PREPARATIONS FOR WAR ON THE RIO GRANDE.-When the American Government continued to head its columns toward Texas, even amid the surrender of the rebels there, we could not help anticipating trouble in Mexico ; and Napoleon appears, naturally enough, to have taken a similar view. He cannot see what object the United States can possibly have in gathering an army of eighty thousand men on the Rio Grande except to Invade Mexico, and, is, consequently, making preparations ao increase the Imperial force on the other side of that river. Both armies are in an excitable state. -- Montreal Witness
