THE LIFE CLOCK.

There is a little mystic clock No human eye hath seen, That beateth on-and beateth on From morning until e'en.

And when the soul is wrapp'd in sleep, And beareth not a sound ; It ticks and ticks the live-long night, And never runneth down.

O, wondrous is the work of art, Which knells the passing hour : But art ne'er formed nor mind conceived The life clock's magic power.

Nor set in gold-nor decked with gems, By pride and wealth possessed ; But rich or poor, or high or low, Each bears it in his breast.

When life's deep stream, 'mid beds of flowers, And still and softly glides ; Like the wavelet's step, with a gentle beat, It warns of passing tides.

When passion nerves the warrior's arm For deeds of hate and wrong, Though beeded not the fearful sound, The knell is deep and strong.

When eyes to eyes are gazing soft, And tender words are spoken, Then fast and wild it rattles on, As if with love 'twere broken.

Such is the clock that measures life, Of fiesh and spirit blended, And thus 'twill run within the breast, Till this strange life is ended.

FRUITS A TRUE STORT.

(Concluded.)

One dreary day in the end of October, when the wild waves roared behind ' the bill,' and the wind howled amongst the firs, and the rain battered violently against the window panes, a quick tap came to | the back door of the manse. An exclamation of sorprise, as the door was opened, drew the mistress of the house, who happened to be within hearing, to the know as we are known,' was the mother's reply. spot. There stood Dick; but so changed in his whole 'My eyes won't ache there, will they, mother ?' appearance, that at the first glance she did not recognise him. So ludicrously woe-begone he looked-in the tattered coat hanging down nearly to his heels, in the large old hat, glossy and dripping, which almost concealed his eyes-that for one moment even the minister's wife, kind-hearted though she was, could not resist a smile. But the tears came into her eyes when she looked at his bare and bleeding feet, at his pale, pinched face, and long, uncombed hair, and blue, trembling lips. Taking him by the hand, she led him into the kitchen, made him sit down near the fire, and fetched a basin of hot soup for the shivering, starving child. When he appeared to be a little revived, she had him undressed and washed, and put to bed in a little attic room, she herself sitting by him till he fell asleep. Dick's story, when he awoke to tell it, roused the utmost indignation in the manse. The farmer in whose service he had been as herd boy, was not only unkind, but unjust. He had, in the first place, half starved the poor, unprotected child, and had then beaten and kicked him when he complained of hunger. By degrees Dick had parted with his own clothes for a morsel of bread. At length, neart broken with illusage, half dead with cold and hunger, he had fled to the one refuge he knew of in the world-the manne of S----. As has been already seen, he was not disappointed in his hope of being received by its inmates. He was a stranger, and they took him in. At first it was hoped that care and kindness would undo the effects of the shameful treatment which the poor child had met with; but starvation and exposure had only too surely done their work on a constitution natural. ly delicate. Before Dick had been many days at the manse, it had become evident that its hospitality would not long be required for him. The good minister was ill again. After a short respite, his sufferings had returned with tenfold acuteness, and his wife was again almost constantly in his sick-room. One of the daughters of the family, however, waited upon the other invalid; and Fred would sit for hours by his friend's sick-bed, comforting the poor sufferer with his sympathy, and with the everlasting consolations of God's holy Word. It was a touching thing to hear the two boys repeating together the Lord's Prayer .- Dick, who had never known anything about his father on carth, clinging with simple confidence to the one Father in heaven, who was so soon to be Fred's only Father too. Dick spoke much, the few last days of his life, of a little step-sister whom he had-a child of five years of age. He begged that she should be taken from her mother's wicked influence, and taught to read and to know the Saviour. To her he left his one legacy-the Bible which his kind friend had given to him, and which, when losing all his other little property, he had contrived to keep. God did grant it. Fred came home from India on furlough a lew months before her death. He came the same kind son that he had ever been. He was present at the last to close her eyes. One of Fred's brothers is the founder and chief supporter of a large ragged school for girls in one of our great cities. Some years ago be said, in the writer's hearing, 'I have five hundred children out in the world, doing well.' The family must be well-nigh doubled by this time.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The most gratifying proof of the expansion of the busiless is exhibited in the one following fact-that the increase alone of the last three years exceeds the entire business of some of the existing and of many of the recently defunct fire insurance companies of this kingdom

The Premiums for the year 1855 being £130,060 While the Fremiums for the year 1558 are ..., 196,148 Showing an actual increase of 66,088 or upwards of 50 per cent, in three years The recent returns of duty made by Government for this atter year (1858) again show the "Royal" as more than noing the ratio of its increase as stated in former years. Only one among the London insurance offices exhibits an advance to the extent of one-half the increase of the Company, while all the others respectively fall far short of the moiety of HE advance LIFE DEPARTMENT.

the amount of new Life Premiums received this year is by far the largest received in any similar period since the commencement of the business, and must far exceed the Proprietors Willard's Hotel, Washington, D, C." average of amount received by the most successful offices in the kingdom. The number of policies issued in the year was 832, the sum assured $2887,752 6s. 8d., and the premium 212,554 Ss. 4d. These figures show a very rapid extension of business during the last ten years.
