

Alice was but twenty-one years of age when she became the wife of a ship-master some four or five years older than herself. He was going to America in a new ship, and had a state-room fitted and furnished for her accommodation, and she consented to accompany him to sea. The husband and wife began upon the deep. The husband was a stranger to the power of grace. He admired and loved his wife for her earnest piety. On her return from her first voyage, she confided to a friend who had been her spiritual adviser that they had lived a life of prayer even on shipboard.

"Was he willing to pray with you?" asked the friend.

"No," replied Alice, "but we had prayers together every day, and he seemed glad to have it so. He read and I prayed."

Is it strange that within two years that husband's soul was brought to the foot of the cross, and that the time came when she read and he prayed?

Are there not many for whom this case will furnish an example, and who will be encouraged by it to do likewise?
