EVENING MEDITATIONS.

Night draws her sable curtain o'er the skies,
Behind the western hills bright Sol has set,
The winds breathe light, whispering soft melodies,
To sooth the weary spirit to repose,
And calm the breast, racked with the cares of day.
A heavenly stillness now pervades this earth,
The hum of business ceased and hushed the lowing herds.
This is the hour for us to meditate
And hold communion with our Father, God!
From whom all earthly blessings we receive.
Sweet evening! foretaste of a holy rest,
Of endless peace and joy above the skies,
Where earthly ills, and woes shall never come,
And heaven's unfading mansions rise secure,
Founded on the Eternal Rock, the Son;
Standing secure, when heaven and earth shall fail,
And like a scroll shall vanish evermore)—
I hail thy kind return! With cares oppressed,
And bitter woes of life, I've spent the day;
But now my spirit seeks repose and rest.
I turn my thoughts from earthly things away,
Lifting my voice to God, I humbly pray
That I may ever walk in wisdom's ways;
And faithful to His precious precepts prove,
Honoring Him in all my works and ways;
Then when I'm done with this dark vale of tears,
May I go home to reign with Him above,
Where night no more invites us to repose:
For there no darkness ever shrouds in gloom,
Those heavenly regions bright, we need no rest,
(No mortal there shall weary or complain,)
None but immortal ever enters there,
And joy and glory, endless songs of praise,
Make heaven's mansions ring forevermore.

FOR WIVES AND MOTHERS.

How often do we see a wife and mother, one, too who would shrink with horror from the thought of enticing her husband or children on to the commission of any great sin—leading them by her own habitual neglect of sacred things, to think lightly of those duties which we all owe to the God who made and to the Saviour who redeemed us. How can children, for instance, be expected to keep holy the Sabbath-day, to be regular in their attendance at public worship, or to value the privilege of either private or family prayer, if they see their mother, she who is, or ought to be, to them the model of everything good and right, neglecting and perhaps despising them. How vainly does she, for form's sake, tell them to kneel down and "say their prayers," to mind and be in good time for church or chapel, and warn them that the Sabbath-breaker generally comes to a bad end. The influence of her example will ever be greater than the persuasion of her words, and they will be much more likely to imitate what they see her do than to believe what they hear her say.

But a mother's influence extends still further; for though she may carefully avoid teaching her children, either by precept or example, to do wrong, she may yet fail in her duty towards them by not teaching them to do right. We will abridge from an excellent little book, lately published, called The Way Home, an anecdote which may serve to illustrate our meaning.

A handsome intelligent young Scotchman was, some years ago, brought to trial at Inverness, for having murdered a young woman with whom he had formed an acquaintance, and being found guilty he was sentenced to death. A minister of religion, who had been present at the trial, afterwards obtained permission to visit him in prison. We will give his own account of the interview:—"I found him," he says, "in his cell, loaded with irons, chained to the floor and sitting on straw; a chair was beside him on which lay a Bible. From the moment I entered the room till I left he never looked up; not a question that I put to him would he answer. At length I said, 'Shall I pray with you?' 'Yes, yes,' he muttered; and that was all. Anxious to know something of his previous history I made inquiry, and was informed that only a few hours before I visited his cell, his mother had been admitted to take leave of him. To her he said, 'Mother, if it had not been for you I should not have been here.' She replied, 'I am sure I never told you to do any harm!' With awful emphasis he rejoined, 'I am sure you never told me to do any good!' From that hour he refused to converse; in a few days after the sentence of the law was carried into effect, and I could find no ground to hope that his mind had been properly affected, or brought into a penitent state."

With what terrible bitterness must those words have often come back to that poor mother's heart, bringing with them the thought of a child lost for ever, and as he himself believed, through her fault; let then all who would escape so grievous a punishment, beware of the same neglect. Christian mothers, 'Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it.'

