A MOTHER'S LAST WORDS: OR, THE OR PHANS OF LONDON STREETS. BY MRS. SEWELL .- SECOND PART.

(Continued.) And soundly slept those little boys, And dreamt about a far-off land, With shining bowers, and lovely flowers, And angels flying at command.

They'd never been beyond the town, To see the beauteous works of God, Not even seen the daisies spring By thousands on the level sod

They had not seen a robin's nest, Nor plucked a violet in the shade, Nor stood beside a running brook, And heard the pleasant sound it made.

They had not seen young lambs at play, Nor gleaned among the autumn sheaves, Nor listened to the pattering sound Of falling rain upon the leaves.

The cuckoo's note was strange to them, They'd never heard a wild bird sing, Nor seen the yellow cowslips grow About the meadows in the spring.

Nor had they run with rosy boys, At early morning to the school, Nor spent the pleasant holidays In catching minnows in the pool.

Ah, no! and yet they were not left With nought but death and darkness there, A minister of love was sent, In answer to their mother's prayer.

But little thought these orphan boys, When to their wretched bed they crept, That all the night, an angel bright, Would watch beside them as they slept.

When dimly dawned the light they rose, And Chris looked round with chattering teeth; The sheet was spread from foot to head, He knew his mother lay beneath.

"Let's go out to the pump and wash, As she would always have us do; We'd better mind about her words, I think," said John; "Chris, what say you?"

"Let's go," said Chris, "besides, you know, We've got our breakfast now to find." They went out in the narrow street, The shining angel went behind.

A woman at a chandler's shop, Who knew the children of the dead, Was touched with pity, as they passed, And gave them each a slice of bread.

"'Tis true," said little Christopher, "You may be sure the Angel's come, She never gave us bread before, No, not the value of a crumb."

The next day, and the next to that, The promise of the King was kept, And every night that Angel bright Stood by to guard them as they slept.

On Wednesday the people came, And took the woman's corpse away; Two little mourners walked behind, And saw the grave wherein it lay.

Fast fell the tears upon their cheeks, When little Christy raised his eyes, And said, "Oh, mother! how I wish I was with you above the skies."

'Twas but the thought passed through his mind, When soft a whisper seemed to come-"Be patient, little Christopher, You are not very far from home."

The Minister said "Dust to dust;" And then the poor boys left the place, Two friendless boys in London town; Oh! was not theirs a helpless case?

They wandered up and down the streets, And then went home to sleep once more, And in the morning left the room, And took the key and locked the door.

They found the landlord at his house, And said, "Please, sir, our mother's dead; She could not pay up all the rent, And we have got to earn our bread.

"But please, Sir, we have brought the key, And left some things upon the shelf, And there's the blanket and the bed,

My mother thought you'd pay yourself." "And so she's gone!" the landlord said, "And you are left to face the strife: Well, I will say, I never knew

A better woman in my life. "Of course I'll take the things, my boy,

For right is right, and so I must; But there's a sixpence for you both: You'll find it hard to earn your crust."

They thanked the man, and left the house, "I'll tell you what we'll do," said John, "This sixpence here will buy a broom, We'll sweep a crossing of our own."

"We won't go to the workhouse Chris, But act like men, and do our best; Our mother said, 'A crust well earned, Was sweeter than a pauper's feast."

"Oh, yes! we'll work like honest boys, And if our mother should look down, She'd like to see us with a broom,

Away they went with anxious hopes, And long they hunted here and there, Until they found a dirty place, Not very far from Leicester Square.

And with a crossing of our own."

And here at once they took their stand, And swept a pathway clean and neat, Where ladies, in their silken gowns, Might cross, and hardly soil their feet. The people hurried to and fro, And 'midst the jostle, jar, and noise, And, thinking of their own affairs, They hardly saw the little boys.

Not so with all, some caught a sight Of little Christy's anxious eyes, And put a penny in his cap;

And every penny was a prize. At last the streets began to clear,
And people dropped off, one by one,
"Let's go," said little Christopher,
"My pocket is quite heavy, John."

They counted up their pence with glee,
And went away to buy some bread,
And had a little left to pay
For lodging in a decent bed.

Next day John kept his crossing clean, Swept off the mud, and left it dry, And little Christy held his cap, But did not tease the passers-by

And many a one, a penny gave, Who marked the pale child's modest way, And thus they'd sixpence left in hand, When they went home on Saturday.

The woman at the chandler's shop, In kind remembrance of the dead, Had found the boys a lodging place, Where they could have a decent bed.

"Let's go to Church," said Christopher,
"She'd be so glad to see us there; You recollect she often said, 'Boys don't forget the house of prayer.'"

