Its views had since greatly changed, and very suddenly too. Hear what the Confederate organ of 1864 said in 1862:

"Are the people of this Province prepared to increase their duties, to come up the Canadian scale to help to pay the interest on the extravagant undertakings in that country; and for what? For the glory of the thing-a mere Federal Union of the British Colonies! It all sounds very fine in theory, but how to reduce the scheme to practice, without enormous taxation to the Lower provinces, we for one, cannot understand. We therefore look upon the agitation of this question as a mere exuberance of the fancy. But even nature is at war with the idea. We can very well understand the benefits of uniting the lower Provinces - not federatively but legislatively-where the debts are about equal, the people the same, the respective positions contiguous to one another; but to go all the way to Canada -there is a distance of six hundred miles between the principal points of settlement-to ask for the sympathy and accord of three quarters of a million of Frenchmen, while the remainder of the population is composed of people whose business is chiefly with the United States, so contiguous to them, and who know as much and care as little about New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, as we do about the people of Wisconsin, is like Moore's attempt to find out an Utopia, an elysium upon earth, where it is supposed that every sunbeam that falls upon the inhabitants is a stroke of happiness, and perfect bliss my last words to you. I shall say a few more words is the ruling feature of the soul.'

This extract ought to be cut out by the people, posted up in their houses, and compared with the articles which are now being printed in the same Morning News. EXECUTION OF MULLER. - Muller was hanged this morning in front of Newgate Prison. He confessed his guilt at the very last moment, almost immediately before the drop fell. The crowd that had gathered was not so large as had been expected, and less than the gathering at the execution of the five pirates.

Yesterday Muller rose early and wrote several letters-it is presumed, to his friends in Germany. He was afterwards seen by the Rev. Mr. Willbraum and the Rev. Mr. Davis. The sheriff also saw him, and to them Muller still declared his innocence. From six o'clock this morning Dr. Louis Cappel,

It is now felt, even by those who have been distrustful and faint-hearted, that the Union is to emerge triumphant from the deadly strite whereinto she was so wickedly precipitated by her assailants, and that Slavery, her relentless foe, is to encounter the fate of Haman. The perils of Foreign Intervention and Western Insurrection are safely passed; Abraham Lincoln, no longer assailable as the choice of a minority, holds the helm of State for four years longer; the Rebellion, palpably weakened by its defeats and losses during the year now closing-with its credit so reduced that its purse bearer officially declares that its Treasury Notes can only be exchanged for coin at the rate of twenty-five for one, while its bonds command but six cents on the dollar-but awaits the blow which shall soon strike the sword from its parricidal hand, and remit its master spirits to the justice, or it may be to the clemency, of a sorely wronged and justly incensed, but forcearing and magnanimous People!
