THE FAMILY.

"Fellow-citizens with the saints and of the household of God."—Ephesians ii. 19.

There is a wondrous family,
That's scattered far and near,
All travelling to eternity,
But never gathered here.
There's many a loving brother,
And sisters dear, we know,
Who shall never see each other,
Nor ever meet below.

They have all one mighty Father,
Who is for ever near,
But they only feel his presence,
And never see him here.
They have all an Elder Brother,
Who saved them every one,
But they shall not see his beauty
Until their journey's done.

They have all one home, far distant,
On which their hopes are set;
But they do not know its glories,
Nor even dream them yet.
When within its blessed portals
This scattered household meet,
How great will be the jubilee,
The fellowship how sweet!

Then, if homewards I am hasting,
I need not shed a tear,
Though I meet few kindly faces,
Or friendly greetings here.
All more dear will be the welcome,
When entrance there I gain;
All the sweeter, to be sharing
Love's pure and perfect reign.

BLIND AMOS AND HIS VELVET PRINCIPLES.

(Concluded.)

TRY THE VELVET PRINCIPLE.

I shall never forget hearing blind Amos talk first; it was one fine evening, and a number of us boys had been merrily playing on the green, until, as is not unfrequently the case with the games and amusements of this world, in our childhood and in boyhood—type of after-life—the play had ended in a quarrel, and I am afraid there were some indications of a fight brewing among some of us. We were not far from Amos, who was sitting at his little garden-gate; he called to us, and began to talk to us:—"Boys, you have had a good long game, and it will soon be time for you to go home; but before you go, I have one word to say to you, and especially to the two of you I heard speaking so angrily just now. I fear you were going to fight; recollect always before you begin to fight, to put on your velvet gloves. When I was a boy—I was not blind then—I remember it was just such an evening as I think this must be, I and a number of my playmates—all gone now, I know not where—had rambled through the woods and fields, till, quite forgetful of the fading light, we found ourselves far from home. We found we had lost our way. It did so happen that we were nearer home than we thought; but how to get to it was the question; by the edge of the field we saw a man coming along, and we ran to ask him to tell us. Whether he was in trouble or not I do not know, but he gave us some very surly answer. Just then there came along another man, a near neighbor, and with a merry smile on his face, 'Jem,' said he, 'a man's tongue is like a cat's: it is either a piece of velvet or a piece of sand-paper, just as he likes to use it, and to make it; and I declare you always seem to use your tongue for sand-paper. Try the velvet, man, try the velvet principle.'

"I did not think then, I could not know what velvet was to be to me in after-life, but I never forgot the good-humoured smile, the good-tempered tongue of that man: and I have often thought, when I have heard angry words rising, and have sometimes heard blows struck, things would have gone on far better if they had tried the velvet principle. When I was apprenticed, there was a lad apprenticed with me who tried all my patience and power of endurance—he took a strange dislike to me; he annoyed me in every way he could. I was a passionate mortal, and many a sharp and angry expression would come nearly to my tongue; but I prayed for grace to control my temper, and I often muttered to myself, Now, Amos, try the velvet; sometimes the sand-paper got the best of it: but I always found that while it exasperated and broke the skin it did no good to me—it did not make my life a bit more quiet. Every angry word left me more unhappy than before. I invariably said to myself, Why did you not try the velvet principle?

"In the town where I was apprenticed, I knew a couple when I was nearly out of my time, and what an unhappy life they led to be sure; they lived in our street—I do not say they came out into the street to wrangle, but everybody knew how unhappy their lives were. The name of the woman before she was married was Fife, and when her temper was very much vexed, her husband, I remember, a most provoking fellow, would sometimes come and stand at the street-door and ask the neighbors to come and listen to his fife, and inquire of them if they did not admire the sound of that fife; and very funny I dare say it was that he should say so; but I know that it always irritated his wife the more. Then sometimes she would take up the sand-paper, and when she began, I remember, she was quite a match for her husband. She would ask him if his temper did not want a poultice—if he had recovered from the tongue-ache—if she should get him a little tincture of nettles; —they were the talk of the whole neighborhood. I used to hear them and think about the sand-paper and the velvet very often. I have known that one or the other would have been soothed and lulled by a kind word or two; and I have seen that a kind word would have prevented the whole quarrel; and I used to think and say, Why, they would begin life again with quite a new, everlasting honey-moon if they would only try the velvet principle.

"Then I became, I hope, a Christian, and I found that the Christian's 'feet were to be shod with the preparation of the Gospel of Peace.' I found that the Christian, wherever he went, was to carry the spirit of peace, a loving heart, and a loving life; and I found, too, that the love of God in the heart is the only thing which will conquer temper or the tongue, or make the 'speech' to be, as the Apostle said, 'always with grace and seasoned with salt.' But I do think, that after I became a Christian I had more trials and infirmities of temper than before. I had a greater conflict with self, for I had more to live for: but every day as I arose and went to bed I used especially to pray that God would dwell in me by his love through Jesus Christ, and that he would make me more loving to others, and that thus I might be able to carry out my favorite velvet principle.

