THE FLOWER IN THE CITY.

I saw a window dim and tall
Far down a city lane;
Full seldom could the sunbeam fall
Against the dingy pane.
Yet, mindful of things green and sweet,
Some hopeful hand had set
Upon that dirty window seat
A box of mignonette.
The paint had fallen from the wood
That bound the narrow ledge;
The sooty sparrow came and stood
And twittered on its edge.
The crumbling earth lay hard and bare
Around the ragged roots;
The little flowers showed dull and rare
Amid the stunted shoots.
But when the sash was upward thrown,
'Mid all the dirt and gloom,
A gentle fragrance all their own
Passed to the inner room.
The weary woman staid her task,
The perfume to inhale;
The pale-faced children stopped to ask
What breath was on the gale.
And none that breathed that sweetened air
But had a gentle thought—
A gleam of something good and fair
Across his spirit brought.
So deeds of love will cheer and bless
A low laborious life;
So words of peace and gentleness
Glide in and soften strife.
So prayers in crowded moments given,
Of tumult, toil, or woe,
Will sweeten with a breath from heaven
Our weary path below.

Miscellaneous.

A TOUCHING NARRATIVE.

An army correspondent of the Presbyterian gives the following incident as related by a medical friend, in the cabin of a Mississippi transport steamer, to a group of listening soldiers:

In the town of L., where I reside and practice my profession, a company was raised for the Iowa regiment. Among the volunteers was a boy about sixteen years of age, and known as Billy W. His home was a den of iniquity and vice. His parents were the vilest of the vile. I know of no moral, and of but few human laws they did not habitually violate. So far as I know, Billy never attended a Sabbath school. I do not believe he ever attended church half a dozen times in his life; and as to religious knowledge, I regarded him as little better than a heathen. Before the company left us, every member of it was furnished with a copy of the New Testament. Billy received his, joined his regiment, went to the seat of war, and for months we heard nothing from him. In the bloody and terrible conflict of Shiloh, in the month of April last, Billy, the drummer-boy, was dangerously wounded. He was put upon a cot, placed upon a government transport, and brought down to Cairo, with other wounded soldiers. Here a kind Providence seemed to watch over the boy. His youth, his manly fortitude, and his interesting appearance enlisted the sympathies of strangers, and, instead of being sent to the hospital, he was taken upon his cot and sent to Dixon, whence he was sent directly to his home at L. On his way from Pittsburgh Landing he contracted a disease which would, I think, of itself have soon terminated his life. Immediately upon his arrival at home I was called to visit him professionally. The news of his arrival had drawn to the house three or four of our pious women, who went to minister to his wants. I saw at once that he must soon die, and said to him:

"Billy, I will do all I can for you. I will give you medicine, but it will, I fear, do you no good. You probably have but a very short time to live."

He received the announcement with a composure which astonished us all. It was evidently not the result of stupidity or indifference. A pleasant smile was upon his countenance, and there was something about him which those of us who had known him before his enlistment failed to comprehend. After a few moments' silence, he looked up to me and said, pleasantly:

"Doctor, I bless God that I am not afraid to die. Jesus is my Saviour. You have been very kind to me, doctor, and now I have one favor to ask. It is the last request I shall ever make of you. Kneel right down here, by my bed and pray for me."

I was astonished. I never supposed the boy knew what prayer meant, and wondered where he had learned. I was never so concerned before.

"Billy," I replied, "I can not do that. I try sometimes to pray for myself, but I have never in my life prayed audibly in public. You must excuse me."

"Doctor, I can not. You can—you must pray with me."

"But, Billy, I can not. I will do this, however. We will get a Bible, and I will read to you a chapter—some of the words of the Saviour. Then we will all kneel around your bed, and one of these good women will lead us in prayer."

He assented, though with great reluctance. He was evidently not satisfied. The one great desire of his heart seemed to be that I should offer the prayer. After a moment's silence he said to me:

"Turn me upon my side, doctor, if you please, that I may lie with face toward you as you read."

As gently as I could I turned him upon his side. A large Bible was then brought and laid before him upon the bed. In an instant he threw his attenuated arms around it, and pressed it to his heart with all his remaining strength. It seemed as if he could not let it go. I remembered that Talmat, and knew then how Billy had come to love the Bible, and how he had learned to pray. God seemed to direct me what to read to this dying boy. I opened at one of those chapters in John's gospel so full of precious words, and read it with a faltering voice. I assure you, Billy kept the Bible firmly clasped in his arms while I was reading. As soon as the chapter was finished, we all knelt around his bed, while one of the women offered one of the most appropriate and touching prayers I ever heard. There were no dry eyes but we rose from our knees. Then I bade Billy good-by, promising to call on him in the morning, if he was then alive. Just as I was leaving the room, one of the women present touched me on the shoulder and said:

"Doctor, Billy wishes to see you a moment."

