"COME THIS WAY, FATHER."

During a short visit to the sea shore of our State, some two years since, with a party of friends; it was proposed one bright afternoon that we should go down the harbor on a fishing excursion. We accordingly started, and after sailing about three miles, a young lady of the company declined going further, and requested us to land her on one of the small islands in the harbor, where she proposed to stay until our return. My little boy, then about four years old, preferred remaining with her. Accordingly we left them, and proceeded about six miles further. We remained out much longer than we intended, and as night approached a thick fog set in from the sea, entirely obscuring us. Without compass, and not knowing the right direction to steer, we groped our way along for some hours, until we discovered the breaking surf of one of the islands, but were at a loss to know which one of them. I stood up in the stern of the boat where I had been steering, and shouted with all my strength. I listened a moment and heard through the thick fog, and above the breaking of the surf, the sweet voice of my boy calling, "Come this way, Father—steer straight for me—I'm waiting for you!" We steered by that sound, and soon my little boy leaped into my arms with joy saying, "I knew you would hear me, father!" and nestled to sleep on my bosom. The child and the maiden are both sleeping now. They died in two short weeks after the period I refer to, with hardly an interval of time between their deaths. Now, when tossed upon the rough sea of life, without compass or guide, enveloped in fog and surrounded by rocks, I seem to hear the sound of that cherub voice calling from the bright shore, "Come this way, Father! steer straight for me!" When oppressed with sadness, I take my way to our quiet cemetery, and still, as I stand by one little mound, the same musical voice echoes from thence, "Come this way, Father!—I'm waiting for thee!"

boys, after the first wrong step, how easy it is to take the second, and the third! Once during Nelson's progress in the downward road, God spoke to him so plainly, so earnestly, that he could not close his ear, as he had done to the still small voice. Did he care then? "Nelson, wasn't that a good sermon?" "Yes, good enough." "How can you be so indifferent! See here, my friend, do you know that we have lived,—you and I,—twenty-one years just for ourselves and the world; and I am resolved for my part, to begin now to live for God!" Nelson laughed a short, careless laugh. "Isn't it wonderful! such pardon for such sinners as we! What sad lives we have led, Nelson!" "Oh, I don't care! don't give a fellow a second sermon, Tom!—good night."

The same old school-boy pride, grown and strengthened, causing him to profess that he cared for none of these things. My young friends, this was worst of all! It is a terrible thing to say "I don't care" to God!—to refuse to hear his kind, forgiving voice, to turn away from his loving hand out-reached to us so long, to close our hearts to the sweet sunlight of his love and the tender mercy of his salvation!

Dear boys and girls, will you learn from this sad history, not to say,—in things ever so small, "I don't care," but to be ashamed of showing regret for what is wrong or interest in what is right! This life is too wonderful, there is too much to care for, too much that is noble and worthy, God has given us each too great a work to do by day and little by little, for any of us to learn the habit of saying "I don't care."

GARIBALDI'S WIFE. The story of Garibaldi's wooing is thus:—He was one day sitting in the cabin of a sloop on the lake of Santa Catharina, and looking towards the shore, when suddenly he saw, at a farm-house situated on a neighboring hill, three or four girls busily engaged in domestic duties. They were all remarkably beautiful, but one in particular arrested his attention for her uncommon grace and loveliness. He was still watching them when he received an order to go on shore. Immediately on landing, he directed his steps to the house. He was admitted by the owner, whom he happened to know slightly, having met him once before.

