THE RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCER.

Miscellaneous.

THE OUTCAST RECLAIMED.

A volley of awful profaneness in the tone of a child's voice arrested our attention and thrilled our blood as we were passing down a side street at the south end a few weeks ago, and, on turning toward the sound, we discovered a little Irish boy, smeared with street filth, and looking like a locomotive bundle of rags, who was pouring out his wrath against another boy who had displeased him in some way that did not make itself immediately obvious. Despite his dirty and neglected condition, there was something about his eye that revealed the presence of unusual intellect, and there was a kind of grotesqueness and originality even in his fearful cursing which confirmed the promise of his eye, and declared him capable of a nobler life. Dubious of any success in our attempt, and feeling strongly desirous, if possible, of doing something to call forth his confidence, and put him in a way of better things, we approached him for a parley. As soon as he saw our intention he seemed to anticipate reproof, and looked as if he were summoning all his stock of natural and acquired sauciness to his help for resistance ; so we changed our method of attack, in hope to put him off his guard,

"Do you know if a gentleman by the name of O'-Doherty lives in this neighborhood, my lad ?" "Never heard of no such man."

⁵⁴ He is a fine, large man, and usually smokes a pipe, and I think has a little boy named Pat."

"Heaps on 'em here has that name. That's my name."

"Your name isn't St. Patrick, is it ?" "Niver a bit of a saint I'm sure."

" And what is a saint, do you think ?"

"And sure, a saint, I expect, is a mighty fine kind of a jintleman, and, may be, better than a praste."

"You mean he don't swear, I suppose ?"

"Well, you see, Johnny stole my kite, and he made me swear, but I don't do it no ways common." "What did you say your name was beside Pat ?" "I didn't say-but it's Maloney." "Your father is dead, isn't he ?"

"Yes, I 'spect so."

"And where's your mother ?" "She's to South Boston." (Meaning in the House of Correction.)

" For how long ?"

" For six months."

"And who takes care of you ?"

" I take care of myself." " How old are you ?"

AN EAST INDIAN WEDDING.

A Catholic missionary in East India says :--"A few days ago I blessed a marriage in which great pomp was displayed, and I will describe the festival to you, that you may have an idea of what takes place on such occasions, for the same ceremonial is always scrupulously observed. Indeed, every action of an Indian's life from the cradle to the grave is irrevocably ordered by custom.

"The solemnity I am speaking of now is called here, 'a grand marriage.' My Christians are generally too poor to have to do with any but 'little marriages,' which are performed very quietly, though with some attendant circumstances that perhaps de serve a slight notice.

"A remarkable peculiarity, and one that belongs to both kinds of marriage, is that the bride and bridegroom do not know each other, do not even see or speak to each other, until it is too late to draw back. This is the decision of custom, and has its good and bad side, like many other things in the world. 'Why have you come here?' I asked the other day of a little girl hardly twelve years old, who was led into church. 'My father said I was to be married, so I came,' she replied. A few hours later arrived the young man, pale, exhausted, and writhing in the grasp of pangs unutterable. Begging me to serve him first in the quality of physician, he told me his story : 'I had just done dinner and was going out to my palm-trees, when my father told me to go to the church and be married; so I took my bath of oil immediately, which interfered with my digestion and caused my illness.'

"The bath of oil is a necessary preliminary on these occasions. That over, the bridegroom arrays himself in his finest garments. Two cloths, about one foot three inches wide, and four or five times as long, ornamented with a fringe, compose his costume ; one covers his loins and the other is wrapped around him; a red kerchief is rolled about his head, and three pendants, nearly two inches long, and wide in proportion, adorn each ear. If he is too poor to own these jewels, he borrows them of his neighbors, and thus apparelled, goes to the church and presents himself before the sonami (missionary.)

"The maiden also lavishes oil or butter upon her toilet, but on the wedding day she is so completely swathed in ten or eleven yards of cloth that form her raiment, that neither her jewels nor her face can be distinguished. Not only is she invisible, but she is supposed to see nothing herself, and when she wishes to change her place, the person who accompanies her, often a poor old woman hardly able to stand, leads her by clasping her around the waist. I have sometimes beheld the singular spectacle of a score of little girls from twelve to fifteen years of age, muffled in cloth and crouched against the walls of the church, repeating their prayers to satiety as they waited for me to come and hear them recite."

DON'T JUDGE BY APPEARANCES.

