THINGS THAT NEVER DIE.

The pure, the bright, the beautiful,
That stirred our hearts in youth,
The impulse to a wordless prayer,
The dreams of love and truth;
The longings after something lost,
The spirit's yearning cry,
The strivings after better hopes—
These things can never die.

The timid hand stretched forth to aid
A brother in his need,
The kindly word in grief's dark hour,
That proves a friend indeed,
The plea for mercy, softly breathed,
When justice threatens high,
The sorrow of a contrite heart—
These things shall never die.

The memory of a clasping hand,
The pressure of a kiss,
And all the trifles, sweet and frail,
That make up life's first bliss;
If with a firm, unchanging faith,
And holy trust and high,
Those hands have clasped, those lips have met,
These things shall never die.

The cruel and the bitter word,
That wounded as it fell;
The chilling want of sympathy
We feel, but never tell;
The hard repulse, that chills the heart
Whose hopes were bounding high—
In an unfeeling record kept,
These things shall never die.

Let nothing pass, for every hand
Must find some work to do;
Lose not a chance to waken love—
Be firm, and just, and true.
So shall a light that cannot fade
Beam on the way from on high,
And angel voices say to these—
These things shall never die.

PROVOKING CHILDREN TO WRATH.

A SAD STORY OF FAMILY LIFE.

Chapter IV.

Mr. Browne went to Harry, who was locked up in the police-station. Never in his life before had he felt so much love towards his son. This sad affair would certainly do one good thing—it was softening the heart of the too severe father. He could but admire the brotherly affection which the boys evidently felt toward each other. Harry, though not the original offender, had risked and taken the consequences entirely himself, and it was a noble and brotherly act. Thinking of it all—his conscience whispering to him his part of blame in the matter—it was with a yearning, regretful love that he held out his hand, to his son.

But what change had passed over Harry? He was no longer the pleasant, kindly lad, his face was distorted with anger, his eyes heavy, his whole frame quivering with rage.

Mr. Browne's first sentence was an unfortunate one. If he felt kindly, why could he not have shown it?

"Henry how could you disgrace us all by acting thus?"

Harry started as if he had been stung.

Mr. Browne was perfectly amazed and startled at the unprovoked look in that young face, blazing with a look of anger and vindictiveness, almost of hate.

There has been such a thing as a rising and rebellion among slaves;—this was a similar scene.

"This is like you," he sneered. "If you had the least kindness in your nature you would sympathize with me instead of crushing me now I am down, even though I have the misfortune to be your son."

"How could I disgrace you? I did it for the best. I did it at the entreaty of my brothers to save them from you—their father. Your cruelty and harshness have made us cowards, and we were afraid of you; we dreaded you, as all despots are dreaded. But that is all over now. Do I look as if I feared you now?"

And he sprang to his feet, and stood before his astonished father with clenched fists and flashing eyes. As for him, he was perfectly bewildered; the only clear idea in his mind was that Harry was certainly mad, otherwise, he would not have dared to use such words to his father. Mr. Browne was mistaken. It was only the reaction which, if he had been a wise man, he might have expected as certain after his systematic harshness. The young man had been goaded to this violence by long months of unkindness and disregard.

Harry continued:—"Yes; it is all over now. They may do their worst, and I will bear the punishment with what manliness I may; and then, good-bye to England and my fatherland. I never had a father. I have been brought up by a tyrant, but I will be free at the last. I wonder what I have been thinking about to remain quietly in bondage all this time. I have youth, and strength, and intelligence, and see, my skin is white—why should I be a slave? I have been crushed long enough. Whom have I to thank but my father that I have been captured like a thief in the broad daylight, and thrust into prison with no hope of escape?"

Oh, Henry Browne! oh, British parents!—it was a scene to make an angel weep! God forbid that such dissension should ever be between our fathers and their sons!

Mr. Browne tried to speak. "Henry, I will do my best."

