THE ONLY WAY TO HEAVEN.

"The road to heaven is the royal road of the cross."—Thomas a Kempis.

We may spread our couch with roses
And sleep through the summer day,
But the soul that in sloth reposes
Is not in the narrow way.
If we follow the chart that is given
We never need be at a loss;
For the only way to heaven
Is the royal way of the cross.

To one who is reared in splendor,
The cross is a heavy load;
And the feet that are soft and tender
Will shrink from the thorny road.
But the chains of the soul must be riven
And wealth must be held as dross,
For the only way to heaven
Is the royal way of the cross.

We say we will walk to-morrow
The path we refuse to-day;
And still with our lukewarm sorrow,
We shrink from the narrow way.
What heeded the chosen eleven
How the fortunes of life might toss,
As they followed their Master to heaven
By the royal way of the cross.

TIME.

'But this I say, brethren, the time is short.'—1 Cor. vii. 29.

'Behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation.'—2 Cor., vi. 2.

Time's an hand's breadth; 'tis a tale;
'Tis a vessel under sail,
'Tis an eagle in its way,
Darting down upon its prey;
'Tis an arrow in its flight,
Mocking the pursuing sight;
'Tis a short-lived fading flower;
'Tis a momentary ray,
Smiling in a winter's day;
'Tis a torrent's rapid stream;
'Tis a shadow; 'tis a dream;
'Tis the closing watch of night,
Dying at the rising light;
'Tis a bubble; 'Tis a sigh;
Be prepar'd, O! man, to die.

Miscellaneous.

"SPEAK TO THAT YOUNG MAN."

BY REV. E. S. FAIRFIELD.

Speak to the young man who trifles with sinful habits. You do not know the danger, if you enter the saloon in town now and then to take a social glass. Van Amburgh thought he had tamed the lion, but when one day he placed his head between the lion's jaws, those jaws closed, and the teeth laid bare the very vitals. You may not see the serpent that lies coiled up at the bottom of that social glass. —"I can command myself. I only take a glass now and then." So it will be now and then, when now means morning and then noon, now means evening and then the next morning.—That young man might have said as much who went over the lesson in ten minutes that other students labored on for two hours, and while other students were reading Xenophon he was going over Demosthenes, Homer and Echines, and reading Greek and Latin poetry as he would Shakespears; who received the degree of A. M. at the same time that he did of A. B., and was Attorney General of New York at an age when common students graduate. When Chief Justice Marshall was on the bench of the Supreme Court of the United States, this man plead an intricate case at the Supreme Court without the scratch of a pen before him, with such eloquence as is not heard there once in half a century. Could not he control himself, if any one? And yet he died a drunkard, at less than forty. (He referred to Judge Talcott.) It would be pleasant enough to be in the outer circles of the maelstrom, but habit, which, God gave to help to make a man a moral giant, becomes a terrible enemy when he begins to go down.—Gambling is of kin to drinking, and whoever gambles generally drinks. I have not time to expand this thought.

Speak to the young man who bears himself arrogantly. Solomon says: "A haughty spirit goes before a fall." Christ pointed out the only way to honor when he said: "He that humbleth himself shall be exalted." Despise not labor, as you may be called upon to change places. I have seen Dr. Beecher digging potatoes, and his two sons, whose names are now historic, were picking them up. One of these sons related the story of a spruce young clergyman who called to see his father, and finding him working in the garden, accosted him as the gardener, and asked if the Dr. was at home.—When apologizing for his rudeness, Dr. Beecher gave him a word of advice. He told him to remember that "A laboring man is a man for a' that." A young sprig of a merchant's clerk in Boston was going out to fish. He must have the nicest of fishing tackle. Why not? He got $50 per month. Coming to a stream, he asked an old fisherman with a rusty tackle to carry him across the stream, to save wetting his feet, and gave the old man a quarter to pay him for his services. He was exceedingly mortified at the hotel, a few hours after, to find that the old man was Daniel Webster. So we must not despise the humble. God's sun paints the working man's face, and his brown face and hard hands may be the disguise of one whom God esteems a king.

Speak to that young man who treats his father and mother with contempt. Nothing is more beautiful than to see a man of gray hairs venerating one with grayer hairs. Two-thirds of the congregation of Henry Ward Beecher were once affected to tears as he entered the church supporting upon his arm his own father.

"DIED YESTERDAY."