Some years ago there arrived at the hotel erected near the Niagara Falls an odd looking man, whose appearance and deportment were quite in contrast with the crowds of well-dressed and polished figures which adorned the celebrated resort. He seemed just to have sprung from the woods ; his dress, which was made of leather, stood dreadfully in need of repair, apparently not having felt the touch of a needlewoman for many a long month. A worn out blanket, that might have served for a bed, was buckled to his shoulders; a large knife hung on one side, "My little friend, tell me now honestly, are you | balanced by a long, rusty tin box on the other, and

Try Pickstone's Washing Crystal, if you want ease, comfort, and economy in washing, which washes every thing, and has rapid sale. It will be found invaluable for the following domestic purposes, viz. -- It washes all fine things, such as Muslim Luce, Crotchet Work, Baby Linen, &c,; cleaning Sponges, Combs, and Brushes; removing stains from the hands, and grease from Carpets, Cloth, Flannel, &c. It makes Hard Water Soft, and may be used with good effect in Baths, as it immediately removes all condensed perspiration from the skin. A small quantity should also be used in the foot pan. . It forms a cooling and cleansing wash for the head, by dissolving a teasphonful of the Crystal in a quarter of a pint of water ; and for cleansing the Mouth, Teeth, and Gums, it is quite a luxury, by adding a teaspoonful to a tumbler of water. It renders linen beautifully white, and nulike other preparations, at the same time preserves the fabrie. It contains nothing injurious to life, A child eatng it by mistake, will not be injured.

If you have not used this Cleansing Crystal, lose no time in obtaining it. Nothing has over been introduced into this country which has effected such a wonderful shange upon Washing Days. conversion. Boys in Sabbath-schools in every region are pledged against the triplet of abominations, -- tobacco, strong drink, and profane swearing. Our common schools are being expurgated, and committees are coming to the decision that teachers who have not sufficient self-control to drop tobacco are not duly qualified to control our youth.

3. The common use of tobacco is now viewed by men of sense as an immorality or sin. Men there are, no doubt, who still discover a terrific sin in some tenet of a religious creed, who discover no sin in the most abject slavery to this polsonous drug, though it may waste time, waste money, health and life, and, by fair construction, be shown to violate every commandment in the decalogue !

4. Much is said of the disgraceful culture in the Connecticut valley. Bad as it may have been, remonstrance from many quarters has tended to bridle the cupidity of tobacco-growers there. Had it not, all the deacons and all the churches might have gone pell-mell into this " paying business."

5. This habit is seen to be a prolific source of infldelity. Its victim becomes constitutionally a sensualist. He nourishes his animal at the expense of his spiritual nature, and his dreamy stupefaction inclines him to skepticism. It is said that Germans smoke, and smoke incessantly without injury. Yes, we say, Germans smoke, and hence German emigrants are not converted. A German thoroughly enslaved to his pipe is as likely to be converted as an Egyptian mummy

6. It is beginning to be seen that narcoties are doing much to obstruct the conversion of the world. The idea that the heathen are to be saved in their sins rather than from their sins ; the idea that China | stones. crushed to the earth with English opium; the idea that Turkey and Mexico, all enveloped in tobacco fumes; the idea that our towns and cities, our ten thousand villages reeking in rom and tobacco are to be evangelized whilst all betokens the very reverseis simply ridiculous.

hosband was a rumseller. He came to the meetings and became anxious for life eternal. He asked for prayers. Bro. Moody said, "Hold on. It is no use to pray for you, brother, unless you quit sin. Can you give up rumselling ?"

It was his business-he had his family to support and so on, just as convicted rumsellers always. talk, and he went away from the meeting as he came, wanting Christ and unwilling to turn out the devil. The next day Bro. Moody and his pastor went to see him at his saloon, got him into the back-room with his wife, and told him now was the time to settle the question. He hesitated-wanted time to turn his business. "Turn your business into the street; quit Satan altogether, and not go hunting a substitute." Stil he hesitated; when Bro M. says, " Let us discuss this question on our knees, whether whiskey or the Lord Jehovah shall be king of this house," and down they went, wife, rumseller, pastor, and the Chicago layman, to ask God what to do. Before the prayer was over the runseller cried out, "I surrender ! I surrender! whiskey and all? Yes, whiskey and all !" They rose from their knees; the rumseller led the way into the saloon, and they proceeded to take Satan by the neck in every bottle on the shelves, till cider, champagne, rum, gin, and whiskey, of every mixture and name, mingled their powers and charms in one red, fiery stream along the gutter. It was the Maine law voluntarily enforced by the higher law. Zaccheus' fellow-callectors were not more surprised at his sudden generosity to the poor, than were the dry customers of this saloon, when they were referred for their dram to the broken bottles by the carb-

The old man reclaimed is happy and strong in the Lord, but who shall say what perils are thick in the pathway of such a convert? The habits and associates of tifty years to grapple and conquer! Who but the Lord Jehovah can keep him from falling.