But there are yet other circumstances under which a woman's influence may be blessed, although it may for a long time have seemed to be exercised in vain. In an evil hour a believing woman may have suffered herself to be "unequally yoked with an unbeliever," and year after year all her efforts may have failed to win him, as she had fondly hoped she should do, to turn and walk with her in the way of life; yet let not her faith fail, for to her the word still speaks, 'What knowest thou, O wife, whether thou shalt save thy husband?' Only of this she may be sure, that if so great a happiness is reserved for her it must be attained in the way that God appoints; to her the path of duty is made very plain. 'Likewise ye wives be in subjection to your own husbands, that if any obey not the word, they may without the word be won by the conversation of their wives, while they behold your chaste conversation coupled with fear, whose adorning let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel; but let it be the hidden man of the heart in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price. For after this manner in the old time, the holy women who trusted in God adorned themselves, being in subjection unto their their own husbands.' And, again, 'I will that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with broidered hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array, but (which becometh women professing godliness) with good works; let the woman learn in silence with all subjection.'

Herein then lies the secret of woman's power. She must not strive for the mastery, but be content to be in subjection, because it is the will of God concerning her. It may at times and under certain circumstances seem hard, but it must be right or it would not have been the lot appointed her by him who, while on earth, honored Martha and Mary with his friendship, and with his last dying breath provided for the comfort of his mother's declining years. In this, her seeming weakness, moreover, does her strength consist, for it is in the heart of man to put most trust in the woman 'in whose tongue is the law of kindness.' How often does 'the soft answer that turneth away wrath' carry at the same time to the heart of the hearer the conviction that she who uttered it has chosen the better part; and thus by rendering religion lovely, the godly wife may lead her husband, almost without his being aware of it, to seek for himself the 'wisdom that is from above,' and which he has learned from her example, is 'first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and of good fruits.' Truly blest is that household, however humble it may be, which is presided over by one who thus shows forth her religion by its fruits; who is meek, and lowly in heart, pitiful and courteous, patient and unselfish, and who proves the sincerity of her love to Christ by loving all who are his.

But while a woman's influence and example may do much, it must never be forgotten that her prayers will do still more. 'Draw nigh unto God, and he will draw nigh unto thee,' and surely if there be one thing more likely than another to bring a blessing on a family it is the presence of God in their midst. 'Evening, and morning, and at noon,' says the psalmist, 'will I pray, and cry aloud, and he shall hear my voice.' And in everything we are commanded to let our requests be made known. Yes, even in the little things that concern our most trifling daily wants; and if in these, how much more when the salvation of those to whom we are bound by the closest ties is at stake? Pray, then, ye wives and mothers, earnestly, constantly believingly; first, for yourselves, that your own hearts may be kept by the power of God, and then for your husbands and children, and so doing take to yourselves the promise, 'Whatsoever ye ask in my name, believing, ye shall receive.'

THE ADVANTAGE OF SPEAKING WELL.

Apart from professional advantages the art of speaking is the surest path to the gratification of your very laudable ambition to take part in the political and social life of your generation. In all countries and in all ages the orator has risen to distinction. But his art is nowhere so potent as in free countries, where liberty of speech is the birthright of the citizen.

Wherever self government is recognized there must be gatherings for the purpose of transacting public business; men must meet together in their parishes, their counties, or by whatever name the subdivisions of their country may be known. They could not discuss the business of the meeting without some speaking, and the most pleasant speaker will most assuredly win the ears, and therefore carry with him the feelings and the votes of those who cannot speak.

A man who cannot speak is there doomed to insignificance; a man who can speak out badly is still somebody; the man who speaks tolerably is a man of mark; the man who speaks well at once establishes himself as a chieftain, and he holds in his hand the power of the whole assembly.

Seeing, then, what a valuable accomplishment is the art of speaking—how surely it will lead to power, possibly to greatness, certainly to fame and probably to profit—the marvel is that it is not more cultivated in this country.

