COST OF THE WAR TO THE SOUTH .- A writer in a New York exchange says :--

We have enumerated Southern losses, in consenence of the war, to the amount of five thousand ight hundred millions of dollars, namely : twenty-five nundred millions by loss of what was called slave property, nine hundred millions by ravages of war, nine hundred millions by loss of staple crops, five hundred millions of property sunk in Confederate debt, and one thousand millions by what must hereafter be paid by the South to liquidate the principal Master E. W. Knollin, 2.00 Jane Wavman, and interest of the National debt. This, of course, John Brown, is a very rough estimate. We might have included White Head Is. Church many other items involving indirect, though not certain, losses. Rough as the estimate is, it falls short Samuel Teakles, of the actual truth. The loss of the "slave property" is a loss that is Rodney McLeod, no loss. It is a gain, a great gain : a real saving and Simeon P. Beech, plessing to the people, and instead of putting down these $2,400,000,000 as a loss we would say that the South has gained just so much and a great deal more