Under this title the localizer of the Philadelphia Sun furnishes a few solemn but beautiful reflections:

—Every day (he says truly) is written this little instance, "Died yesterday, so and so." Every day a flower is plucked from some sunny home—a breach made in some happy circle—a jewel stolen from some tressury of love. Each day from the summer fields of life, some harvester disappears—yes, every hour some sentinel falls from his post, and is thrown from the ramparts of time into the surging waters of eternity. Even as we write, the funeral of one who "died yesterday" winds like a winter shadow along the street. "Died yesterday."—Who died? Perhaps it was a gentle babe, sinless as an angel; pure as the zephyr's hymn—one whose laugh was the gush of summer rills loitering in a bower of roses—whose little life was a perpetual May time crowning with the passion flowers that never fade. Or mayhap it was a youth,—hopeful and generous—one whose path was hemmed by flowers, with not a serpent lurking underneath—one whose soul panted after communion with the great and good, and reached forth, with earnest struggle, for the guerdon in the distance. But that heart of his is still now: for he "died yesterday." "Died yesterday!" A young girl, pure as the orange flowers that clasped her forehead, was stricken down as she stood at the altar; and from the dim aisles of the temple she was borne to the "garden of the slumberers." A tall, brown man, girt with the halo of victory, and, at the day's close, under his own vine and fig tree, fell in the dust, even as the anthem trembled on his lips; and he, too, was laid "where the rude forefathers of the hamlet slept." An aged patriarch, bowed with age and care, even as he looked out upon the distant hills for the coming of the angel host, sank into a dreamless slumber; and on his door-post, next day, was written, "Died yesterday!" "Died yesterday!" Daily, men, women, and children are passing away; and hourly, in some graveyard, the soil is flung upon the dead. As often at the morn, we find some flower that blushed sweetly at sunset has withered up forever; so, daily, when we rise from the bivouac to stand against our posts, we miss some brother soldier, whose cheery cry in the sieges and struggles of the past has been as fire from heaven upon our hearts. Each day some pearl drops from the jewelled thread of friendship—some lyre, to which we have been wont to listen, has been hushed forever. But wise is he who mourns not the pearl and the music lost; for life with him shall pass away as an eastern shadow from the hills, and death be a triumph and a gain.

NINE MILES UNDER GROUND.

In visiting Mammoth Cave several years since, I noticed very many things which filled me with wonder. I descended with the guide by a long stairway into a broad, deep chasm, and we walked through large rooms and winding halls to the distance of nine miles under ground, while enormous rocks were overhanging us as if ready to crush us, and thousands had fallen in heaps about our path.

It was wonderful to sail along a river, in these subterranean regions, at least a quarter of a mile, and enveloped with the "blackness of darkness." There were fish without eyes. Organs which were not used had in the course of generations ceased to exist. There, too, were roofless houses, built a mile or more within the cave's mouth, for consumptives who sought eagerly, though in vain, to prolong their lives by exiling themselves to these caverns, where the air has a property peculiarly stimulating, and is not subject to the alternation of summer's heat and winter's cold.

But nothing in Mammoth Cave impressed me more deeply than a fact concerning the proprietor of a hotel near by. He had lived there forty years, and entertained those who had come thousands of miles to see this wonder of the world, yet he had never been inside the cave himself. Being asked why he did not visit it, his careless reply was, "I can go any day."

Visitors had almost daily gone forth with eager haste and returned, weary, but satisfied, delighted; meanwhile he cared less and less about listening to their story, but more and more about getting their money.

Alas, was not this man's conduct like that of some who read these lines?

Often have you been told about a city of surpassing beauty. Its streets are of pure gold. Its inhabitants feel no pain, need no rest. Friends are not torn from the bosom of friends. Time is not wanting in which to carry out every plan. Evil dispositions and wrongs are unknown in that happy community. Friends are on their way thither. You hear daily their expression of anticipated and present delight. But you delay to secure a title of admission. Days, months, years have passed. With this procrastination, has not your heart entwined more about earthly objects? Have you not had fewer thoughts of the beautiful city?

Within the cave there was a vast, yawning gulf. Our party lighted paper which they threw into it. As this floated down, down, we could see its gloomy sides, but could discover no bottom. We shrank back in terror as one after another we crept to the brink.

Dear reader, you have often heard, and upon the best authority, of a "bottomless pit," where "the candle of the wicked shall be put out." Delay no longer to seek peace and forgiveness through a crucified Saviour, lest your feet, which now are on "slippery places" over that yawning gulf, slide from beneath you, and you fail to rise no more.—Tract Journal.

SABBATH BREAKING AND ITS FRUITS.

"Your notions about keeping the Sabbath," said a farmer to a Christain friend, "are all superstition. The idea that it is not profitable or safe to work on the Sabbath as on other days, is false and I will prove it so." So he attempted to prove it, and went on and plowed his field and sowed his grain on the Sabbath, and it came up and grew finely; and often through the season he pointed to it as proving that Sabbath labor is safe and profitable. And so he reaped it, and stacked it in the field, and then thought his argument was complete. But his boys, catching the spirit of their father, took their guns on the Sabbath, and went out hunting in the woods. It was a very dry time, and the wadding from their guns set the leaves on fire, and the wind swept the flames over the field, and soon all that remained of his noble harvest was the blackness and ashes that the fire had left.

