[Condensed from the Boston Post.] CROSSING THE RAPIDAN.

The entire Army of the Potomac effected the crossing of the Rapidan on Wednesday, Gen. Gregg's cavalry division crossing at Ely's Ford, and Gen. Wilson's at Germania Ford, the few mounted pickets of the enemy scampering away before Gregg's cavalry. Double pontoons were laid, and by 7 o'clock, P.M., of Wednesday, the whole army had successfuly, and without opposition-not a shot having been fired -crossed the Rapidan-Gen. Not a sign of the enemy was found, although our cavalry pushed forward beyond the battle ground at Chanceflorsville some distance, except small squads of cavalry. Some prisoners were captured, among them a courier from Gen. Rhodes to Ewell, announcing the coming of the Yankee. Up to this time the whereabouts of the enemy was almost unknown. Enough was known, however, to warrant the presumption that he was concentrating and preparing to meet the advancing hosts. All the movements of our forces were made with the most perfect precision Lee, and time will determine result. and care, notwithstanding the hard work of the march, Burnside at this time was still in reserve. A severe battle took place and lasted nearly an hour, our troops being opposed by greater numbers (for the enemy followed his usual custom of massing almost his whole avaliable force against Nothing received at Washington that there has been our men.) Finally the enemy succeeded in over-laping Ayer's brigade and driving it back. This exposed the flank of Bartlett's brigade and it was forced also to fall back for some distance. During these movements two guns belonging to the Third Massachusetts Battery had to be left, in consequence of the killing of nearly all the horses belonging to it, and fell into the enemy's hands. The two brigades were soon, however, relieved by those of Sweetzer and Wadsworth, whom the enemy attacked with great tary, but were so manfully met that, after an hour's Lee on right and left. severe firing, they withdrew from that part of our line. Our loss was heavy in Ayres' and Bartlett's brigades, and is estimated at six hundred in killed, wounded and missing. Among the wounded were Gen. Bartlett, slightly; Col. Hayes, 18th Mass., slightly, and Col. Guiney of the 9th Mass. We took some 300 prisoners.