"We're very shabby," John replied,
"And hardly fit for such a place; But I will do the best I can To polish up my hands and face."

Clear rung the bells that Sabbath morn, As they went briskly up the street; And out of sight, the Angel bright, Walked close behind with shining feet.

Some idle boys who played about, Threw stones and mocked as they went in; "Aye, let them mock away," said John, "We need not care for them a pin."

A lady watched them as they sat, And when the service all was done, Said, "Do you ge to Sunday-school?"
"No, ma-am, but we should like," said John.

She told them both the place and time, They went that afternoon to school; The boys were playing on the street, And said to John, "you are a fool

"To go to that old stupid place; We know a trick worth two of that." Said John, "I mean to be a man, And that's the trick I'm aiming at." (To be Continued.)

WILL THERE BE FLOWERS IN HEAVEN? ----Where is that radiant shore?

Shall we not seek it and weep no more?

lowly? A breathless interest pervaded the little group and their voices were more subdued than usual when they came to wish me 'good night.' After their last steps had died away, and the house become silent, I opened a book and began to read. Soon my attention was arrested by a quick, light step, and a little girl of five summers slided in beside me. Her little pale sweet face was turned up towards me, and her sun bonnet had fallen back, leaving the dark rich curls to stray in rich profuleaving the dark rich curls to stray in rich profusion around her face and neck.

'I thought Frances had gone home,' said I, as I lifted her to a seat beside me. 'Is she not afraid her mother will be anxious about her?"

'I thought Miss B---- would tell me more about God, and the sweet pretty flowers,' said she, and I have come back to hear.'

She had gathered a bunch of butter-cups, and I took them and told her again of their curious structure. I spoke to her of that most beautiful of God's creation, the moss rose, and of the sensitive miamosa, and said that God had placed the magnolia upon our earth to make it more beautiful-more like heaven.

She listened most earnestly. I spoke to her of the stars-how-they were worlds, peopled with living beings, and, perhaps decked with flowers as light as our own.

She caught the idea with enthusiasm. 'Will there be flowers in heaven?' she asked. 'There will be every thing which is sweet and pleasant there,' I replied; 'and if flowers can add any thing to the beauty of the golden courts, we shall surely find them there.

I stood by the window until they disappeared in the circuitous road which led to the village grave-yard, and then I turned with a sigh away, and said to myself, 'Yes, Frances, there are flowers in heaven, for you are there!'

PA, WHY DID YOU KISS ME ?- More parents than one have felt perplexed in not being able to keep the little folks quiet during prayers. To them the following bit of experience may not be uninteresting. My little George, nearly six years uninteresting. My little George, hearly six judiciples old, has perhaps as much mercury in his composition as most lads of his age. Indeed he has always been a noted character for restlessness. always been a noted character for restlessness. The spirits Turpentine; 1 do Whale Oil, winter strained; 1 do Sea Elephant Oil. led with satisfaction, and off he ran to play. There has been no more trouble in that line, and every morning he comes for a kiss. A similar trial may have a good effect in other cases. A slight reward timeously bestowed may prevent the necessity of a heavy punishment. In the government of God over men he not only punishes for evil but rewards for well doing. Surely it is safe to copy after the great Original.—Christian Guardian.

NAPET IN THE BURNING HUT .- Little Napet, an African boy, heard of Jesus and loved him. One day in early spring, he was sent to drive the pigeons from a cornfield. There was a little straw hut in the corner of the field, and there Napet sat down to watch for the coming of the birds. Feeling a little cold, he kindled a fire, just inside of the hut. A spark set the hut in a blaze. The fire spread so quickly that Napet was surrounded by fire in a moment. Some woman in the next field, seeing the fire, ran to his help. They could not see him, only from the burning hut his voice was heard saying: "O my Saviour, I must die! I pray thee let my body alone be burned, and save my soul from everlasting fire. Take me to thy heaven for thy great mercies' sake." Napet's voice was heard no longer. The fire burned on. The women stood trembling at the fate of the burning child. Very soon, however, the hut was burned to ashes. They were about searching for the boy's bones, when to their surprisd Napet rose up, and rushed into their midst unhurt?

"What saved you?" cried the astonished women. "After my prayer," said Napet, "God put it into my mind to lie upon the ground and cover myself with the ox-hide that was in the hut. I did so. The fire was not hot enough to burn through the hide, and so I was saved?

"Had you any hope then of escaping death, Napet?" asked the missionary a day or two afterward, when hearing his story. "No, I believed that I must die," said the boy.

"Did you hope then that your soul would go beings who had clustered around me all day, had Napet's face grew bright with joy as he replied, taken their dinner baskets upon their arms, and "Yes! I was sure our Saviour heard my prayer,