Harry interrupted him. "Your best! For what purpose? You have been doing your best all your life, and this is the result. You have no use for your sons. All the spirit was crushed out of us in your very boyhood. We are arrant cowards all of us, or you would not have beaten Arthur the other night in the presence of two of us equal to yourself in strength. He, your youngest living son! Ay, what about those who have died? You did not know what I did—that Willie, when he was nearly dying, begged us with tears not to let father come to him. Why? You had beaten him the very day he was taken ill for the simple accident of tearing his frock. But you don't believe in accidents."

Mr. Browne interrupted him beseechingly. "Harry, listen to me."

But the young man was beside himself with rage. "I have listened to you before. You have called me 'fool,' 'liar,' 'thief,' when I have been upright and honorable as yourself. What will you call me now, when I have really been guilty of fraud and wrong?"

Mr. Browne tried authority. "Harry, you have no right to speak to your father thus. I will not listen to such language from my own son."

Harry pointed to the door. "Leave me. You are not a prisoner. Why do you remain? Have you no pity?"

"Harry, you are mad."

"Perhaps. Does that surprise you after all I have endured?"

Harry threw himself on the floor in an agony of rage and despair. Mr. Browne left him there, having no idea what to do in this emergency.

Into the dark chamber, however, came an angel of light. His mother had been telegraphed for, and entered as her husband left. She soothed him in her bosom, kissed away the fever from his head, spoke to him as when he was a child at her knee, bade him hope and trust, and comforted him as only a good woman knows how. Then she knelt and prayed with him—such a prayer, Harry never forgot it, a prayer that was sure of an answer. Harry grew still and repentant, and even peaceful while she remained with him.

Meanwhile, Mr. Browne took his way sadly and thoughtfully. He was shocked beyond any description of mine by the conduct and words of his son. He had been little used to other anger than his own. He tried to shut his eyes to the picture he had just left, but conscience whispered that many a similar scene had been enacted in his own home, in which he instead of Harry had been the principal. He saw his error too late. If he had been more kindly and less severe, his sons would have loved and trusted him. It is sometimes the case with passionate, overbearing natures that real, downright rebellion subdues them. It was so with Mr. Browne. He could but feel indignant at Harry's passionate trade, and yet anger had died out of his heart. He yearned over his son; for almost the first time in his life he understood that wonderful force of tender solicitude.

"Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear Him," and a strong cry went up from his heart, "God forgive me! God help me! God teach me what to do!"

That evening he returned the letters, with double their enclosures of stamps, to each person who had answered the advertisement. These were also accompanied by a note stating that if any inconvenience could be proved as arising from the advertisement, which had been but a freak of boyish indiscretion, all reasonable claims would be satisfied.

The next morning Harry was to be examined before the magistrates. The case had excited almost unbounded interest in the neighborhood, and the court was filled with wondering listeners. A thrill of sympathy ran through the crowd as Henry Browne took his place. All the passion-fires of the previous night had died out leaving him exhausted and weak. His father and brother were present. Harry, holding his head low in shame, pleaded guilty.

The counsel whom Mr. Browne had engaged for his son urged the extenuating circumstances. Instructed by Mr. Browne, he hid nothing. He said that this father, no doubt for the good of his sons—or what he conceived to be their good—made it a rule about all things never to overlook accidents, which were generally the result of carelessness. He then went on to explain that, during the father's absence, a customer had called and paid the brother of the prisoner a twenty pound note, which he had inadvertently lost or mislaid; that these boys—the eldest, the prisoner, only seventeen—were so frightened at the prospect of their father's anger that they strove together to find some means of procuring the money; the perusal of a newspaper advertisement had suggested to them the insertion of a similar one, for the consequences of which the young man was in custody to-day; that they had no idea of committing a fraud, fully intending to return the money, as might be seen from the advertisement itself. He called the attention of the magistrates to the fact of Harry's taking all the risk from his brother, and spoke of the well-known integrity of his character and his heretofore blamelessness of life.

