

How glorious was the joyful news Angels brought from heaven-To heathen Gentiles, and the Jews, Eternal truth is given.

Infinite love, what tongue can tell, Or span the golden sea, When Christ came down with men to dwell, And set the captives free.

O, 'twas a theme of joy above, Where seraphs led the choir ; And sung of God's redeeming love, With pure and holy fire.

They raise a shout, and come to earth, To worship God's dear Son; And tell the nations of the birth, Of that most holy one.

Sweet was the song o'er Bethlehem's hill, "Glory to God on high; Peace on earth, to men good will," Was sounded through the sky.

How can we sleep while angels sing, And chant immortal lays ? Come tune our hearts, all conquering King, To sound aloud thy praise.

Let holy love our souls inspire, Our grateful notes to swell ; To shout and sing thy praises higher, And all thy wonders tell.

HINTS TO MOTHERS.

While a mother needs to guard her children care fully from the many temptations to vanity which will beset them from the very cradle, she cannot be too choice and scrupulous in having their surroundings those which will refine and cultivate the taste and feelings. Every thing which will do violence to good taste and refinement, and promote coarseness and carelessness of manners should be most carefully avoided even in their most secluded hours. Yet there are homes whose parlors are highly adorned, where the private apartments are all in confusion. and where convenience and tasteful arrangement are the last things thought of. Children take in, with the atmosphere of such a home, the principle which

CAUTION THE Proprietor of PICKSTONE'S WASHING AND CLEANSING CRYSTAL, deems it his duty to cau tion the public against spurious imitations of his highly celebrated Washing Crystal, which is the most harmless mpound extant. It is free from Lime, Vitriol, and all governs it, and it will run through all their after life. "No matter what we are, so that we show off well." Hypocrisy is its foundation, and it pervades all departments of the character.

It costs little to make a home tasteful and cheerful, if only the heart is in it. Abundant pictures on the nursery walls, be they ever so simple, if they only tell some sweet story ; a pot of flowers in the window ; a hanging basket or two, even if made of a cocoanut shell, with graceful vincs winding around the strings that suspend it; a few pretty shrubs in the yard, though the space be ever so scanty; a rosebush or two by the doorway ; and if possible trees about your dwelling; all these are refining agencies which exert a powerful influence on the hearts of your children. Let them help you in little tasteful works some rainy day when you can spare the time. Teach them to make a little frame of shell work, or even acorn cups, pine cones, particolored corn and the like, and see if a little picture set in it will not afford them greater enjoyment than the most costly, gilded work of art you can buy them. Go out into the wild woods with them and help to gather pretty mosses and old grey lichens for a moss basket or home-conservatory. All these simple arts, which make home beautiful, are well worth cultivation-a thousand times more valuable than the most elaborately embroidered skirts and braided mantles.

Here, as in everything else, " wisdom is profitable to direct." I do not doubt but that excellent woman Solomon describes, had a beautiful, tasteful home for those children who "arose up and called her blessed," and the husband who praised her .- N. Y. Chronicle.

CHRISTIANS SELLING ALCOHOLIC LIQUORS.

The important question in practical morals has through the establishment, "can you let me see Juoften been discussed in our church courts as well as PITER ?" "The Head-Thunderer," he answered in the religious circles-Can a Christian consistently solemnly, "is invisible. He is to be communicated traffic in the article of intoxicating liquors ? Our with only by writing." view of this subject we state frankly when we say that we believe that the liquor trade is not one which a Christian would choose, as a means of providing for himself and his family. While it might be lawful, to say the least of it, we think a decided Christian would not deem it expedient. We cannot imagine anything so incongruous, so inconsistent, as a man with his wife and family about him, sitting down and reading the Bible, and asking the blessing of God upon their industry during the day, while they are stantly availing herself of every possible opportunity actually engaged in making poor wretches drunk during the live-long day ; indeed, we might say engaged in making poverty, wretchedness, misery, and ruin. dies until the annual amount granted is no less a

But we can suppose the possibility of a man engaged in the traffic becoming a Christian, and giving his heart wholly to the Lord. In such a case, what may we suppose his duty is? We say, unhesita- from postages, leaving something over £500,000 defitingly, he will abandon the trade. We could cite, were it necessary, many instances of men true and of over two and a half millions of dollars. Such has good, who, under the Spirit's power and grace, having given themselves to God, at once abandoned their ing trade and commerce with all those countries with demoralizing traffic, and found the means of support which these steam communications were established, in some more reputable calling.

If then it can be fully established that a truly tages reaped from this policy, that she has been conof Christian profession.

Ws doubtless have a logical squint towards the whys and the wherefores. In the first room were two telegraphic apparatuses; one communicating with the office of Reuter, the king of telegraphs and a German ; the other with the Houses of Parliament. What comes from Louis Napoleon's or Palmerston's brain is here almost as soon as it is there. The Times is the great broker (and breaker) of the world's news without the intervention of muscle or steam. News is everything.

The department of the Proof reader is prominent. Every word and point undergoes the utmost scrutiny. A single typical error in The Times might subject it to heavy damages in law.

The stereotyping was to me the point of culminating interest. This is to save time and money. These orms must be had for the press as soon as possible. To set up a single page of The Times takes six men eight hours, and there are sixteen pages. Now, from he moment that a form is finished till it is reproduced n stereotype, is exactly twenty-five minutes ! Away t is whirled to the press. Another is made, and lo, the whole preparatory work is completed for the colossus of Newspapers! 'In stereotyping, tissue paper is laid on the types, and over that pasteboard ; the whole is subjected to pressure; the impression thus obtained is enclosed in a mould, the metal is poured on it, and the work is done.