"The best men sometimes get into trouble: the minister of our parish did something—I forget what, that created a strong feeling against him. I do not know now whether he was right or wrong. I fancy he was right, for he bore a good deal of persecution with so meek and quiet a spirit—he went about from house to house in the parish apparently not heeding any of the remarks about him; indeed I know there were no grounds for saying anything against his character; and he behaved, I remember, in so gentle and loving a manner, that in a month or two he won all hearts to him again. I have no doubt it was a severe struggle, but he conquered: he conquered himself, and he conquered the village. I remember how much I admired him, and how gladly I beheld an illustration of my favorite doctrine: it was a perfect triumph of the velvet principle.

"When I came to live in this village, and to follow my occupation here, I do not know why, I found many of my neighbors did not like me. I never went to the public-house; I did not associate much with other people—I was thought to be above my station in life; I had innumerable sins of pride laid at my door. I lost many shillings, and in consequence of this cruelty I often, with my poor wife, passed a whole day with nothing to eat, or to give to our children. Sometimes I thought I must leave the place—sometimes my faith began to fail—but God enabled me to hold on fast and firm. I determined to say nothing myself. I have always said, Boys, if you will let a lie, or any other bad thing alone, and not fight it, or kick it, or handle it, it will rot and die at last: and so I found it: the good opinion of my neighbors came quite as unexpectedly and undeservedly as their censure. But I attribute the change to my following up my attachment to the velvet principle.

"Well, my dear boys, I dare say I have talked to you so long that you have quite forgotten what you were going to quarrel about; and I am sure you are very glad that I stopped you in the midst of the quarrel; and you will thank me if you are wise boys, for having prevented you from giving way to bad tempers. Now recollect, that in the long run, gentleness is the truest strength. I know it will not seem so at first—there seems to be a good deal more power in a blow than a kind word, and much more power in an unkind look than a kind one. But it is not so, gentleness is the truest force. What does the Bible tell us is to lead the lion, the ox, and the wolf? Why, a little child. 'A little child shall lead them.' The most weak and innocent thing you can think of shall lead the most cruel and savage creatures. When I was a boy, I remember hearing of a little girl who had some ornaments given to her by a good spirit; some people said they were fairy gifts; these ornaments were so valuable, that nothing on earth could buy them, and they were invisible, although they were always worn. The relations and friends of the girl could not make out what ornaments the good little spirit could have left. They were not gold, nor diamonds, nor precious stones of any kind. At last it turned out that the ornaments were 'a meek and quiet spirit,' by which everything she did was to turn into gold, and everything she said was to turn into gold. My boys; these are ornaments that God alone by his Spirit can give to you. But if he give them, you will never give way to evil dispositions nor be disposed to fight, but in all your affairs of life try the velvet principle."

THE MISSIONARY BOY.

A little fellow only five years old, hearing that a neighbor who was captain of a ship, was about to sail to the West Indies, said:

"O, let us send some Bibles to the poor black children, and tell them they are sent by a little boy who loves Jesus."

Pleased with his beautiful spirit, his parents sent twenty copies of the Bible. When told what they had done, he looked very solemn, and said:

"Ask God to bless his word to the little children."

When he was six years old, another of his acquaintance was going to Australia. Said he:

"Let us send some Bibles there, and tell them they are from a little boy who loves Jesus."

When he was twelve years old he died. Just before his death, he "made his will," leaving all his money—he had over two hundred dollars—to send Bibles to heathen children, as a gift from the little boy who loved Jesus. I need not add he died joyfully. Children who love and work for Jesus as he did, always die well.

You see, he had the true missionary spirit. First, he loved Jesus himself. Then he loved heathen children for Jesus' sake. To prove his love, he did what he could to send them the Gospel. Surely, he was a missionary boy indeed.

IDLE WORDS.—"Frank, my boy, where was the text to-day?" said Mr. Raymond to his son, a dark-eyed lad of fourteen, who sat near him at the dinner table on the Sabbath.

"I cannot remember the chapter or verse, father, but it was, I know, something about idle words; and Mr. Seymour made it out to be a very wicked thing to say a great many words I've always been used to saying. I'm sure I never thought of there being any harm in them before."

"Such as what my son?" said his father.

"Why, he said 'goodness' and 'mercy' were very often used thoughtlessly as exclamations, and because they were divine attributes, they should not be spoken lightly; and 'gracious' too, father, he said we ought not to use so. Now please tell me what is meant by attributes?"

"Do you remember the answer in your catechism, Frank, after the question, "What is God?"

"Yes, father; it says, 'God is a Spirit, infinite, eternal, and unchangeable in His being, wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodness, and truth."

Those words which describe God, and which I explained to you the other day, are his attributes. We should call them traits of character, if we were speaking of a human being. Mercy is not particularly mentioned in this sentence, as goodness seems to be sufficient to express the same idea."

"What other words were there, Frank?" said his mother; "did you feel as if our good pastor made too much of our useless every day expressions?"

"Yes, mother, it seemed to me he did not approve of any exclamations at all, but tried to make it out as sinful to say almost everything. I don't believe I can possibly get along without saying—well, I don't know—ever so many words."