Another man, also a farmer, thought he had succeeded better, and even boasted that he had proved by experiment that it was more profitable to work on the Sabbath than to rest or attend Divine worship. And on the Sabbath on which he finished gathering in his crops, he told some of his Christian neighbors how much wiser he had been than they; and that by working on all the Sabbaths of the year he had saved some fifty days which they had lost by their superstition. But that very day the lightning struck his barn and consumed everything in it, leaving his neighbors more satisfied than ever that it is safe "to remember the Sabbath day, and keep it holy."

Another case, confirming the same great truth, has lately met the eye of the writer.—It is the case of a wealthy merchant, doing business in one of our large cities some years ago, who seemed to take delight in violating the sanctity of God's holy day. As he did business on a large scale, he at one time gathered together a million and a half of Spanish dollars to send to China; and as several vessels would be needed to bring home the cargoes he intended to purchase, he divided the money into seven parts, putting it into seven different ships; and to show his contempt for God and his law, he sent these ships to sea on seven consecutive Sabbaths. The ships went out safely, and returned safely, and he doubtless congratulated himself on his successful violation of the fourth commandment; but when their voyages were settled up, he found that five hundred thousand dollars had been sunk in the enterprise. This shook his credit, and loss after loss succeeded, till in about four years the rich merchant died bankrupt.

In all these cases was it chance, or was it Divine Providence? Was it or was it not God's testimony to the Sabbath?—American.

CHEERFULNESS.—There is certainly no state of mind more valuable to a man than cheerfulness. "The merry heart," says the old line, "goes all the day—the sad one tires in a mile." Be cheerful, and you will be able to work better, longer, and with greater success. No doubt there are many things in life to cause discontent; and there is very often cause for a little depression and regret. But no man ought to be melancholy who has not fallen into disgrace or crime. It is quite useless to be fretful and peevish. When a man is in "low spirits" he will never do much good till he becomes cheerful again. This fact should help to rouse him. He should reflect that he is making his position worse by giving way to discontent. The roughest path is made easier to travel, the heaviest load made lighter, the deepest shadow on the heart brightened by cheerfulness. It helps a man on through the world wonderfully, depend upon it.

THE ROYAL INSURANCE COMPANY, 92 Lombard-street, London, and Royal Insurance buildings, Liverpool.
Chairman of the London Board.—SAMUEL BAKER, Esq.
Chairman in Liverpool.—CHARLES TURNER, Esq.
The Royal Insurance Company is one of the largest Offices in the kingdom.
At the Annual Meeting held in August 1859, the following highly satisfactory results were shown:—
FIRE DEPARTMENT.
The most gratifying proof of the expansion of the business is exhibited in the one following fact—that the increase alone of the last three years exceeds the entire business of some of the existing and of many of the recently defunct fire insurance companies of this kingdom.
The Premiums for the year 1855 being..... £130,060
While the Premiums for the year 1558 are.... 196,148
Showing an actual increase of..... 66,088 or upwards of 50 per cent. in three years.
The recent returns of duty made by Government for this latter year (1858) again show the "Royal" as more than maintaining the ratio of its increase as stated in former years. Only one among the London insurance offices exhibits an advance to the extent of one-half the increase of the Company, while all the others respectively fall far short of the moiety of its advance.
LIFE DEPARTMENT.
The amount of new Life Premiums received this year is by far the largest received in any similar period since the commencement of the business, and must far exceed the average of amount received by the most successful offices in the kingdom. The number of policies issued in the year was 852, the sum assured £587,752 6s. 8d., and the premium £12,354 5s. 4d. These figures show a very rapid extension of business during the last ten years. Thus:—

Years.	No. of Policies.	Sums Assured.	New Premiums.
1849 ..	98	£58,704 17 0	£1,580 9 1
1850 ..	190	95,550 9 11	2,677 4 7
1852 ..	422	211,504 10 6	5,625 5 0
1854 ..	408	161,843 15 4	4,694 16 0
1856 ..	703	297,560 16 8	8,650 3 11
1858 ..	852	387,752 6 8	12,354 5 4

The remarkable increase in the business of the last four years is mainly consequent upon the large bonus declared in 1855, which amounted to no less than £2 per cent. per annum on the sums assured, and averaged 50 per cent. upon the premiums paid.
PERCY M. DOVE, Manager and Actuary.
