He sought me in the wilderness, And found me there in deep distress; He changed and wash'd this heart of mine, And fill'd me with His love Divine. Above the rest this note shall swell.

"My Jesus hath done all things well." For what the Lord hath done for me, For boundless grace so rich and free, For all His mercies that are past, I'll praise Him while my life shall last. Above the rest this note shall swell,

"My Jesus hath done all things well." When sorrow's waves around me roll, His promises my mind console; When earth and hell my soul assail, His grace and mercy never fail.

Above the rest this note shall swell, "My Jesus hath done all things well."

When death shall steal upon my frame, To damp and quench the vital flame, I'll turn me to my Saviour's breast, And there recline and sweetly rest. Above the rest this note shall swell, "My Jesus hath done all thing well."

And when we join the ransom'd throng, To chant the sweet, immortal song, With tuneful heart, and voice, and tongue, We'll roll the lofty note along.

Above the rest this note shall swell, "My Jesus hath done all things well." To Him who wash'd us in His blood, And made us kings and priests to God; Hosanna we will ever sing,

And make the heavenly arches ring, Above the rest this note shall swell, "My Jesus hath done all things well."

Behold this young man, on his return to Britain, a prisoner, tried for his life at the Old Bailey. He had not completed his twenty-first year. His family and education had placed him in the rank of a gentleman; his yielding to one vice had degraded him to the condition of a felon.

In the present time, there is great and well-founded alarm at the frequent plea of lunacy set up for murderous criminals. Society is no longer safe, if every drunkard that chooses to seethe his brain in alcohol until acute delirium comes on, is to be excused from the consequences of his frenzied deeds. There used to be a rule in law, that drunkenness was no excuse, but rather an aggravation of crime; this rule is now frequently set aside. The murmur is on people's lips, and swells already to a loud remonstrance, that science and wealth step in to save those who can | 25 for $1. command their aid from the just penalty of their

Some years ago, a wretched youth, under the influence of drunken fury, threw a hammer at the head of a poor screaming baby, the child of a woman he lived with. The mother, who had supplied this wretched creature with the drink, was out at the France Marmalade. On retail at time-she returned to find her infant dead, and its murderer in a brutal sleep. It was proved on the trial that the man, when sober, was very fond of the child. He had no remembrance of the dreadful deed; but no scientific man was called in to mistify the jury, and prevent justice in this case. The miserable Job Ward was found guilty, and paid the penalty with his life.

The learned physicians came forward to prove that Wilfred Fitzorme was insane, and he was given up to his friends—the dangerous, homicidal lunatic—on their promise to take care of him; while some observers, looking through the list of criminal cases, dismissed from their minds, as one of the most idle of common fallacies, the empty boast that in Britain there is the same law for the rich as for the poor.
