FAR AWAY. e land is very far off."-Isaian xxxiii. 17. Upon the shore Of Evermore We sport like children at their play; And gather shells Where sinks and swells The mighty sea from far away.

Upon that beach, Not voice nor speech Doth things intelligible say; But through our souls A whisper rolls That comes to us from far away.

Into our ears The voice of years Comes deeper, deeper, day by day; We stoop to hear, As it draws near, Its awfulness from far away.

At what it tells We drop the shells We were so full of yesterday, And pick no more Upon that shore, But dream of brighter far away.

And o'er that tide, Far out and wide, The yearnings of our souls do stray; We long to go, We do not know Where it may be, but far away.

The mighty deep Doth slowly creep Up on the shore where we did play; The very sand Where we did stand A moment since, swept far away.

Our playmates all Beyond our call, Are passing hence, as we, too, may, Unto that shore Of Evermore, Beyond the boundless far away.

We'll trust the wave, And Him to save, Beneath whose feet as marble lay The rolling deep, For He can keep Our souls in that dim far away. -Fraser's Magazine.

Effie was, from her cradle, watched over by one who sought, untiringly, to make her all that she should be. Until the age of four years, she had never been known to attempt to deceive. One day, as her mother was hastily leaving the room, Effie, too, started to follow, and accidently removing a cushion from a chair, the mother told her she must replace it before coming down stairs. Ethe, always before accustomed to obey, was so soon at the foot of the stairs that the mother's fears were awakened; turn- But it seemed she knew better than I. The wordsing to her loved one, she inquired, "Did my little daughter pick up the cushiou?" For the first time in her little life her open, ingenuous look forsook her, the doors where, of course, I could not follow him. and she replied, "Yes, mamma."

Taking her gently by the hand, the mother retraced her steps, and, with a heart full of sorrow, pointed at the cushion, which was still lying upon others he must first learn to obey, and surely Charthe floor. Then, leading her only daughter to the nursery, where, every day, they were accustomed to pray, she told her of the dreadful sin of which she dience is what you are to render to parents and eahad been guilty. With bitter tears she told her that chers. Do not wait to be spoken to the second time, for Linens, and heavy washes, it cannot be surpassed; it was the dear Saviour whom she had grieved, and she must ask him to forgive her. She had often asked her mother to do this when she had done wrong, but although she now seemed truly sorry for her sin, she said she "did not know how to ask God to forgive her." The mother clothed, in plain and simple words, the little prayer, concealing nothing of the Willie!"

"I do not want to tell him about it so plainly," "But, darling, he heard it all, and knows all about

Convinced of this, the prayer was offered, and was followed by earnest entreaties of the mother that her darling child might never again be guilty of such a sin. Impressions were thus made which could never be effaced; and on the following day, as she was about to accompany her father (a clergyman) to church,-her mother, obliged to remain at home,- said, "My darling must be very good." "Yes, dear mamma, I will, and I won't forget the Henceforth, that first departure from truth was ever designated as "the lie," and although sine could never tell the hour of her new birth, or remember when she did not love the Saviour, yet, when at the age of eight years, she was examined for admission to the church, none present doubted her fitness to enter its sacred enclosure.

Oh I dear Christian mothers and teachers, impress with awful solemnity, upon the minds of the little ones the guilt of the first lie.

This was the little one's favorite, and her comment was, "Don't you wish, mamma, that the dear Saviour was here now, so that we could do something for him when he was so tired!" No mother would lose such a God-given opportuni ty to tell how we may every day do something fo the Master; and then we knelt to ask for help to serve him aright. At night when I went to her littl crib to give the good night kiss, she said, "Please mamma, read me once more about the good woman who washed Jesus' feet," and the little one entered dream-land before it was finished.

Since then I have never been alone in my morning hour. When I take the book from its place, her toy or doll is instantly laid aside, the tiny chair draws close beside me, and large listening eyes are fixed in expectancy.

We continued regularly through the records of the "beloved physician" and the disciple who "leaned on Jesus' breast." Jesus sleeping in the storm at sea; the ruler pleading for his only daughter who lay dy ing; the good Samaritan; the little household o Bethany whom Jesus loved; the repentant son and the welcome home; the rich man and Lazarus; with the widow's mite; the good Shepherd who "giveth his life for the sheep "-all these are real people and places to little Carrie, almost as much so as her home and the dear ones in it.

She had always said at night, "Now I lay me down to sleep," but when we read of the disciples saying, "Lord, teach us how to pray," she said, 'Mamma, if the dear Savior made that prayer, l want to learn it too." And no matter how weary a night, my little playworn girl will never sleep until she has said in her sweet baby accents the "blessed

WHAT IS OBEDIENCE TO PARENTS? Turning into a certain street, I saw a company of boys playing very earnestly, and evidently enjoying themselves finely. One I noticed in particular, who seemed to be the leader of their sports, and just as I came up with them, he was proposing a new game, heart seemed to be in the thing.

At this moment a window was thrown open in the turned away again to the boys. "Come darling, it is supper-time," the mother said, in her most winning tone. "Well, you said I might come and play, and I ain't going home now." I walked on. Whether that mother succeeded in coaxing Willie along with her or not, I cannot tell; but I saw at once that he had never been taught obedience as Charley had been. Some boy may say. " Charley's father wanted him, and he did not dare to disobey his father. You don't know but Willie minds his father." Oh, my boy, it was the soft and gentle voice of been tested by many of the most extensive printers through-Charley's mother which bore the message to his ears; and if he had not been wont to heed that voice, I think she would have had to have spoken twice be-
