THE WONDERFUL MYSTERY.

The doctrine of the Trinity is the deep mystery of the Christian religion. In vain Reason argues and Science searches; if Faith in God's Word bewanting, the doctrine of the "Three in One" will seem "foolishness" or inexplicable. But when Faith is sincere, a familiar illustration or a touching comparison will often help the earnest seeker after the truth of this wonderful mystery more effectually to comprehend its meaning than would be volumes of learned theological discussions.

We have before us two simple illustrations of this precious doctrine; both written by women and for women, thus entitling them to our attention. The first was taught by Miss Brittan, our "Bible-Woman" in the Zenans at Calcutta. The full account is in the " Misssionary Link," No. IX. of the series. Th. other we insert. Written to comfort the anxiou mind of a lady seeking for light on this vital subjec of our faith, the tender teachings of this Poem may reach other burdened hearts and comfort other sad dened minds, by indicating the "true light" and showing where it may be found.

THE TRINITY. O THOU who thinkest it is hard To understand and know How the great God is the same Christ To whom we so much owe-And the sweet Comforter who came When Christ seemed to depart-Let me that seeming mystery Explain unto thy heart. Once, in my thoughtless early life, When I was but a child, I listened to temptation's voice, And was by it beguiled; I sinned against a cherished one, The mother I adored

Only my risen Lord. I never shall forget her wrath-'Twas anger without sin; She fixed on me deep searching eyes That I dared not look in; And with a dignity that awed And terrified my heart, She said to me, "Rebellious child, Go! from my sight depart!"

And worshipped as I worship now

I left her presence unsubdued, I would not say "Forgive!" And yet I could not, while she frowned, In sweet contentment live. For weeks, though dwellers in one home, We met as strangers meet, And yet she loved me, and I yearned

To fall down at her feet.

While I was wrong and she was just, Rebuke came from the sky; I sickened, and upon my couch Laid down methought to die. Then to me came a gentle one, Pure as the saints above, And one of God's own family, For her sweet name was Love. She smoothed my pillow, and in hers She held my feverish hand, And fanned me as a mortal's brow By angel wings is fanned; And when I waked to consciousness. When I that angel knew, There tell from my eyes purer tears

It was my mother; she was stern When 'gainst her I rebelled; But when I sickened, in her soul A holy pity welled; And she came down from the high place Where she with Justice sate, To save me from the awful doom That seemed my coming fate.

Than drops of morning dew.

She was the same, yet not the same; Two beings and yet one; I loved her gentle aspect best, It warmed me like the Sun; Led by her love I at the feet Of her stern justice knelt, And uttered words of penitence That all my being feit.

And since then she has been a Guide, A Comforter to me, The only pilot that I ask To guide me on life's sea, Excepting Hun who holds the storms As signals in His hand, And waves them o'er the sea when He Wishes his barks to land. Blest are the barks that are prepared Those signals to obey,

And hasten to the shore with hope Instead of dark dismay. And while my mother's at the helm, Wherever I may sail, I never will be unprepared For the home-wafting gale.

Each day she lifts me nearer God, She is not first, but last, The worship that I gave her once Belongs now to the past, For she has lost herself in Christ, And tears her soft eyes dim Whene'er I offer her the love She says belongs to Him. Oh, if one mother can be three-The Just, the Fond, the Guide, Shall the Almighty be but one-The One from whom all hide?

For all would in His presence teel A guilty, dreadful awe, Because each one has broken part Of His most holy law. God never sent a Son to die

The Just for the unjust;

He was Himself the Crucified-In less I could not trust. My mother could have sent to me A sister or a friend, But it was greater love that brought Herself o'er me to bend. Justice is the great mind of God, Love is his tender heart, And they who think Him only just, Behold Him but in part. The Father sat a Judge enthroned, Till, seeing man undone,

His Mercy took a human form

And called itself the Son. And when that Mercy dropt the blood That our veins should have shed, When He arose who for our sins Laid three days with the dead,

Each breeze that came down from the skies And passed o'er earth's green sod, And seemed to whisper as it moved, Contained the Voice of God. For God's Voice is the Comforter, The Spirit that would bring All who have sinned against the Law,

Beneath the Gospel's wing .-O thou who never hast believed, Let FAITH be eyes to thee, And in the Holy Trinity One only God thou'lt see!

arm, and led her safely to her home in another street. The boys, with one accord, united in calling him a helping that poor old woman. They wouldn't do it, certain, &c. The merchant (Mr. Goodhue) inquired the name and residence of that kind, polite little boy, and soon after visited the family. He found that Mrs. Stanley was a poor, but very worthy widow, with three small children, Frank being the eldest. She was dependent for her daily support upon the labors of her own hands, with the little aid received from Frank, which was obtained by doing sundry errands for gentlemen, and distributing the daily papers, and in his spare moments, caring for the little ones, thus relieving his mother in her labors. The afternoon which found him at play was a rare occasion and the favor specially granted, as his mother thought he needed and deserved the recreation. Mr. G. inquired further, of persons likely to know the circumstances and character of the family, and found all satisfactorily corroborated. He inquired if Frank would like to attend school regularly, and found that it was the great desire of the boy's heart to be able to do so, that he might fit himself for usefulness-to be a man in every sense of the word; but how could he leave his mother? How could she get along without

