THE TWO DIMES.

AN OLD STORY IN A NEW DRESS. As Dick and Ben, one summer's day. Were sauntering home, fatigued with play. They spied, close by a dark pine wood, A pair of shoes, coarse, strong, and good. It seemed as if the owner's care Was to preserve these shoes from wear ; And so he'd placed them where they stood, _ And gone barefooted to the wood,

Mary

Ben, glancing at the setting sun, Said, "Look here, Dick, let's have some fun. 'Twill soon be dark ;--you won't refuse ;--So bear a hand; let's take these shoes; And then we'll hide behind this stack, And wait till the old chap comes back, And let him hunt until we choose To sing out, 'Mister, here's your shoes.' "And, ere he has a chance to try To catch us, we will let 'em fly . Right at his head, plump in the face, And then we'll lead him such a race. I wish the other boys were here; We'd make old Two-shoes rub his ear, Come, take one, Dick ; just feel its weight ; And when you fire, fire straight." "No, no," said Dick ; "Not I ; for one, I'm fond of joking, fond of fun; But who knows who this man may be? Perhaps he's poor as poor can be, And seeks, in yonder dark pine wood, To gather chips to cook his food: But come, don't let us have a spat; We'll play a trick worth two of that. "I've got a dime, and so have you; Let's put one into each old shoe, And then we'll creep behind this hay, And hear what the old man will say." "Agreed," said Ben, who, fond of fun, And willing any risk to run To have a laugh, or play, or joke, Yielded at once when kindness spoke. So in the shoes they put their dimes, And back and forth went twenty times,

And laughed, and talked about the way The trick would end they meant to play. First, they would twist the shoes about To make the precious dimes show out; Then place the silver in a way To eatch the sun's departing ray.

At length, a sound their senses greet,

Boy. [Enters foppishly dressed, keeping his hat on, and flourishing a elender cane, makes a slight bow and says:] "Is this Mr. Marchand? Mr. M. Yes sir, that is my name. Boy. I perceive that you advertise for an assistant in your store. Mr. M. Yes; I want a boy to assist me. Do you know of one who you think would answer? Boy. Well, I happen to be disengaged just at the present, and should like to make an engagement with you. [Dusts his pantaloons with his cane.] Mr. M. How old are you? Boy. Well, sir, I reached the age of 15 last month. Mr. M. Have you ever been in a store? Boy. Yes; in several, but have found none to my liking yet. Mr. M. In what do you think that you can be useful to me? Boy. Why, I can turn my hand to most anything. I am pretty well booked up. Mr. M. Are you quick at errands? Boy. Why, I should not like much to do errands. Spoken proudly.] Mr. M. Can you sweep out and dust down well? Boy. [Looking up astonished.] Young men don't sweep nor dust now-a-days; the women folks have monopolized that business. Mr. M. Then how do you expect to assist me? Boy. O. I can do your writing and answer questions when you are out. Mr. M. Well, what pay should you require for such service ? Boy. In the neighborhood of five dollars. Mr. M. In the neighborhood ! What do you mean ? more than that. Mr. M. And you can neither dust, sweep, nor run of errands ? Boy. Well, I suppose I could, but-Mr. M. But what? Boy. It ain't exactly the thing. Mr. M. Why, my young friend, at your age, I used to run errands, sweep, dust, and perform all the | sel Cords, VESTINGS, and every description of Goods suitaduties of a boy and-Boy. [Indignantly.] Sir, you don't take me for a boy, do you? It is useless to fool away the time in this manner. [Marches off in high dudgeon.] Mr. M. Isn't that a fine specimen of the boys of the present age? I fear we shall have to do without. son. ## THE RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCER.

Of rustling leaves, and moving feet; And then, like kittens at their play, They ran and hid beneath the hay ; But still afraid that they should lose A sight of him who owned the shocs, Kept peeping out, as if to view And note what he would say or do.

And soon, from out the lonely wood, In weary, sad, and thoughtful mood, An old man came, bowed down with years, Whose eyes betokened recent tears. His steps were feeble, tottering, slow ; His hair as white as driven snow ; And, as he came towards the stack, They saw the faggots on his back. At length he stopped, as if to muse; His tearful eyes turned towards his shoes, When, as the silver met his sight, They flashed, as with a heavenly light; And down upon the yielding sod He knelt, with heartfelt thanks to God, And, with his aged hands upraised, He said, "O God, thy name be praised !" And as the boys beneath the hay Listened with awe to hear him pray, They learned his story, sad and brief, Of toil and sickness, pain and grief: His children, one by one had died, And he had laid them, side by side, Within the dark and chilly tomb, And o'er his life spread heartfelt gloom. Yet, through that gloom a cheering ray Of hope sustained him on his way; He felt that, when this life was o'er, His children he should see once more. And so, with patience, hope and trust, He had consigned the dust to dust, And, at the grave of each loved one, Had knelt and said, "Thy will be done." Then followed other ills of life, Cold, pinching want, a suffering wife,-All this, and more, they heard him say, As they lay hid beneath the hay; And then with cheek all wet with fears, In voice made tremulous by years, They heard him ask of God to bless. The hand that had relieved distress. But rising from his knees, at length, And leaning on his staff for strength, He thrust his feet within his shoes, And hurried homeward with the news. The boys, half buried 'neath the hay, Saw him go tottering on his way; Then, crawling out, they homeward went, Pleased with the way their dimes were spent. "I say," said Ben, "If I had died I couldn't help it; so I cried; But if I ever try again 'To play a joke, my name ain't Ben." "Well, well, we've had our fun," said Dick, " And played a real handsome trick ; And I shan't be ashamed to tell About a joke that ends so well."