The impulse which had prompted him to go to the house was to address the girl he had so admired. On seeing her, he immediately besought her to become his wife. The girl, it seems, conceived an affection as warm and sudden as he had felt for her; and after the lapse of a few short days they were man and wife. The surname of this lovely Brazilian girl of the province of Santa Catharina, who became, under such peculiarly romantic circumstances, the wife of Garibaldi, has never been revealed. In all the biographies of our hero she is alone mentioned by her Christian name of Anita. She seems to have been a brunette of a rich, warm complexion, with black and piercing eyes; of a beautifully rounded figure, and a sort of queenly majesty of deportment; active, daring, high-spirited, and in every respect worthy of being the companion for life of such a man as Garibaldi. Her courage was remarkable. A short time after their marriage she went through an engagement at sea, with her husband, refusing to go ashore, and during the fight she would stay no where but on deck, where she wielded a cartone and cheered the men. In the heat of the battle she was standing on deck flourishing a sabre, and inspiring the men to deeds of valor, when she was knocked down by the wind of a cannon ball that had killed two men standing close by her side. Garibaldi was springing forward to her side, thinking he would find her a corpse, when she arose to her feet covered with the blood of the men who had fallen close to her, but quite unharmed. He begged her to go below, and remain there until the action was over. "I will go below," was her reply, but only to drive out the sneaking cowards who are sneaking their way for only three seconds before she had seen three men leave the deck, and hurry rapidly down the hatchway, so as to escape out of danger of the storm of bullets that was sweeping the deck. And, going below, she immediately after re-appeared, driving before her the three men, overcome with shame, that they should have been surpassed in courage by a woman. She accompanied her husband in all his undertakings, and died while flying with him from the Austrians.—California.

THE UNCUT DIAMOND. On a voyage homeward from India, a child was found playing in the cabin with what appeared to be pebbles. On being asked where she got them, she replied, "From father's little box." A closer examination proved that the supposed pebbles were uncut diamonds of great value. Diamonds in the rough do not make a very attractive appearance. They do not sparkle, and yet they have great value. Has not the reader seen some uncut diamonds among his acquaintances? There is Mr. X.—His hand when you take it is almost as hard as the hoofs of the oxen who are his companions, and he works so many long days of the year. His boots are very heavy, and have holes in them on their specimens of the different soils on his farm and the vicinity. A wag once suggested, when a professor of agricultural chemistry sent to that part of the country for specimens of soil for analysis, that Mr. X.'s boots should be sent to the professor. His movements are by no means characterized by grace and in general his appearance is somewhat removed from the ornamental. And yet, if there was a poor man or woman in the township in trouble, Mr. X. seemed to have an instinctive knowledge of it, and the heavy boots might be seen stamping along towards the scene of trouble, bearing along a somewhat uncouth boot, but with it as warm a heart as ever beat in a human bosom. His visits were always welcome. They were never visits of ceremony and more verbal condolence. On certain occasions, owing to the state of the country, there was a falling off in the receipts of the missionary Society, and there was danger that the schools for heathen children would be disbanded, and some of the missionaries recalled. A collector called on Mr. X. It was not necessary that he should state the facts of the case. "I have been expecting you for some time," said Mr. X. "This thing ought to be attended to, for a torn coat or an imperfect lesson; but it was a great deal to get the habit of saying it to every thing, as Nelson did. What a sad passport for a boy to carry with him through life! Nelson did not intend to make it his; but it grew upon him day by day. A failure at school, a wrong action, a father's reproof, a mother's tender counsel, all received the same indifferent "I don't care!" It was said only in pride at first, because he thought it childish to show that he cared for such things; but soon it came to be true, and there seemed to be nothing in all this great and wondrous life that he did care for. "Nelson, how is it that Mr. Grove's son has gone ahead of you so? He is going to enter college in the spring, I hear; and he is not as good a scholar as you when he came here." "I don't care! let him go to college, if he wants to! I'm tired of study, for my part, and I'd rather go into business!" And so, after a while, he went into a store, saying "I don't care" to all of the advantages of a finished education. The same "I don't care" caused him to lose his situation, and he was obliged to seek another. When evil companions came in his way, he said "I don't care" to the warnings of conscience and the good lessons of his early years, and began to follow in the broad road to destruction. "I don't care! it won't do any harm," was his excuse for the first glass of intoxicating drink; and oh,