"Such as 'plague on it,' or 'confound it,'" rejoined his mother. "It would, perhaps, be a hard task, my dear boy, for you to break yourself of these impatient expressions; and yet, don't you think you would be happier and more agreeable without them?"

When dinner was over, Frank brought his Testament to his father, and they found the text in the 12th chapter of Matthew, and the 36th verse. Suppose my little readers look and see if I quote it correctly. "But I say unto you, That every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment."

Frank remembered it, after repeating it over several times; and when the next day in school he was tempted to use some of his old expressions, it came into his mind like a little bright star, and kept him in the right way.

He found it very hard at first to break himself of the habit, but he knew his heavenly Father was always ready to help those who pray to Him. So he fought against it, and asked God's help, and in time was almost free from the use of idle words.

No sooner are the avenues to the heart left unguarded, than a multitude of evil guests come thronging in, ready to take up their abode there. The heart then, should be kept with all diligence.

THE Proprietor of PICKSTONE'S WASHING AND CLEANSING CRYSTAL, deems it his duty to caution the public against spurious imitations of his highly celebrated Washing Crystal, which is the most harmless compound extant. It is free from Lime, Vitriol, and all other deadly mixtures so common to be found amongst washing compounds. Try Pickstone's Washing Crystal, if you want ease, comfort, and economy in washing, which washes every thing, and has rapid sale.

It will be found invaluable for the following domestic purposes, viz.:—It washes all fine things, such as Muslin, Lace, Crotchet Work, Baby Linen, &c.; cleaning Sponges, Combs, and Brushes; removing stains from the hands, and grease from Carpets, Cloth, Flannel, &c. It makes Hard Water Soft, and may be used with good effect in Baths, as it immediately removes all condensed perspiration from the skin. A small quantity should also be used in the foot pan. It forms a cooling and cleansing wash for the head, by dissolving a teaspoonful of the Crystal in a quarter of a pint of water; and for cleansing the Mouth, Teeth, and Gums, it is quite a luxury, by adding a teaspoonful to a tumbler of water. It renders linen beautifully white, and unlike other preparations, at the same time preserves the fabric. It contains nothing injurious to life. A child eating it by mistake, will not be injured.

If you have not used this Cleansing Crystal, lose no time in obtaining it. Nothing has ever been introduced into this country which has effected such a wonderful change upon Washing Days. It saves your time—saves your clothes—saves your money; and it does not injure the most delicate hands. Pickstone's Cleansing Crystal makes washing a pleasure, reduces the cost of fuel, the wear and tear of labor, and improves every article washed. For Linens, and heavy washes, it cannot be surpassed; for Laces, and fine fabrics, it is unequalled. It does not injure the color of Prints, but strengthens and improves them—by its use they retain their original brilliancy. Flannels become white and soft like new. White things are much improved, and keep their color, even if put by for months. Thousands of Families made happy! No misery on a Washing Day, with PICKSTONE'S Cleansing Crystal.

THE ROYAL INSURANCE COMPANY, 52 Lombard-street, London, and Royal Insurance buildings, Liverpool.
Chairman of the London Board.—SAMUEL BAKER, Esq.
Chairman in Liverpool.—CHARLES TURNER, Esq.
The Royal Insurance Company is one of the largest Offices in the kingdom.
At the Annual Meeting held in August 1859, the following highly satisfactory results were shown:—
FIRE DEPARTMENT.
The most gratifying proof of the expansion of the business is exhibited in the one following fact—that the increase alone of the last three years exceeds the entire business of some of the existing and of many of the recently defunct fire insurance companies of this kingdom.
The Premiums for the year 1855 being.....£130,060
While the Premiums for the year 1858 are.... 196,148
Showing an actual increase of..... 66,088
or upwards of 50 per cent. in three years.
The recent returns of duty made by Government for this latter year (1858) again show the "Royal" as more than maintaining the ratio of its increase as stated in former years. Only one among the London insurance offices exhibits an advance to the extent of one-half the increase of the Company, while all the others respectively fall far short of the moiety of its advance.
LIFE DEPARTMENT.
The amount of new Life Premiums received this year is by far the largest received in any similar period since the commencement of the business, and must far exceed the average of amount received by the most successful offices in the kingdom. The number of policies issued in the year was 852, the sum assured £287,752 6s. 8d., and the premium £12,354 3s. 4d. These figures show a very rapid extension of business during the last ten years. Thus:—

Years.	No. of Policies.	Sums Assured.	New Premiums.
1848 ..	99	£36,764 11 9	£1,559 2 1
1850 ..	190	95,559 9 11	3,927 4 7
1852 ..	422	181,504 10 6	5,825 5 10
1854 ..	408	161,846 13 4	4,594 16 0
1856 ..	703	297,560 16 8	8,550 3 11
1858 ..	852	287,752 6 8	12,354 3 4

The remarkable increase in the business of the last four years is mainly consequent upon the large bonus declared in 1856, which amounted to no less than 22 per cent. per annum on the sums assured, and averaged 80 per cent. upon the premiums paid.
PERCY M. DOVE, Manager and Actuary.
JOHN M. JOHNSTON, Secretary to the London Board.