MORAL. The moral of this tale is plain :--Cause no unnecessary pain; Pluck from your heart all evil thoughts; Let love and kindness guide your sports; And, if inclined to play a trick, Act tenderly, like honest Dick ; Or if in frolic, now and then, You're le astray, remember Ben. Remember, too, in pain or grief, A prayer to God will bring relief. Or if with joy the heart expands, On bended knee, with upraised hands, And heart uplifted to the skies, Let thanks in prayer and praise arise. God hears the gentlest sigh or prayer ; fle's ever present everywhere. --- Christian Register.

purpose? Mr. M. Well, I had almost made up my mind is your name? Boy. Charles Somers, sir. Mr. M. How old are you? Boy. Fourteen next Junc, sir. Mr. M. Where do you live? Boy. Number 441 Harrison Avenue, sir. Mr. M. Are your parents living? Boy. My mother is, but father died two years ago. Mr. M. Have you any brothers or sisters? Boy. Yes sir; one brother and three sisters. Mr. M. Are you the oldest ? Boy. Yes sir. Mr. M. How does your mother manage to maintain so large a family?

Boy. O, sir, she takes in washing and sewing, and other work, such as she can get, and I do errands for the Misses Stockton who live near us, and for other folk, by which I get some money to help mother along. Mr. M. Very well; that speaks well for you, for you know the city is a very bad place, and good boys are not very plenty. Have you ever been in a store ? Boy. No sir. We have been in the city but a few months, and I have not been able to get a place yet, but I think I could do all you would want me to. I'm strong and-don't you think I'll do, sir ? [Looks very inquiringly to Mr. M.]

Mr. M. Well, I don't know. [Thoughtfully gazing upon the floor.] Can you bring recommendations ? Boy. [Dropping his head despondingly.] I don't know as I could ; we have no friends in the city. Mr. M. That is very unfortunate, for it is important in taking any one into our store in these times, that they come well recommended. What is that? [Pointing to something in the boy's breast pocket.]

Boy. O, that is [draws it out] a Bible my Sunday school teacher gave me the last Sunday before we came here.

Mr. M. Ah! let me see it. [Takes it, opens and reads aloud.] "Presented by his teacher to Charles Somers, for his punctual attendance and exemplary behaviour at the Sabbath school." Well, my boy, you have here one of the very best recommendations that could be produced. It is a great pity there are no more boys worthy of such a testimonial. You may come and try, and if you will do well you shall be well paid for your services.

Boy. I thank you, sir. When may I come? Mr. M. To morrow-morning, if you wish. Boy. [Withdrawing.] Thank you. O how glad my mother will be! Good morning. Mr. M. Good morning.

This is the smith that works with a will, to give force to the blows we quietly deal, to fashion the sledge with its face of steel, that batters the stone, that grinds the axe, that cuts the wood, that feeds the fire Old Nick built. Eternal Truth. This is the spirit so gentle and still, that nerves the smith to work with a will, to give strength to the blows we quietly deal, to fashion the sledge with its face of steel, that batters the stone that grinds the axe, that cuts the wood that feeds the fire Old Nick built.

FIRE DEPARTMENT

The most gratifying proof of the expansion of the busi-ness is exhibited in the one following fact—that the increase alone of the last three years exceeds the entire business of some of the existing and of many of the recently defunct fire insurance companies of this kingdom.

The Premiums for the year 1855 being ..... £130,060 While the Premiums for the year 1558 are .... 196,148 Showing an actual increase of ... ..... 66,088 or upwards of 50 per cent. in three years.

The recent returns of duty made by Government for this latter year (1858) again show the "Royal" as more than maintaining the ratio of its increase as stated in former years. Only one among the London insurance offices exhibits an advance to the extent of one-half the increase of the Company, while all the others respectively fall far short of the moiety of its advance.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.

The amount of new Life Premiums received this year is by far the largest received in any similar period since the commencement of the business, and mut far exceed the average of amount received by the most successful offices in the kingdom. The number of policies issued in the year was 832, the sum assured £387,752 6s. 8d., and the premium £12,354 8s. 4d. These figures show a very rapid extension of business during the last ten years. Thus :-Years. No. of Policies. Sums Assured. New Premiums.