Mr. Browne corroborated this statement and begged the Court to be merciful with his son, who had but thus acted in ignorance of the consequences. He took all the blame to himself, and spoke in the highest terms of praise of his son. He also stated that the whole of the letters received by him had been returned with a slight recompense to the writers.

The prosecutor also addressed the bench. He said that he had resolved to make an example of this case in consequence of having previously been duped. He had, of course, known nothing of the peculiar circumstances which had been brought out to-day, and, feeling sincere sympathy for the young man who had committed the error, he united with his friends in recommending him to mercy.

The presiding magistrate spoke at length of the sad revelations of a father's harshness which had been made in court. He said that in consideration of the recommendations to mercy, of the youth of the prisoner, and of his hitherto unblemished character, the bench would only sentence him to one month's imprisonment.

Charlie sobbed as the sentence was pronounced. In his eyes it was far too severe.

Poor Harry was conveyed to the Braburn Prison. To him it seemed as if every joy had ceased. A common prisoner—his character gone, his hope of success in life blighted—every man's hand against him, he felt that he should never again hold up his head. He did not, perhaps, know what was the truth—that nothing but pity was felt for him in his native place.

Constantly during the month that followed his loving mother visited him, and never in his life before had Harry so appreciated her tenderness and good counsels. She succeeded in effecting a reconciliation between him and his father, who also came. Still Harry could but deeply feel the degradation and the sad consequences of that one act of deceit toward his father.

It is needless to prolong this story. At the end of the month Henry Browne and his brother sailed for Australia. They settled in Melbourne, where, though they are still young, they have acquired an honorable name. One thing is noticed by all who know them—the strong love and devotion of the younger toward his brother.

Only Arthur remains to Mr. and Mrs. Browne. Their home is quiet and vacant, it is true; but it is as peaceful as love and self-control can make it. Daily rises the prayer for the exiles who are dear to them, and their most cherished hope is, that before very long they may be induced to return.

Let all who have read this story notice that this disaster might have been avoided in two ways—by the greater kindness and sympathy of Mr. Browne, which would have won his children's confidence, or by the moral courage of the sons, and their determination to do the right by confessing their error and braving the worst.

MARIANNE FARRINGTON.

ALL WISE INFLUENCE.—A gentleman lecturing in the neighborhood of London, said:

"Everybody has influence; in fact, that little child, pointing to a little girl in her father's arms."

"That's true," cried the man.

At the close he said to the lecturer, "I beg your pardon, sir, but I could not help speaking. I was drunkard; but as I did not like to go to the public house alone, I used to carry the child. As I approached the public house one night, hearing a great noise inside, she said:

"Don't go father, 'Hold your tongue, child.' 'Please, father, don't go.' 'Hold your tongue, I say.' Presently I felt a big tear falling on my cheek. I could not go a step further, sir. I turned round and went home, and I have never been in a public house since, thank God for it! I am now a happy man, sir, and this little girl has done it all; and when you said that even she had influence, I could not help saying 'that's true, sir.'"

SOOTHING SYRUP,
For Children Teething.

which greatly facilitates the process of teething, by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation—will allay all pain and spasmodic action, and is SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Depend upon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourselves, and RELIEF AND HEALTH TO YOUR INFANTS.

We have put up and sold this article for over thirty years, and can say, in confidence and truth of it, that it is the only preparation of the kind that is worthy of confidence.

NEVER HAS IT FAILED, IN A SINGLE INSTANCE, TO EFFECT A CURE, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of destruction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak in terms of highest commendation of its magical effects and mild virtues. We speak in this matter, and pledge our reputation for the fulfillment of what we here declare. In exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

This valuable preparation is the prescription of one of the most EXPERIENCED and SKILLFUL NURSES in New England, and has been used with never failing success in THOUSANDS OF CASES.

