FERGUSON BROTHERS.

We regret to learn that a young man named Clarke, from Beckaquimic, was drowned from on board the Bonnie Doon, on her upward trip from Fredericton on Wednesday last. It appears that as the Doon was in the neighborhood of Burgoyne's Eddy she came in contact with a stick of timber. which had the effect of swinging her broadside to the current, and this caused her to careen suddenly the unfortunate man Clarke and a Mr. Stickney were seated on the lower side of the boat, and as the steamer careened both were precipitated into the river. A canoe was immediately pushed towards them, and Mr. Stickney succeeded in catching and clinging to it until rescued; Clarke seemed to have been stuned by the fall, as he made no attempt whatever to preserve his life, and after floating quietly for a short distance, sank to rise no more. - Wood. atock Sentinel.

Lee is said to admit a loss of eighteen thousand, which is far greater than ours in proportion to the strength of his army.

The raid of General Stoneman's cavalry, of which so much has been heard, is thus commented on by the have made or attempted voyages to blockaded ports.

Gen. Stoneman's cavalry performances have been very extensively received as a complete success, and it seems right, therefore, to say that they have been exaggerated. Some mischief was done on the Virginia Central Railroad-a matter of little or no consequence to the immediate success of the movement with which the cavalry was expected to co-operate-but the Richmond and Fredericksburg Railroad was solittle injured that the trains were not stopped for twenty-four hours.

Gen. Stoneman was ordered to strike that road by forced marches and destroy it. His forced marches consisted in taking four days to travel forty-five miles, from Kelly's Ford to Sexton's Junction, and the destruction was confined to blowing up one or two culverts and displacing a few rails. The destruction in other places was more extensive, but this does not interrupt Lee's communication with Richmond-the essential purpose of Gen. Stoneman's expedition.
