

An earthquake in London would not have been a more astounding vision than the spectacle of the popular courts, which are visible in all directions—in the edito-rial offices, in the drawing-rooms, in the streets, and with which every new scrap of information is devoured, in the crowds around the printed placards offering the rewards for the detection of the criminal; and they come home to our own cognisance in the heaps of correspondence which reach our hands. We could fill out our whole number with the transcript uttered, expressing the amazement which we have throughout society, suggesting preventives innumerable, and clamouring for instant measures. Of course every one is shocked at the calamity which has befallen a fellow-creature; but that is not the peculiar trait of the discussion which is carried on with so much animation. The peculiar trait is the one which distinguishes this particular event from the rest of crime which still baffles our law and disfigures our civilisation. It is the sudden consciousness that the fate of poor Mr. Briggs may, literally, be the fate of any man who takes a railway ticket.

N. Sanders, and we would not have been the only person, or persons whomsoever. When officials and individuals go creeping round by back doors, asking interviews with Lincoln for "a full interchange of sentiments," it gives us sincere gratification to see them spurned, yes kicked, from the said back door. To Abraham we deliberately say "Bravo," or, if he likes it better, "Hully." Think of an ex-Senator from Alabama, and a virginal member of Congress—for we say nothing of the third "negotiator"—exposing themselves gratuitously, illicitly and ignominiously.

It appears that Greeley, at first thinking this was a real embassy to offer submission, eagerly promised the safe conduct in the President's name. They replied they were not exactly and altogether plenipotentiaries; but had no doubt that "if the circumstances disclosed in the correspondence" were communicated assisted them to interchange sentiments with Lincoln? And what do they mean by cases of controversy in literary negotiations? If those officious gentlemen had been received at Washington, and had been accredited from Richmond, we should have felt very nervous on the subject of those liberal regulations. However, Lincoln, so soon as he was informed there were such people looking about that back door, surmising that it was now partly open, though not yet getting closed, and parlying with a New York editor in the hope of a distant—shut up the door with a bang right in their faces, and then warned them off by a notice—"To Whom It May Concern."

At Atlanta there has been desperate fighting on both sides, with immense slaughter, but details of the late battles are not published. The New York Times, in concluding a long review of the situation at ATLANTA, says:—

Atlanta. The Boston Journal has the following:—

THE BATTLE NEAR ATLANTA ON THE 22D ULTIMO.

A special despatch to the Chicago Tribune says that the battle of the 22d, of the Army of the Tennessee and the rebels under Gen. Hood, was very severe. The enemy attacked seven times, and were as often repulsed. Our total loss is 3500 and ten guns. The known loss of the enemy is killed is more than 8000, and we captured over 2000 prisoners, also 18 stands of colors and over 5000 stands of arms. The total with great vigor, they were received with a galling fire from both artillery and infantry, which caused them to falter, when the order was given to march. Among their killed is Gen. McPherson, who was shot through the heart. Brigadier Gen. Giles A. Smith, and (Gen. Sherman's) son, were also killed. The rebels fled with great rapidity, driving the enemy from two lines of entrenchments, and inflicting great slaughter, capturing a large number of prisoners and twenty-two pieces of artillery. Gen. side are not yet known. Ours was severe in officer. Compulsive quick reigns this morning. There is some little skirmishing on our left.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 27.—Apparently authentic reports from Helena say that an expedition, consisting of a negro regiment, a portion of the 15th Illinois cavalry, and a section of a battery, left that place on Monday morning, going in the direction of White River. When near Nelson, 18 miles out, they encountered a formidable rebel force, and, after a short

BALTIMORE, 1st—11 a. m.

Later advices from Fortress Monroe state that the rebels from the front shows that they were unable to hold the ground gained in the assault on Saturday, and are being driven back by our inner line, and that the works taken by our forces are re-captured by the enemy. We captured 500 prisoners in the assault. Loss on both sides considerable, probably near 4,000 to 5,000.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY POTOMAC.

The greater part of the arrangement was carried out as ordered, although the commencement was a little delayed, on account of the men going out twice. The explosion took place precisely at four minutes past five o'clock. The artillery that immediately followed was deafening. At half-past-five a charge was made on the fort with part of the line, and each side was carried in most brilliant style.