It not only relieves the child from pain, but invigorates the stomach and bowels, corrects acidity, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. It will almost instantly relieve CHILDS IN THE BOWELS AND WIND COLIC, and overcome convulsions, which, if not speedily remedied, end in death. We believe it the best and surest remedy in the world in all cases of Dysentery and Diarrhea in Children, whether it arises from teething or from any other cause. It is a safe and reliable medicine, and has a child suffering from any of the foregoing complaints. Do not let your prejudices, nor the prejudices of others, stand between you and the relief that this medicine will give. RADWAY'S READY RELIEF!
THE UNIVERSAL OF RADWAY'S
READY RELIEF!
Price 25 Cents.

ONE FIFTY CENT BOTTLE
Will cure more complaints, and prevent the system against sudden attacks, or epidemic and contagious diseases, than One Hundred Dollars expended for other Medicines, or Medical attendance.

The moment Radway's Ready Relief is applied externally—on the inside, according to directions—pain, from whatever cause, ceases to exist.

1849. ASIATIC CHOLERA. 1849.
In 1849 Radway's Ready Relief cured over 10,000 persons seized with Asiatic Cholera, and by its timely use as a preventive, saved over one hundred lives.

1856. YELLOW FEVER. 1856.
In 1856 Radway's Ready Relief cured thousands of persons seized with Yellow Fever. As a preventive of this terrible disease, Dr. Francis Pickens, of Mississippi, urged its use to the medical boards of the Southern States, and publicly recommended it as the most certain safeguard in the world.

DURING THE WAR
More lives were saved by the use of Radway's Ready Relief than from the best efforts of the medical staff. We have hundreds of letters, from Southern States, to evidence to prove that in cases where men, by exposure to malarious swamps, bottom lands, rice fields, etc., used Radway's Ready Relief, they were cured of the disease, who did not, were seized with Dysentery, Swamp Fever, Bilious Fevers, Diarrhoea, Cholera, Rheumatism, &c., and these only who, when thus seized, used the Ready Relief, entirely recovered.

ITS UNIVERSAL USE.
It cures the worst diseases incidental to all climates. It has been tested in Asia, Africa, South America, Europe, East and West Indies, and cured the worst forms of Cholera, Dysentery, Fluxes, Fevers, Yellow Fever, Swamp Fever, Ship and other Fevers—diseases which, in protecting persons who used it as a preventive against attacks.

WHY NOT?
If Radway's Ready Relief possesses such remarkable disinfecting, neutralizing, strengthening, aperient, sudorific, anodyne, and other properties, it cures the worst forms of disease as they exist, in the most sickly climates of the world, and where the poisonous miasma is so thick that you may almost "cut with a knife," why not cure, with the great ease it does, all sorts of fevers of the milder type, in our own climate? (Harrish, Dysentery, Fever and Ague, Bilious Fever, Rheumatism, etc.) But the milder and weaker forms as they exist in the most sickly climates, it will readily cure the less as they prevail among us.

DOMESTIC PURPOSES.
Every family should be provided with a bottle of RADWAY'S READY RELIEF. One bottle costs only 50 cents, and a bottle can be used for various purposes, with the assurance of doing more permanent good than one hundred dollars expended for other medicines and medical prescriptions. If suddenly seized with sickness, the use of the Relief will instantly arrest the disease, and afford immediate ease to the patient.

TEN YEARS' RHEUMATISM CURED
by rubbing the Spine with Radway's Ready Relief.
Robert Ely, Esq., aged sixty, had been afflicted with Rheumatism for ten years. For the past twelve months he was confined to his room, perfectly helpless. His limbs were distorted, and his hands cramped; his hands cramped, so that he could neither move his fingers nor open nor shut his hands; rheumatic pain ran riot all over his body; moving him from his bed involved the most intense suffering. He was induced to have his spine rubbed one hour, morning and night, with Radway's Ready Relief. The first rubbing gave him some relief, and after the second, a few days' rest, one month's application of the Relief, and a few doses of Radway's Pills cured him. He is now a well and hearty man, and uses the Relief and Pills occasionally only.

