

AN EVANGELICAL FAMILY NEWSPAPER FOR NEW BRUNSWICK AND NOVA SCOTIA.

[Editor and Proprietor,

Whole No. 533.

A UNIVERSALIST'S TESTIMONY.—In a certain town in New Hampshire, a wealthy physician resided who was known to be a Universalist. He left a liberal bequest at his decease to the evangelical church of the place. The heirs to his property sought to break the will, on the ground of mental incompetency at the time it was drawn. They argued that, if he had been in his right mind, holding to the sentiments he did, he would not have left anything to a church whose doctrine taught future punishment. In court the following
