ELLIAH'S TRANSLATION. Father I am sad and lonely, Bowed and pensive here I roam; O accept my heart's petition, Send and take me home. I have been a faithful prophet,

Or at least have tried to be; Wept and prayed, and sighed and struggled To keep Israel free. But thine altars lie in ruins,

None Thee as their Master own, All thy people bow to Baal, I am left alone. View me in my sad condition, Father, bid me cease to roam; O accept my heart's petition, Send and take me home.

"Wherefore art thou grieved, Elijah? Why doth sorrow fill thy mind? I am just as near as ever, Just as good and kind. Though my altars lie in ruin,

And my people spurn my laws. Thou, my servant, needs't not languish-Thou art not the cause. I, thy God, will still sustain thee; All thy sorrows now dismiss;

Shortly I will send and take thee To the world of bliss. Bow no more in pensive sadness, Soon my glory thou shalt see; Tarry here beside the river Till I call for thee.

"Gabriel, an errand earthward; Harness up the golden team; Go, and you will find Elijah Waiting by the stream, He has been my faithful prophet,

Often struggled all slone, And has won himself a station Very near the throne. To the verdant banks of Jordan. Hasten down without delay,

For I know he is expecting To come home to day. Bear him upward very gently, Sing of Canaan on the road, Tell him he will find a welcome In his bright abode.

"Angels, in your robes of beauty, Gather round the golden gate, And with softest, sweetest music, For Elijah wait.

I have sent the fiery chariot To convey my servant here; Hail him with a joyous welcome When he shall appear. Take this glittering crown of glory, Place it on his worthy brow.

Hark ! the chariot wheels are rumbling ; See! he's coming now." Welcome! welcome; faithful prophet, To our sweetest pleasures come; See this dazzling, beauteous city; 'Tis thy final home.

PULL IT UP BY THE ROOT.

"Father, here is a dock," said Thomas, as he was at work with his father in the garden; "shall I cut it off close to the root?"

"No," replied his father, "that will not do; I have cut it up myself many times, but it grows again stronger than ever. Pull it up by the root, for nothing else will kill it." Thomas pulled again and again at the dock, but the root was very deep in the ground, and he could not stir it from its place; so he asked his father to come and help him, and his father went and soon pulled it up.

"This dock-root, Thomas," said his father, "which is an evil and fast-growing weed in a garden, puts hearts of children. If a boy is ill-tempered, we must not expect to find him in good humour, cheerfulness, thankfulness, and a desire to make others happy. And a little girl who is idle, we need not expect to be industrious, neat, or cheerful. If a child is undutiful to his parents, and despises the commandments of God, we might as well look for a rose or a tulip in a bed of nettles, as hope to find in his heart those graces and good desires that we love to see growing there. Every bad habit, every evil passion which troubles you, you should try with all your heart and mind to overcome; you should, if possible, tear it up. But as you will find your own strength but weakness, go straightway to that Almighty Friend who alone is able to strengthen and assist you. He can take from your heart the love of sin, and this is the only way of destroying it, as we have destroyed the dock by pulling it up by the root" - Children's Treasury.