A FAMILY MEDICINE
As a family medicine, it is the most useful remedy known to the world. If seized with any acute disease, or attacked with any malignant disease, its use will quickly cure the patient and protect the system against attacks. In a few minutes after the application of the Relief, the patient, or child, or its administration internally, the patient, seized with the most excruciating Pains, Aches, Cramps, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Gout, Lumbago, Sciatica, Cholera, Spasms, Sore Throat, Influenza, Diphtheria, Congestion or Inflammation, will enjoy ease and comfort.

IMPORTANT! To Families and Invalids residing in sparsely settled districts where it is difficult to secure the services of a physician, Radway's Ready Relief is invaluable. It can be used with positive assurance, and doing good in all cases where pain or discomfort is experienced, or all cases seized with Influenza, Diphtheria, Sore Throat, Bad Coughs, Hoarseness, Biliousness, Colic, Indigestion, or the Bowels, Stomach, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, or with Croup, Quinsy, Fever and Ague, or with Neuralgia, Headache, Tic Doloré, Toothache, Earache, or with Lumbago, Pain in the Back, or Rheumatism, or with Burns, Scalds, or Bruises, or Dysentery, or with Burns, Scalds, or Bruises, or with Strains, Cramps, or Spasms. The application of Radway's Ready Relief will cure you of the worst of these complaints in a few hours.

RHEUMATISM.—This painful disease has baffled the most skillful physicians, and has been the most difficult of diseases to treat—yet RADWAY'S READY RELIEF has never failed in affording immediate relief to the sufferer; and in an all cases of Acute Rheumatism, Nervous Rheumatism, to effect a permanent cure. (In Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, RADWAY'S CLEANSING SYRUP, called for by the name of "Radway's Blood Purifier," should be taken as an adjunct with the Ready Relief.)

THE PROPRIETOR OF PICKETTS' WASHING AND CLEANSING CRYSTAL, deems it his duty to caution the public against cheap imitations of this highly celebrated Washing Crystal, which is the most valuable compound extant. It is free from Lime, Vaseline, and all other deadly mixtures, and is so common to be found among washing compounds. Try Picketts' Washing Crystal, if you want ease, comfort, and economy in washing, which washes every article, and has rapid results.

It will be found valuable for the following domestic purposes, viz.—It washes all fine things, such as Muslin, Crotchet Work, Baby Linen, etc., cleaning Sponges, Combs, and Brushes, and removing all grease, dirt, and grease from Carpets, Cloth, Flannel, &c. It makes Hard Water Soft, and may be used with good effect in Baths, as it immediately removes all condensed perspiration from the skin. A small quantity should also be used in the foot bath. It forms a cooling and cleansing wash for the head, and dissolving a teaspoonful of the Crystal in a quart of water, and using it as a wash, will remove all scales of a pint of water; and for cleansing the Mouth, Teeth, and Gums, it is quite a luxury, by adding a teaspoonful to a number of water. It is equally useful in removing all scales, and unlike other preparations, at the same time preserves the fabric. It contains nothing injurious to life. A child eating it by mistake, will be benefited by it.

If you have not used this Cleansing Crystal, lose no time in obtaining it. Nothing has ever been introduced into this country which has effected so great a wonderful change upon Washing Days. It saves your money—saves your clothes—saves your money; and it does not injure the most delicate texture of the fabric. Picketts' Cleansing Crystal makes a pleasure, reduces the cost of fuel, the wear and tear of labor, and improves every article washed. For Linens, and heavy washes, it cannot be surpassed; for Laces, and fine fabrics, it is unequalled. It does not injure the color of Prints, but strengthens and improves them—by its use they retain their original brilliancy. Flannels become white and soft like new. White things are much improved, and keep their color, even if put by for months. Thousands of Families made happy! No misery on a Washing Day, with Picketts' Cleansing Crystal.
