Ask her to-day, what and where are her possessions? And what will she reply? she may show you an empty treasury, while many drafts are maturing which her beneficence must pay. She will show you her weakness, and point to the strength of her foes. She is fed to-day, but tomorrow's meal is yet in her hand. Yet she is conscious of her wealth. She does not shrink from the tasks and the responsibilities of love. She goes on and upward to the mount of sacrifice, though she knows not what else than her own offspring shall be the victim. She looks calmly at her enemies, though they outnumber her ten to one; she advances to each new issue, and forms her lines for every engagement with the foe, with
