THE ALLEGED DECADENCE OF BRITAIN. This has been a favorite topic with Continental and American writers, and the proofs they adduce of the desired result are numerous, and, to them, cogent. Bonaparte thought he had ruined perfide Albion by his Continental system, when that system, in t'opinion of a Prussian Statesman, was the means of building up British prosperity. The ruin, if ruin there was, was caused more by her own orders in council than by Napoleon's exclusion, which had a good deal to do with his own ruin. He made himself a dam or dike to obstruct the natural course of commerce, and commerce burst the dike. In 1820. and again in 1826, Britain was ruined in the opinion The era of grass growing in the streets of her chief cities was supposed to have commenced; nay, her farmers themselves were clear that nothing but present distress and prospective ruin stared them in the face. And all this be it observed, was in the palmy day's of protection, and probably in a measure owing to that protection. The discouraged and failing manufacturers and merchants saw that Britain might become the workshop of the world, and obtain the productions of the world in exchange for their manu- head of loyal Mexicans, and fight for his crown. factures; but the landed proprietors stood between the mannfacturers, and, as there appeared no possibility of overcoming this great obstacle, starvation, emigration, or rebellion seemed the only alternatives. Many died from insufficient nutrition, or in other words starvation; many emigrated; and a few tried rebellion with disastrous results to themselves: but the united pressure of the English and Scotch Radicals and the Irish Roman Catholics was too great even for a House of Commons, constituted as that of Britain then was, and the repeal of the Test and Corporation Acts, Catholic emancipation, and the Reform Bill, were conceded by or extorted from the privileged classes in rapid succession. A foundation thus being laid for popular action, the corn-laws, and British Parliament. nearly all kinds of protection were overthrown, and this bursting of the bonds of trade and commerce, opened a career of unparalleled prosperity to Britain, which has doubled the size of her cities, and greatly increased the rental of her lands. No interest has the article which appeared in the official journal of suffered, whilst nearly all have wonderfully benefitted. Rome, denying the statement made by the Holy and the population of England and Scotland has greatly increased. Ireland would, doubtless, have shared in the same prosperity, for which the door was if the Canadas were to be given up by Great Britain, thrown wide open to her, but for a disturbing and it was better that they should fall into the hands of depressing influence to which we shall not further the United States than into those of the Fenians. allude, than to say that in the North, where that in- With this explanation the minister of the United fluence was not strong, the prosperity closely kept to or ignored by Pitt, namely, a policy of non-interference with other countries. Now that Britain was living by her trade with all nations, and her fleets covered every sea, nothing could be more disastrous to her than war, and the thousand millions sterling of war debt incurred in carrying out Pitt's policy of interference was such a millstone around the British neck, that, like a burned child, she dreaded the fire. In former times it was the custom to predicate Britain's decadence upon her propensity for meddling with everything and everybody and there was, if must be confessed, some color for such predictions. Latterly, the prophets of evil have taken precisely the opposite ground, and they loudly proclain that Britain has abdicated her place as a first-class state, spectfully invited to attend. that she is confessedly no longer a European power, Asiatic power, that she inspires respect nowhere, at 8 o'clock. much less fear, and that she has sunk down to the position she so long deserved of an object of pity and contempt. Such sentiments, more or less strongly expressed, are not uncommon in American oratory condemn in England, and which they aver has day, Dec. 31st, at 61 o'clock, P. LA'MERT, of 87 Bedford Square, London, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons of England; Doctor of Me-dicine of the University of Rostock, &c., begs to inform his Patients, and others seeking confidential Medical Advice, that he has arrived in St. John, on a Professional visit, and may be consulted on all cases of Nervous and Physical Debility, and Local or Constitutional Weakness, daily, for a limited period only, at 182 St. James' Street, corner of Wentworth street,) St. John. The great experience derived by Dr. L. La'Mert both. whilst assisting Dr. Samuel La'Mert, of London, in his extensive Practice, and in the various Hospitals of Continental Europe, affords an ample guarantee, to those seeking advice, of being under the care of a legally qualified Practitioner. Dr. L. La'Mert's name is to be found in the 'Medical Register,' published under the Authority of the Medical Council of Great Britain, and is, consequently, not to be classed with the names in many cases assumed of a horde of adventurers, who, through the public press seek to impose upon the credulous and unwary, by the publication of pretended qualifications and the advocacy of specifies, that are never beneficial, and in most cases positively