Mr. G. told him that all difficulties in that direction should be obviated at once. Frank was accordingly placed in an excellent school, where he improved his time and opportunities most faithfully, and became a fire insurance companies of this kingdom. fair scholar. At a suitable age, and when he had gained the necessary information, he was transferred to Mr. G.'s store as clerk. Proving faithful and efficient, he was promoted, step by step, until he reached the position of confidential book-keeper. In the meantime, he not only supported himself and aided his mother, but as his salary increased, he was enabled to place his mother and sisters in more than comfortable circumstances, bringing every day light and sunshine to their happy home.

Years advanced, and Frank had husbanded his income so well and wisely, that he found himself in possession of a surplus, and the situation being offered, he accepted it, that of partner with his employer, and the firm of Goodhue & Stanley was for long years one of the most reliable and prosperous in that city.

Eventually, our friend Frank became the accepted suitor and husband of Grace Goodhue, the idolized daughter of this good and bevevolent merchant, and thus the names of Goodhue and Stanley became inse-

And this train of interesting events, let the children remember who read this story, arose from observations made that Saturday afternoon by this kind, large-hearted man, on a public street, in a large-city, in the rustle and jostle of the multitude, upon the "ways and doings" of Frank Stanley, a poor, obscure little boy. Remember, too, that your ways and your doings are noticed, whether they be pure and right, or whether they be wrong, and your character judged accordingly. - Examiner.

THE UNSEEN WITNESS.

There is a little machine, made something like a clock, which is fastened upon a carriage, and in some way connected with the motion of the wheels. It is so arranged that it marks off correctly the number of miles that the corriage runs. A stable keeper once had one upon a carriage that he kept for letting, and by this means he could tell just how many miles any one went who hired it of him.

Two young men once hired it to go to a town some ten miles distance. Instead of simply going and returning as they promised to do, they rode to another town some five miles farther, thus making the distance they passed over, going and coming, some thir-

When they returned, the owner of the establishment, without being noticed by the young men, glanced upon the face of the measuring instrument, and discovered how many miles they had travelled.

"Where have you been?" he then asked them.

"Where we said we were going," was the answer. "Have you been no farther than that?"

"O, no," they answered. "How many miles have you been in all?"

He touched the spring, the cover opened, and there, on the face of the instrument, the thirty miles were keeps it wound up and in order. Without our thinking of it, it records all our acts, all our words, and all our thoughts.

We sometimes seek to deceive our friends, but the truth is recorded in our hearts. By and by, God will touch the spring, and all that is written there will then be seen. Many things that we do we should not, if we knew that the eye of another person was looking upon us. We always carry a witness with

A little boy was arged by an older person to do an act that was wrong. He was told that no one would know it. "Yes, somebody will," said the little fellow, "myself will know it."

We cannot dismiss the witness. God has fastened it to our minds. It is our conscience, and whatever our lips may deny, it will always tell the truth. If we should attempt, in the great day when Godjudges the world, to deny our actions, there upon our hearts they will appear, written down, when we did not know it, by the unseen witness that God has made to accompany us every step in our life.

Only one among the London insurance offices exhibits an Trimmings, Ornaments, Belt Ribbons, &c. advance to the extent of one-half the increase of the Company, while all the others respectively fall far short of the moiety of its advance

LIFE DEPARTMENT. The amount of new Life Premiums received this year is by far the largest received in any similar period since the nmencement of the business, and must far exceed the average of amount received by the most successful offices in the kingdom. The number of policies issued in the year was 832, the sum assured £387,752 6s. 8d., and the premiur £12,354 3s. 4d. These figures show a very rapid extension of business during the last ten years. CAUTION! CAUTION! THE Proprietor of PICKSTONE'S WASHING AND I CLEANSING CRYSTAL, deems it his duty to caution the public against spurious imitations of his highly celebrated Washing Crystal, which is the most harmless BLACK SILKS, HOSIERY, GLOVES, &c compound extant. It is free from Lime, Vitriol, and all J. ARMSTRONG & CO. other deadly mixtures so common to be found amongst washing compounds. Try Pickstone's Washing Crystal, if you want ease, comfort, and economy in washing, which washes every thing, and has rapid sale. WING to the recent fall in the price of Cotton, we are now able to make a large reduction in the price of

It will be found invaluable for the following domestic purposes, viz. :- It washes all fine things, such as Muslin, Lace, Crotchet Work, Baby Linen, &c,; cleaning Sponges, Combs, and Brushes; removing stains from the hands, and Manufactured at the New Brunswick Cotton Mills, grease from Carpets, Cloth, Flannel, &c.