I went back. As soon as I was near enough, he caught my hands in his, and said:

"Doctor, I can not be denied. You must—you must pray with me."

the next hour he died a most triumphant and happy death, and doubtless now stands before the throne with

"A crown upon his forehead,
A harp within his hands."

Such was my friend's story. Comment could add nothing to its point; and, for some moments after its conclusion, the silence was unbroken by a single word from the little group of attentive listeners. Was there one who did not breathe the prayer, "Let me die the death of the righteous"? I hope not.

A THOUGHTLESS BOY PUNISHED.

"I shall never forget," writes a correspondent of the Agriculturist, "an incident of my childhood, by which I was taught to be careful not to wound the feelings of the unfortunate. A number of us school boys were playing by the roadside one Saturday afternoon, when the stage-coach drove up to a neighboring tavern, and the passengers alighted. As usual, we gathered around it to observe them. Among the number was an elderly man with a cane, who got out with much difficulty, and when on the ground, he walked with the most curious contortions. His feet turned one way, his knees another, and his whole body looked as though the different members were independent of it, and of each other, and every one was making motions to suit itself. I unthinkingly shouted, 'Look at old rattle-bones!' And the other boys took up the cry with mocking laughter, while the poor man turned his head with an expression of pain which I can never forget. Just then, to my surprise and horror, my father came around the corner, and immediately stepping up to the stranger shook his hands warmly, and assisted him to walk to our house, which was but a little distance. I could enjoy no more play that afternoon, and when tea-time came, I would gladly have hid myself, but I knew that would be vain, and so tremblingly went into the sitting-room. To my great relief, the stranger did not recognize me, but remarked pleasantly to my father as he introduced me, 'Such a fine boy was surely worth saving.' How the words cut me to the heart! My father had often told me the story of a friend who had plunged into the river to save me as I was drowning, while an infant, and had been in consequence of a cold taken then, had been made a cripple by inflammatory rheumatism; and this was the man whom I had made a butt of ridicule, and a laughing stock for my companions. I tell you, boys and girls, I would give many dollars to have the memory of that event taken away. If ever you are tempted as I was, remember that while no good can come of sport whereby the feelings of others are wounded, you may be laying up for yourselves painful recollections that will not leave you for a lifetime."

DESTRUCTION OF JERUSALEM.

Josephus says, "There broke out a prodigious storm in the night with the utmost violence—lightnings and rains; and these things (adds Josephus) were a manifest indication that some destruction was coming upon men, when the system of this world was thrown into such disorder." The same historian (not a Christian, but a Jew,) says that a star hung over the city like a sword, and a comet continued over it for a whole year; also that when the people were assembled to celebrate the feast of unleavened bread, so great a light shone round the altar and the holy house that it appeared to be bright day-time, and this continued for half an hour; at the same time, the eastern gate of the temple, which was of solid brass, and was very heavy, and was scarcely shut in an evening by twenty men, and had bolts fastened very deep into the firm floor, was seen to be opened of its own accord about midnight; moreover, the setting of the sun, there was seen all over the sky chariots and troops of soldiers in their armor fighting in the clouds and surrounding cities; also at the feast of Pentecost, as the priests were going into the inner temple, they heard a voice, as of a multitude, crying, "Let us depart hence." And Josephus records it as most terrible that all, that an ordinary country fellow went about the city, day and night, crying out, "A voice from the east, a voice from the west, a voice from the four winds, a voice against Jerusalem and the temple; the magistrates endeavored by stripes to restrain him, but he still cried in a mournful voice, at every stroke of the whip, 'Voe, voe to Jerusalem and the temple.' Josephus says—'All the calamities which have befallen any nation from the beginning of the world were but small in comparison with those which befell the Jews; within the city the fury was so great, that they filled the temple itself with continual slaughter; nay, to such height did their madness rise, that they destroyed the granaries of corn which should have sustained them; all reverence to age, and the ties of parent and child, were annihilated; children attacked the half-baked morsels which the fathers were eating out of their mouths, and mothers snatched the morsels from their children also, and the young men wandered about the market-places like shadows, and fell down through hunger and famine.' At length the famine became so extreme that they devoured what the most sordid animals refused. A woman of distinguished rank, in hunger and desperation killed and roasted her own babe from her breast, and had eaten one-half of it before the horrid deed was detected.