Parents and guardians cheerfully expend large sums for the teaching of music or drawing—whether a natural taste for it does or does not exist—accomplishments which only the gifted are likely to turn to good account in after life, and for the exercise of which there is seldom a demand; while the arts of reading and of speaking—the former daily in request, and the latter leading to success in life through many paths—are imperfectly taught.

BE RELIGIOUS IN EVERY CALLING.

Spurgeon never uttered more truth than when he spoke as follows with reference to the every day devotion, which Christ demands of his people. There is no obligation that binds a preacher to a devoted life, that does not fall equally upon the lawyer, the tradesman, or the mechanic. He says:

Sometimes when some of you have been stirred up by a sermon, you have come to me and said: 'Mr. Spurgeon, could I go to China? Could I become a missionary? Could I become a minister?' In very many cases the brethren who offer are exceedingly unfit for any service of the kind, for they have very little natural genius, and no adaptation for such a work, and I have constantly and frequently to say, "My dear brother, be consecrated to Christ in your daily calling; do not seek to take a spiritual office. Why, the cobbler can consecrate his lapstone, while many a minister has desecrated his pulpit. The ploughman can put his hand to the plough in as holy a manner as ever did minister to the sacramental bread. In dealing with your ribbons and your groceries, in handling your bricks and your jack planes, you can be as truly priests to God as were those who slew the bullocks and burned them with the holy fire in the days of yore. This old fact needs to be brought out again. We do not so much want great preachers as good upright traders; it is not so much deacons and elders we long for, as it is to have men who are deacons for Christ in common life, and are really elders of the church in their ordinary conversation. Sirs, Christ did not come into the world to take all fishermen from their nets, though he did take some; nor to call all publicans from the receipt of custom, though He did call one; He did not come to make every Martha into a Mary, though He did bless a Martha and a Mary too. He would have you to be housewives still; be sisters of mercy in your own habitations. He would have you be traders, buyers and sellers, workers and toilers still; for the end of christianity is not to make preachers, but to make holy men; the preacher is but the tool; he may be sometimes but the scaffold of the house, but ye are God's husbandry; ye are God's building; ye, in your common acts and common deeds, are they who are to serve God."

BAD BOOKS.—Do not read bad books for the same reason that you would not associate with bad men. They will corrupt you. For the same reason do not permit your children to read them. How many do this, when they would not suffer them to associate with the profane, intemperate and obscene, and yet the former is the more dangerous! Your children or yourself might be disgusted with the latter, and be put on guard against corruption, while in the case of the former the evil is accomplished inadvertently and unawares. As good company and good books will improve your manners and your morals, so bad company and bad books will impair and ruin them. A single volume may contaminate and lead to ruin—it may be the starting point of departure from rectitude—it may place the reader beyond recovery. Then how careful sil ought to be in this matter, especially parents, and keep the dangerous things out of sight.

THE WORSHIPPING SOUL.

Redeem'd from guilt, redeemed from fears,
My soul enlarged, and dried my tears,
What can I do, O Lord Divine,
What to repay such gifts as Thine?
What can I do, so poor, so weak,
But from Thy hands new blessings seek,
A heart to feel Thy mercies more,
A soul to know Thee, and adore?
O teach me at Thy feet to fall,
And yield Thee up myself, my all!
Before Thy saints my debts to own,
And live and die to Thee alone!
Thy Spirit, Lord, at large impart,
Expand and raise and fill my heart;
So may I hope my life shall be
Some faint return, O Lord, to Thee!

CAUTION! CAUTION! CAUTION!

THE Proprietor of PICKSTONE'S WASHING AND CLEANSING CRYSTAL, deems it his duty to caution the public against spurious imitations of his highly celebrated Washing Crystal, which is the most harmless compound extant. It is free from Lime, Vitriol, and all other deadly mixtures so common to be found amongst washing compounds. Try Pickstone's Washing Crystal, if you want ease, comfort, and economy in washing, which washes every thing, and has rapid sale.

It will be found invaluable for the following domestic purposes, viz.:—It washes all fine things, such as Muslin, Lace, Crotchet Work, Baby Linen, &c., cleaning Sponges, Combs, and Brushes; removing stains from the hands, and grease from Carpets, Cloth, Flannel, &c. It makes Hard Water Soft, and may be used with good effect in Baths, as it immediately removes all condensed perspiration from the skin. A small quantity should also be used in the foot pan. It forms a cooling and cleansing wash for the head, by dissolving a teaspoonful of the Crystal in a quarter of a pint of water; and for cleansing the Mouth, Teeth, and Gums, it is quite a luxury, by adding a teaspoonful to a tumbler of water. It renders linen beautifully white, and unlike other preparations, at the same time preserves the fabric. It contains nothing injurious to life. A child eating it by mistake, will not be injured.

If you have not used this Cleansing Crystal, lose no time in obtaining it. Nothing has ever been introduced into this country which has effected such a wonderful change upon Washing Days. It saves your time—saves your clothes—saves your money; and it does not injure the most delicate hands. Pickstone's Cleansing Crystal makes washing a pleasure, reduces the cost of fuel, the wear and tear of labor, and improves every article washed. For Linens, and heavy washes, it cannot be surpassed; for Laces, and fine fabrics, it is unequalled. It does not injure the color of Prints, but strengthens and improves them—by its use they retain their original brilliancy. Flannels become white and soft like new. White things are much improved, and keep their color, even if put by for months. Thousands of Families made happy! No misery on a Washing Day, with Pickstone's Cleansing Crystal.

Agents for Saint John:

THE ROYAL INSURANCE COMPANY, 97 Lombard-street, London, and Royal Insurance buildings, Liverpool.

Chairman of the London Board—SAMUEL BASSE, Esq.
Chairman in Liverpool—CHARLES TURNER, Esq.

The Royal Insurance Company is one of the largest Offices in the Kingdom.

At the Annual Meeting held in August 1859, the following highly satisfactory results were shown:—

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The most gratifying proof of the expansion of the business is exhibited in the one following fact—that the increase alone of the last three years exceeds the entire business of some of the existing and of many of the recently defunct fire insurance companies of this kingdom.

The Premiums for the year 1855 being..... £150,060
While the Premiums for the year 1859 are.... 196,145
Showing an actual increase of..... 46,085 or upwards of 30 per cent. in three years.

The recent returns of duty made by Government for this latter year (1859) again show the "Royal" 34 more than maintaining the ratio of its increase as stated in former years. Only one among the London insurance offices exhibits an advance to the extent of one-half the increase of the Company, while all the others respectively fall far short of the moiety of its advance.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.

The amount of new Life Premiums received this year is by far the largest received in any similar period since the commencement of the business, and must far exceed the average of amount received by the most successful offices in the kingdom. The number of policies issued in the year was 832, the sum assured £387,752 6s. 8d., and the premium £12,354 5s. 4d. These figures show a very rapid extension of business during the last ten years. Thus:

| Years. | No. of Policies. | Sums Assured. | New Premiums. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1848 | 23 | £42,194 17 0 | £1,350 9 1 |
| 1850 | 190 | 95,600 9 11 | 2,627 4 7 |
| 1852 | 422 | 181,504 10 6 | 6,326 5 10 |
| 1854 | 408 | 161,842 13 4 | 4,934 16 9 |
| 1856 | 708 | 297,560 16 8 | 8,800 5 11 |
| 1858 | 832 | 387,752 6 8 | 12,354 5 4 |

The remarkable increase in the business of the last four years is mainly consequent upon the large bonus declared in 1856, which amounted to no less than £2 per cent. per annum on the sums assured, and averaged 50 per cent. upon the premiums paid.

PERCY M. DOVE, Manager and Actuary.
